DRAINAGE FLOW CUT BY LANDIS; RELIEF FORCED

Must Spend Millions for Sewage Plants.

Chicago within a few years must have a sewage treatment system costing between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000, according to sanitary district estimates.

A decision given by Judge Landis in the federal court yesterday afternoon makes the foregoing prospect practically sure. The decision—which, of course, will be appealed—enjoins the sanitary district, which is Chicago, from withdrawing more than 250,000 cubic feet of water per minute from Lake Michigan. More than twice that amount is withdrawn now to dilute the city's sewage and carry it away from the lake and down the Chicago river and drainage canal.

District Has Expected It.

The decision makes practically certain the growing belief that the drainage channel, now in operation for twenty years, cannot longer be depended on solely as a means of disposing of the city's waste.

For several years district officials have been preeparing against the emergency in which they are placed by the decision. The district will appeal the case to the United States Supreme court at once, but in the meantime they will continue to build activated sludge plants as rapidly as possible, so that if eventually the highest courts sustain Judge Landis their building program will be so far advanced that the danger to health will be vastly minimized.

Carrying Out Plan.

Carrying out this policy, construction of sewage treatment plants at the stockyards and at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street will be begun this year. An activated sludge plant to care for the sewage of the far west side is now nearing completion, and experimental plants are being planned for the north branch of the Chicago river. By the time the program is completed no city in the world will have so comprehensive a system of modern scientific sewage treatment plants as will be found in Chicago.

Judge Landis admitted that the health of the city probably would be imperiled if his order became effective immediately, and accordingly he directed that the decree, which follows twelve years of litigation between the officials of the district and the war department, be held in abeyance until sixty days after the United States Supreme court convenes in October.

Held Up Action During War.

This was done by the jurist to allow his order to be passed upon by all of the higher courts. A writ of supersedeas may be obtained.

"This is a very important case, one that effects millions of people," said Judge Landis after he had made the decision. "I did not wish to enter an order while we were engaged in war for fear that international complications might ensue.

"According to the contentions of the government the change in flow of the water of Lake Michigan has lowered the level of all of the great lakes except Lake Superior. A navigable body of water must be protected from impairment, and I have been guided by that principle in reaching this decision.

"I regret that it is necessary for me to take this action, but the law governing navigable bodies of water must be upheld. To allow the district officials every opportunity for relief I shall not make the order effective until sixty days after the opening of the Supreme court in October, to allow them to obtain a writ of supersedeas until the case can be decided finally in the higher court."

See Danger of Disease.

That the order is fraught with danger from disease to the people of Chicago and the surrounding district was the assertion of attorneys for the sanitary district.

"If this order were made effective today Chicago and all neighboring towns would be swept by a typhoid fever epidemic, resulting from contaminated water," Attorney C. Arch Williams said.

Would Cost District $150,000,000.

"The enforcement of the order will cost the district $150,000,000 to build additional sewage disposal stations. Their construction would extend over a period of two years.

"By that time there may be few people left in the district if the epidemic gets full swing. We hope to have the

DEMOCRATS FOR GLASS PLANK ON NATIONS' LEAGUE?

Cummings Predicts a Wilson Victory.

San Francisco, Cal., June 19.—Homer S. Cummings, chairman of the Democratic national committee, declared today that the Democratic platform would indorse President Wilson's course regarding the league of nations by adopting the league plank incorporated in the Virginia platform, which the president already has approved.

This plank was drawn by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who is being named in some quarters as the convention's probable nominee.

The president, Mr. Cummings said, at all times had agreeed to any suggestions that would expand or develop the league provisions, and his reason for opposition to some proposed reservations was that they vitiated the document.

Calls the G. O. P. Dishonest.

"The stand of the Republican party on the league was a dishonest statement," Mr. Cummings said, "a premeditated and calculated attempt to satisfy irreconcilables. At no point did it suggest ratification of the league treaty. It was made up of vague promises of some other kind of league. I feel that the Republican position will not deceive any one."

Cummings also declared that, while the Republican convention had not disposed of the issue, the party candidate himself already had voted for a league with reservations.

Up to Hoover's Conscience.

Concerning Herbert Hoover's statement that he was in accord with Senator Harding's candidacy, Mr. Cummings said that was a matter Mr. Hoover would have to fight out with his own conscience.

"I consider it a rather sad episode in American politics," he added.

Full hearings on all coming issues will be held by the resolutions committee, it was announced today.

McAdoo Man for Palmer.

Ray T. Baker, director of the mint, and a close friend of William G. McAdoo, announced today that he would support Attorney General Palmer, now that his first choice had withdrawn from the Democratic race. His announcement was made after receipt of a telegram from Mr. McAdoo, saying he would not be a candidate for the nomination.

SECOND FIDDLE NOT FOR COX, HE INFORMS OHIO

Dayton, O., June 19.—Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio is not a candidate for the Democratic nomination for vice president. He made this emphatic declaration here today at his country home, "Trail's End," in responding to felicitations of United States Senator Pomerene and others at the big community demonstration tendered him prior to Ohio's delegation and boosters leaving for San Francisco.

"I urge upon you, Pilgrims, that I am not a candidate for the second place," the governor declared. "I am not fitted for the duties devolving upon a vice president."

SENATOR REED "HOME FOLKS" DELEGATE CHOICE

Kansas City, Mo., June 19.—[Special.]—Senator James A. Reed was reelected unanimously today by the Jackson county delegation to the Democratic state convention as Fifth district delegate to the national convention. The action followed the refusal of the state convention in April to indorse the Missouri senator as a district delegate and recommended that the local delegation nominate another person.

The meeting of the delegation today was to pave the way for Reed to make a fight in San Francisco for a seat in the national convention.

Here's Chance to Buy Harding's Brewery Stock

Washington, D. C., June 19.—[Special.]—It's out at last, Senator Harding confessed today. He is the owner of three shares of stock in a brewery. He has had it for a long time and would be glad to sell it cheap to any near beer promoter.

Senator Harding's "confession" was prompted by charges of the "drys" that he owned extensive holdings in the brewing industry. He said he purchased three shares of stock a long time ago in the Marion Brewing company.

The concern hasn't been doing a very thriving business lately and the stock isn't worth much. His investment in brewery stock, he explained, was in line with his practice of taking an interest in all industries in his home town.

FIRST STEEL PLANE ARRIVES; 5 PASSENGERS

Flies from Buffalo in Four Hours.

Just as the shadows were settling down on the aerial mail flying field in Maywood last night the roar of a deep-throated motor was heard in the east. A mechanic tossed out two white flares. A gasoline "T" was ignited.

A few seconds later a monster Jonker all steel monoplane dived for the field and landed. Five passengers—one of them weighing 280 pounds—stepped out.

The party included John M. Larsen, two of his crew, and two of his friends. Larsen himself is the heavyweight. They left Buffalo, N. Y., at 5:15 p. m. and flew straight across the country and the lakes to Chicago without a stop.

Made Flight in Four Hours.

They landed at 9:10, making the nonstop flight in slightly less than four hours, and, according to Mr. Larsen, "loafed along at 1,250 r. p. m. at that." The motor turns up 1,450 revolutions a minute when the throttle is wide open. At "1,250" the ship flies 100 miles an hour, and at "1,450" the speed is increased to 135. The air line distance from Buffalo to Chicago is approximately 430 miles.

Mr. Larsen went to Europe a year ago to sell American planes. There he found what he calls "real ships," planes that, he says, outclass American aircraft as the Liberty motor outclasses the old time two cylinder motor. Mr. Larsen bought the entire American rights on the Jonker plane, and may manufacture them in Chicago. He believes that Chicago will be the center of American aviation.

Can Stay in Air Fifteen Hours.

The plane measures 47 feet from tip to tip, has a six cylinder German V. N. W. 185 horsepower motor, and can remain in the air fifteen hours continuously. During the war the boche used the ship with great success. American aviators said there was only one vulnerable spot on the entire ship, and that spot was only 18 inches long and 4 inches wide.

Yesterday marked the Jonker's first Chicago appearance. The plane will remain here until early Tuesday morning.

A Former Chicagoan.

Mr. Larsen, who is former head of the Larsen Ice Machine company of Chicago, is on his way to attend a wedding in Omaha. His fellow passengers were C. F. Redden, general sales manager of the Aero Marine Plane and Motor company of New York; E. V. Stratton, an Albany business man, and the two pilots, Bert Acosta and Wallie Bugh. The plane also carried 350 pounds of baggage.

"Our complete flying time from Central Park, Long Island, was eight and a half hours," said Mr. Redden. "We left there Friday morning and would have reached Chicago Friday night, but at Utica we ran into a violent storm and had to turn back to Albany.

Run Into Second Storm.

"We left Albany at 10:15 this morning and reached Buffalo three and a half hours later. We would have reached Chicago half an hour earlier, but we ran into another storm that carried us up into Canada and over a portion of Lake Huron."

Mr. Larsen will leave here Tuesday morning for Omaha, to attend the wedding there on Wednesday of the daughter of his lifelong friend, Thomas J. O'Brien. Miss Carita O'Brien is to be married to John Markell of Lincoln, Neb. Following the wedding, Mr. Larsen plans to make a nonstop trip from Omaha to New York City.

NEW YORK AMERICA'S AIR PORT.

New York, June 19.—New York city's first landing for seaplanes was formally opened on the Hudson river front this afternoon. Rear Admiral John H. Glennon, in command of the 3d naval district, told 3,000 spectators the new air port "may become the official landing place for intercourse with all the world."

Report Tells Massacre in an American School

LONDON, June 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—A Constantinople message, bearing Friday's date, received by the Weekly Dispatch, reports that the American school near Ismid was entered by Nationalist troops of Mustapha Kemal Pasha. Civilian refugees there were murdered.

THE CHANGING WORLD

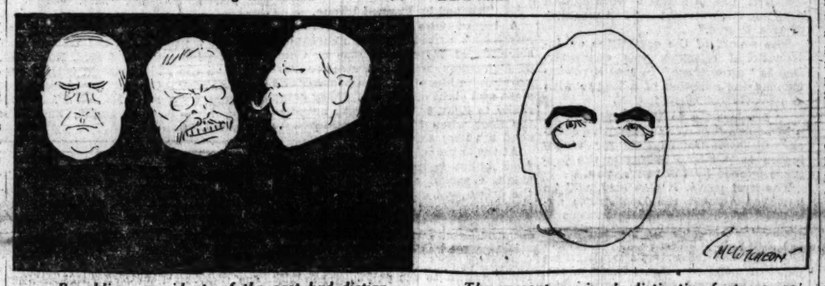
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A month ago Senator Harding's home in Ohio was of no interest to people.

But hereafter it will be surrounded by interested crowds and visiting delegations.

A month ago Senator Harding could enter a restaurant without attracting attention.

But now his entrance will draw every eye toward him.



Republican presidents of the past had distinctive features. McKinley's Napoleonic facade, Roosevelt's teeth, and Taft's genial obesity became famous in cartoons.

The present nominee's distinctive features are his tragedian eyebrows.

MULE DIES WHEN 6 YEAR LAWSUIT OVER HIM ENDS

Six years of suspense was too much for Lake county's celebrated mule. It dropped dead of astonishment yesterday when Judge C. C. Edwards of Waukegan finally settled six years' litigation between John R. Morris and the original owner, James F. Doyle, both of Deerfield.

Morris must give up possession of the mule, though dead, and pay Doyle $750—the equivalent of $10 a month—for the use of the mule for seventy-five months. Morris' attorney contended it cost $12 a month to board the mule, and therefore Doyle owed him $2 a month for seventy-five months, but the court couldn't stop to figure this out.

Morris was also ordered to pay the costs of one trial in the justice court and three hearings on appeal in the Circuit court, which will run into thousands of dollars.

Stock Owners' Rum Deal; to Get 900 Gallons Each

New York, June 19.—[Special.]—If the distribution of 36,000 gallons of rum by the Bacardi corporation of 267 Broadway, giving to each of its forty stockholders of record more than 900 gallons, is legal, then, some of the big dealers of the city say, there is nothing to prevent all of the whisky companies from flooding the country with the best brands. All that would be necessary would be to dissolve the corporation and divide the assets among the stockholders.

Harvard Friends Dead; Inquiries Being Made

Boston, Mass., June 19.—[Special.]—The sudden deaths of two Harvard students, residents of Fall River, and inseparable companions, are being investigated. The last to succumb was Eugene Raphael Cummings, aged 22, of 631 Middle street, Fall River, after taking poison. His suicide followed the death of his friend, Cyril B. Wilcox, aged 21, whose body was found in a gas filled room. According to the medical examiner, his death was accidental.

Landis Frees Man So He Can Welcome Stork

Federal Judge Landis yesterday ordered the release of Benjamin Matusas, 3301 South Morgan street, from the house of correction until the stork can deposit a parcel at his home. Matusas was arrested for having a "still" in his possession and was sentenced to serve six months' imprisonment. After the baby's birth Matusas will be returned to the bridewell.

W. C. T. U. PLANS TO GIVE WORLD IMPROVED RACE

Study of Sex Hygiene as First Step.

Positive that the same scientific methods used in successful stock raising should be applied in the propagation of the human race if any advance in its physical and mental status is to be achieved, the Evanston W. C. T. U. has announced its intention to work for an improved race—men and women.

Miss Epha Marshall, president of the organization, who issued the announcement yesterday, said that the national body had appropriated $10,000 a year to endow a chair of sexual hygiene at the University of Iowa.

Humanity Not Progressing.

"Humanity is not progressing in the matter of propagation," she said. "It is in fact retrograding. We are entirely neglecting the most vital problem of existence. Children are permitted to grow up in virtual ignorance. They marry, and there is no thought of the fundamental issues involved.

"If we are to advance toward the goal of physical and mental perfection, we must have knowledge of the functions of the body which are now regarded by the average parent as subjects taboo. How foolish that is. We must elevate mating to a science instead of an emotion."

Prohibition First Step.

It was necessary to adopt prohibition before the movement could be started successfully, Miss Marshall said. Liquor has always been a deterrent to the progress of humanity, she said.

The W. C. T. U. plans eventually to campaign for sex hygiene courses in all public and high schools.

Locked in Refrigerator Car for 18 Days; Lives

Dixon, Ill., June 19.—[Special.]—Locked in a refrigerator car loaded with wood pulp, without food or water for eighteen days, was the fate of Albert Campbell of Chicago, who was taken from the car at the Inland paper mill at Rock Falls yesterday. Campbell looked like a dead man and his clothes and shoes were covered with mildew.

The car was shipped from Windsor, Ont., about June 1. The seals had not been broken. It is thought the moisture from the wood pulp may have kept Campbell alive.

MRS. DICK, ASTOR WIDOW, TAKES UP RENO RESIDENCE

RENO, Nev., June 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick, widow of the late John Jacob Astor and wife of William A. Dick, New York broker, will arrive in Reno Monday and establish a residence here, having leased the home of Dr. F. B. Gregory.

Following the death of Astor on the Titanic Mrs. Astor came into possession of a $5,000,000 trust fund, which was relinquished on her marriage three years ago to Dick.

The Gregory home is one of the most pretentious in the state and has been recently remodeled and renovated in expectation of the tenant. Mrs. Dick was scheduled to arrive today, but her local agent said arrival had been delayed until Monday.

Another Cargo of Reds Leaves American Shores

New York, June 19.—A carload of aliens listed as undesirables and anarchists recently received from Oregon, California, Idaho and Illinois, were deported on outgoing vessels here today. About forty more from the same territory are to go next week, it was stated at Ellis Island.

BOOST PHONES FROM 5 TO 6 1-2C PER CITY CALL

Home and Business Line Rates Go Up.

Nickel telephone service will cease technically in Chicago on July 1, as a consequence of new rates granted the company yesterday by the public utilities commission.

The four party line coin box service, used by 73 per cent of the subscribers here, has hitherto cost 5 cents a day or a flat minimum guarantee of $1.50 a month. The new rate is 6½ cents a day or $1.95 guarantee a month. The company had petitioned for a guarantee of $2.40.

Other increases include the two party residence coin box. The existing rate is $3 a month or 10 cents a day. The new rate will be $3.75 a month, or 12½ cents a day, with two and one-half messages, additional messages to be 5 cents each.

Business Lines Boosted.

The two party coin box business line is increased from $3.75 to $4.50. The single coin box business line will be $6 a month or 20 cents a day with four messages; additional messages, 5 cents.

Citing operating expenses as the basis upon which the increases were granted, the commission's order reads:

"The annual revenue with present rates is approximately $26,033,964, and the annual operating expenses, exclusive of depreciation allowances, is approximately $20,285,076. This leaves a net annual balance available for depreciation and return of approximately $5,748,888.

Wage Boosts Cut Profits.

"Wage increases recently made in order to maintain plant and service have increased operating expenses approximately $3,280,416 per annum, reducing the probable net annual balance available for depreciation and return to approximately $2,468,472."

In summing up its decision the commission finds that "the schedule of rates now in effect is inadequate, that additional revenue is essential to the continued operation of the Chicago Telephone company's property and the maintenance of its service."

Sunny Regrets Poorer Service.

B. E. Sunny, president of the company, issued a statement which read in part:

"We do not pretend that the telephone service has been good during the last year or more. On the other hand, we have greatly regretted that the record for fine service over such a long period of years has been spoiled by war conditions, which deprived us of a number of experienced and skilful operators."

He points out that the company has been short operators, from 300 to 1,000, for more than a year, notwithstanding six increases in wages in the last three years. A seventh increase, made a few weeks ago, totaled $1,400,000 a year, the statement said.

TRAIN HITS AUTO; MAN, WIFE SLAIN, ANOTHER HURT

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Willey of Elgin were instantly killed and August Cedarholm, a boarder at the Willey home, was injured yesterday afternoon when their automobile was struck by a Chicago and Northwestern passenger train one mile north of Cary, Ill. Cedarholm was rushed to Chicago on the train and was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where physicians say he has small chance of recovery.

Mr. Willey was chief engineer of the Brethren Publishing company in Elgin. He and his wife were on their way to their summer home at Burton's Bridge, near Cary, when the accident occurred.

The railroad tracks run along a high embankment and the approach to the crossing is up a steep incline. Cedarholm, who was driving, was unable to see the train until the machine was on the tracks. The locomotive caught it squarely in the middle and tossed the victims nearly 100 feet.

Great 'L' Train Robbery Excites, but Doesn't Occur

Somebody telephoned the Desplaines street police station at 7 o'clock last night:

"An attempt will be made to hold up the Metropolitan elevated collection train at Canal street."

Desplaines street station dispatched twenty-four policemen. The detective bureau and the central detail sent some more. They rode around the loop with the train.

Nothing happened.

Wants Children Barefoot to Cut the Price of Shoes

East Orange, N. J., June 19.—A "barefoot children" movement was started here today by Charles R. Steele, a New York insurance broker, who hopes to help bring down the price of shoes. Dr. Edwin C. Broome, superintendent of schools, said he favored the plan.

RAISE GRANTED AS IMPERATIVE NEED TO LINES

"City Can Cut Rates by Yielding Share."

HOW FARES CHANGED

Fluctuations of street car fares during the last eleven months are shown by the following table:

AUG. 1, 1919—Fares increased from 5 cents to 7 cents after three day strike of car employes.

NOV. 26, 1919—Fares reduced to 6½ cents and 6 cents through the purchase of tickets at ten for 65 cents and fifty for $3.

DEC. 27, 1919—Ticket plan pronounced a failure and fares reduced to 6 cents by temporary order pending valuation of the lines.

JULY 1, 1920—Fares jump to 8 cents.

Street car fares will be increased to 8 cents for adults and 4 cents for children at 12:01 a. m. July 1.

The new fare, authorized yesterday by the public utilities commission, will be the highest on the surface lines since unification of the street car systems.

The necessity of rehabilitating the companies' credit, the increase of $6,000,000 in operating expenses incidental to the 15 cents an hour pay raise to all trainmen on June 1, increasing interest rates, and the prevalent high prices for materials and supplies actuated the utilities board in granting the companies' petition in full.

"Old Fare Confiscatory."

Rehabilitation necessary to good service, including the purchase of 200 cars, could not be provided under the present 6 cent fare, the commission found. The 6 cent fare is confiscatory, does not permit the company a reasonable income on its investment, and if continued would lead the companies into bankruptcy, in the opinion of the commissioners.

The board holds out one specific hope of a fare reduction in the near future. It suggests that the city commute its 55 per cent of the residue receipts, which under the traction contract ordinances go into the city treasury, and that the companies be permitted to keep this sum, amounting to about $2,000,000 annually, in return for a reduction in fares.

City Hall Shares Blame.

In this way the commission lays a part of the blame for the new fares at the door of the city administration. The commission's suggestion is couched as follows:

"If the city elects by appropriate action to commute its share of these earnings into a reduction of fares this order will be revised and a reduction of the rate of fare herein authorized will be made accordingly."

Final Order Yet to Come.

In the latest street car fare order—the fourth in eleven months—the 8 cent fare is authorized only "until the final order is entered in the case." This is expected some time in August, and should the 8 cent fare be too high the final order will correct the figure and the excess collected meanwhile will balance the company's losses under the 6 cent fare, in the commission's opinion.

Withholding until the final order the fixing of the value of the street car properties, the commission declares that not less than $10,500,000 is a fair annual return on the traction property used in the public service.

Present Fares Too Low.

"This is a return of 7 per cent upon a valuation of $150,000,000, of 7½ per cent on a valuation of about $140,000,000, and 8 per cent on a valuation of $131,000,000," the commission points out.

"The present rates of fare charged by petitioners will yield to petitioners for return upon the fair value of their property actually used in the public service less than $4,500,000. The rates of fare are insufficient and confiscatory, and to compel the petitioners to adhere to them will deprive them of their property without due process of law, in violation of the provisions of the state and federal constitutions.

"The rates hereinafter authorized are just and reasonable, and are no more than are necessary to enable the petitioners to earn a fair return upon the fair value of their property actually employed in the public service.

What 8 Cent Fare Means.

"If the applicants are permitted to put in force an 8 cent fare on July 1, 1920, the gross earnings for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1921, will be approximately $55,800,000.

"After deducting operating expenses, there will remain as revenue for the companies and the city approximately $13,200,000.

"Of this amount the companies, in accordance with the settlement ordinances, will receive $7,955,655, or five per cent upon the agreed capital account, aggregating $159,113,114. The companies also will receive 45 per cent of the remainder, amounting to approximately $2,360,000, making the amount received by them approximately $10,315,000. The city's share of these residue receipts will be approximately $2,885,000.

Can Buy New Cars Now.

"Evidence has been presented as to the inadequacy of the service rendered by the applicants. The commission heretofore has directed the applicants to provide 200 new cars. The applicants have represented that their financial condition has been so impaired by their recent low earnings that they are unable to obtain the money to purchase necessary equipment.

"The commission, in granting this relief at this time, has in mind the restoration of the financial credit of the companies. The applicants, having been granted the full measure of relief sought by them, will be expected and required to furnish to the people of Chicago adequate and efficient service."

"Old Rate Means Receiver."

In analyzing the probable effect of a continuance of the present 6 cent car fare the commission says:

"The gross earnings of the petitioners, if the present 6 cent fare is continued, will not be more than $47,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 1, 1921. After deducting the amount found necessary for operating expenses, there will remain approximately $4,400,000, and not more than $5,000,000, for return on the fair value of the property of petitioners used in public service.

"This is not only an inadequate return upon the fair value of the property of the petitioners but it is not sufficient to enable the petitioners to pay their bond interest.

"The inevitable result of the continuance of the 6 cent fare will be the appointment of receivers for the property, disruption of the unified service, and great injury not only to the companies but to the public."

Fixes 8 Cents as Rate.

The commission's order sets forth the new fare rates as follows:

"For a continuous trip in one general direction within the present or future limits of the city of Chicago over the street railways operated by the petitioners, and all extensions thereof [whether owned, leased, or operated by them], the sum of 8 cents for each passenger 12 years of age or over, and 4 cents for each passenger under 12 years of age. Provided, that children under 7 years of age, accompanied by a person paying fare, shall be permitted to ride free.

"It is further ordered that the provisions as to transfers, as they now exist, shall continue until the further order of the commission.

"The rates and charges herein authorized shall remain in effect until the entry of the final order in this proceeding. The commission reserves the right to order the discontinuance of the rates and charges herein authorized or to modify them at any time."

MAYOR MAY ACT

The commission's statement leaves little doubt that the final order in the Surface Lines case will permit a fare of 7 cents or more, and this is scheduled to cause a rush in the plans of Mayor Thompson's traction commission, which is planning "people's ownership and operation" of the car lines.

On Friday Chester E. Cleveland, chief traction counsel for the city, announced the enabling legislation necessary to provide for the creation of a commission of five popularly elected trustees, who are to have the management of the car lines under the mayor's plan, is practically complete.

If the city council approves, as it probably will, since few aldermen care to record themselves against the mayor's promise of a 5 cent fare, Mayor Thompson is expected to ask Gov. Lowden to call a special session of the legislature to pass the enabling legislation.

ACTION URGED BY CLUBS

Preceding the action of the state public utilities commission yesterday in granting increased fares to the street car lines and an increased rate to the telephone company eight Chicago business and civic organizations had presented a petition to the commission asking help for the utilities.

Members of the commission at the time said it was "unusual for the public to ask an increase in rates for a public utility, and therefore there must be excellent reasons" for this petition, adding that it would receive "due consideration."

Urge Boost in Rates.

The petition assured the commission that it would receive the support of business men in any decision increasing rates and declared "our belief is that the conditions now obtaining will become increasingly worse unless immediate relief is afforded." It urged that the commission at once grant temporary increases in rates where conditions do not permit of a permanent award and by intimation criticizes those who oppose "giving public utilities the revenue which under sound business practice they must have if they are to continue."

These Sign Petitions.

The petition was signed jointly by:

William Nelson Pelouze, Illinois Manufacturers' association.

Wyllys W. Baird, Chicago Association of Commerce.

Moses E. Greenebaum, Citizens' Association of Chicago.

Howard Elting, Commercial club.

Robert F. Carr, Industrial club of Chicago.

RAISES GRANTED TO SAVE UTILITIES, WILKERSON SAYS

James H. Wilkerson, chairman of the state public utilities commission, gave out the following statement yesterday following the commission's announcement of the telephone and street car rate raises:

"The operation of a public utility presents the same questions as the conduct of any other business. The cost of production determines the price which must be paid by the consumer.

"The problems in the management of our local utilities are precisely the same as those which must be met by the railroads. Wages, cost of materials and supplies, and all other operating costs have increased. This is the natural effect of the destruction of life and property in the great world war. The same thing followed the Napoleonic wars and the civil war.

"If these public service agencies are to function at all, they must be permitted to obtain the revenue necessary to keep them going. The increases necessary in the case of the local utilities are substantially the same as those which have been found necessary and which must be allowed to the railroads. The industrial organization of this nation is a unit, and general economic conditions must be recognized.

"For those who are today advocating in this state the doctrine of confiscation, I have only one suggestion: The people of this state have never stood for confiscation of property. Of course serious consideration is not to be given to theories the inevitable effect of which will be to destroy the efficiency of those instrumentalities which have become an integral part of our business organization.

"When the railroads, the telegraph, the telephone, the street car, and the lighting and heating companies cease to function and are unable to keep up with the demand of a growing community, we have gone back a hundred years."

AWARDS $100,000 DAMAGES AND ENJOINS UNION

Court Calls This Labor Body a Monopoly.

Rochester, N. Y., June 19—[Special.]—Justice Adolph Rodenbeck, in the Supreme court, today handed down a decision in the case of the Michaels-Stern Clothing company against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America for a permanent injunction and $100,000 damages. The decision upholds the contention of the company throughout, granting it a permanent injunction, closely following the temporary one.

The attitude taken by Justice Rodenbeck throughout his decision, one of the most momentous from the point of view of the industrial world which has been handed down in the United States in recent years, is that no labor union has the right to make itself into a labor monopoly and use force and intimidation to effect this end.

Resorted to Secret Methods.

"The plaintiffs were required to win their way in the world of business by hard and honest competition and by the character and quality of their goods," the decision says, "but the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, instead of endeavoring to secure recognition by an example of enlightened and reasonable administration in other factories, chose to force their way into plaintiff's factory by secrecy and by a strike backed by its powerful influence and supported by acts that the law condemns.

"Ultimate success in the labor movement does not lie along this line but in the direction of a peaceful exemplification of a just and reasonable administration of affairs of the union, with advantages not only to employers and employés but to the public as well."

"Pure and Simple Monopoly."

Regarding the attitude taken by the Amalgamated toward the United Garment Workers, the American Federation of Labor union, which had been recognized by the Michaels-Stern company, the decision characterized it as "selfish."

Justice Rodenbeck holds it to be purely and simply one of monopolization, which, in the language of the decision, would do no good to either party, since "it would defeat its own purpose so far as wages were concerned by raising prices as fast as the cost of production was increased," assuming that the clothing manufacturers were as closely affiliated as the Amalgamated seeks to be.

10 Cent Fares Asked by Aurora-Elgin Electric

Elgin, Ill., June 19.—The Aurora, Elgin and Chicago Electric railway company today made application to the public utilities commission for 10 cent street car fares in Elgin and Aurora to meet a wage increase of 22 per cent offered its employés.

The present rate is 8 cents, in effect since the first of the year.

Several weeks ago the men asked for increases of approximately 100 per cent. The 22 per cent raise is the compromise offer made by the company's receiver. The men began voting on the wage offer yesterday and will announce their decision today.

GOMPERS' GAVEL SMASHED TO PUT LEAGUE THROUGH

Covenant Indorsed by Organized Labor.

Montreal, June 19.—The American Federation of Labor adjourned its annual convention here tonight, after indorsing the league of nations without reservations.

The closing session of the two weeks' convention was a stormy one. Irish sympathizers, supported by the progressive wing of the federtion, opposed the movement to indorse the league, and throughout the debate on the question President Samuel Gompers had difficulty in maintaining order. His gavel was smashed in his efforts to quiet the proceedings.

The league of nations issue arose shortly before adjournment. Its opponents were unable to gather sufficient votes for a roll call, and a number of Irish sympathizers jumped to the floor and demanded that their votes be recorded as "no" in the records.

Gompers Takes Floor.

President Gompers was compelled to take the floor in support of the league when it became apparent the delegates were swinging to the opposition.

Members of the executive council made emphatic appeals in behalf of the covenant.

The report of the committee on international relations which was adopted declared to reject the league would be "indorsing the policy of greed, hatred, and brutal war as the rule that guides in the settlement of relations between nations.

"It is not a perfect document, and perfection is not claimed for it," the report added. "It does, however, mark the nearest approach to perfection that ever had been devised for the prevention of war. It must meet with the unqualified approval and support of the American working people."

Always Favored Peace.

"When has the American Federation of Labor failed to place itself on record for international peace?" asked Mr. Gompers. "I can't recall it. The federation has endeavored to use its influence and power to prevent war. Who has not struggled for such peace? Shall we now reverse the policy which we have supported?"

Dan McKillop of Seattle led the opposition to the covenant, because, he said, it guarantees the territorial integrity of the British empire. He also declared the American workingman does not understand the "full meaning of this league."

The report of the committee on international relations was characterized as "an outrage," in that it recommended the adoption of a league with the provisions of article X.

Leaders Go to Washington.

Mr. Gompers and the executive council will leave immediately for Washington to put into operation the program framed by the convention.

The first move, it was said, will be launched against the Democratic national convention to obtain incorporation of the federation's program in the party platform. They will urge also that the federation's nonpartisan political policy, which was unanimously approved by the convention, be carried out.

Labor's program, as outlined by the convention demands, follows:

Ratification of the peace treaty.

Government ownership, with democratic operation of railroads.

Curb on profiteering and high cost of living.

Would Jail Profiteers.

Jailing of food and clothing profiteers.

Right to strike and abolition of compulsory arbitration and anti-strike legislation.

Hands off in Mexico by the United States government.

Indorsement of the Irish republic.

Right of collective bargaining.

Advances in wages wherever necessary to maintain the American standard of living.

Shorter work day, if necessary to prevent unemployment.

President Gompers was authorized to appoint a committee to investigate the feasibility of establishing a national labor university.

The executive council also was instructed to consider a plan which ultimately would result in labor procuring control of a number of daily newspapers for the purpose of giving "fair representation in matters in which labor is concerned."

RAIL UNION'S LEADER ASSAILS OUTLAW STRIKES

Philadelphia, Pa., June 19.—C. E. Musser, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, in a statement submitted to its members and others working under the schedule held by the brotherhood on the Pennsylvania lines, declared today that "the strike called yesterday will not be sanctioned until it is determined that we cannot hope to negotiate a favorable settlement with existing agencies set up to adjust matters of dispute between ourselves and the company."

TRAPPED BANDIT GIVES CLEW TO DRESSEL GANG

Hold Doctor and Woman After Confession.

Casimir Wysocki, confessed member of the gang which killed one man and wounded another in an attempt to rob the Dresser Commercial and Savings bank last Wednesday, gave information yesterday by which the state's attorney's office expects to catch and convict one more band of desperadoes operating in Chicago. State's Attorney Hoyne declares a dozen recent robberies have been traced to the band.

Wysocki was trapped in his home, 1509 Wicker Park avenue, after Assistant State's Attorneys Lowery and Prystalski had forced Dr. John A. Stevenson to admit dressing wounds Wysocki sustained in the unsuccessful stickup. Both Dr. Stevenson and his housekeeper, Miss Jessie Barnes, were held for questioning.

Trapped by Tapped Phone.

A bit of wire tapping led to the physician's arrest and the subsequent storming of Wysocki's house by Chief of Detectives Mooney, Detective Sergeant John Murphy of the prosecutor's staff, and eight other men. They came ready to fight, but the bandit unbolted the door when Mooney threatened to send a volley through.

At the Criminal Court building, weak from bullet wounds in his neck and thigh, Wysocki confessed his part in the crime and gave the names of his four accomplices. They are James Gallagher, Bert Shepard, Edward Galowski, and George Wablinski.

Detectives were sent out to find these men. Shepard and Galowski are already known to the police, the former having a long record as a pickpocket. Gallagher, alleged bank robber, was released from Joliet only last August on a writ of supersedeas.

Stevenson an Alibi Witness.

He was named as the leader of the band. About three years ago, when he was being tried before Judge Pam for participating in the stickup of the Kowalewski Bros.' bank, Dr. Stevenson testified as an alibi witness.

Dr. Stevenson said he had known Gallagher for ten years. Both he and Miss Barnes admitted dressing Wysocki's wounds when the gangman was brought to his office, 1658 Chicago avenue, by Gallagher. It was an oversight that he did not notify the police, the doctor said. He followed that statement by claiming he was afraid Gallagher might "get" him if he talked.

Dr. Stevenson also admitted dressing a back wound for Joseph Toyza, 2021 Willow street, who is believed to have been shot during an attempt to steal liquor from a drug store at Belmont avenue and Hazel street. Toyza was arrested and taken to the state's attorney's office.

Planned in West Side Saloon.

The bank robbery was planned Tuesday night in a west side saloon where the beer is real and the shutters are drawn tight and only the knowing can gain admittance.

The first thing was to get an auto, a fast one. They selected that of Ed Fleming, former secretary to State's Attorney Hoyne.

They got to the bank and the shooting began when they saw Policeman Fred Brunke. Richard Routillard, a depositor, was killed. Brunke lost part of his thumb, but he hit Wysocki.

The latter's comrades pushed him into the auto and took him to the saloon with the drawn shutters, where he was given first aid. Then they called Dr. Stevenson's office. The doctor was not in, would not be in till 1 o'clock.

At 1:30 Wysocki and Gallagher entered the office and the physician went to work. He found the wound in the neck not dangerous, but the other was serious.

Many Win Ribbons

All attendance records were broken yesterday at the opening of Lake Forest's flower show. Delegations arrived from every garden club between Evanston and Milwaukee, and others from Oak Park and Elgin.

The show, known as the Iris and Peony show, is being held in the Gorton school under the auspices of the North Shore Horticultural society, which is affiliated with the Garden Club of Illinois.

The blue ribbon in the table decoration class was won by the Garden Club of Evanston with a bowl of oriental poppies. The red ribbon went to Mrs. J. Ogden Armour for a center piece of clematis, orchids, and roses arranged by her. Mrs. Louis E. Laflin took third prize with a circular display in pink and yellow, composed of columbines and petunias. Other entrants in this class, which was in charge of Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, were Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. A. D. Bevan, and Florence M. Underwood.

The first prize in the flower arrangement class, in charge of Mrs. C. Morse Ely, was awarded Mrs. Walter S. Brewster for a bouquet of pink peonies and lavender irises. Mrs. Francis C. Farwell captured the red ribbon with yellow pond lilies, and Mrs. Robert G. McGann the yellow ribbon with a bouquet of poor man's orchids. Other prize winners were Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, Mrs. Samuel Insull, and Mrs. Byron L. Smith.

PEACE NOT YET, BUT 39 GENERALS LOSE WAR RANK

Bell Is Among Those Demoted.

Washington, D. C., June 19.—Under a war department order today, twenty-three officers holding the emergency rank of major generals are reduced to brigadiers or colonels, and sixteen officers now brigadier generals are reduced to ranks ranging from major to colonel.

Prominent in the list of major generals reduced are George Bell, Jr., commanding at Camp Grant; Clarence R. Edwards, who commanded the New England national guard division overseas, and Henry F. Allen, commander of the American forces in Germany, who revert to their rank of brigadiers.

Fighting Commander Reduced.

Others reduced to brigadiers are Maj. Gens. Omar Bundy, who commanded a fighting division in France, and who is now in charge at Camp Lee, Virginia; Charles T. Mencher, director of the air service; William S. Graves, who commanded the American forces in Siberia; William M. Wright, for a time acting chief of staff, and Samuel D. Strugis.

Maj. Gen. James W. McAndrew also becomes a brigadier, as do Maj. Gens. John Biddle, commanding at Camp Custer, Mich.; C. W. Kennedy, H. C. Hale, David C. Shanks, and George W. Read.

Maj. Gen. Henry T. McCain, for pre-war rank as colonel in the adjutant general's department. Maj. Gen. William J. Snow is reduced to colonel in artillery, while Maj. Gen. Grote Hutcheson becomes a colonel of cavalry.

Reduction of Some Temporary.

Among the brigadiers reduced are William W. Harts, who commanded the Paris district during the war, and who becomes a colonel of engineers; Marlborough Churchill, who reverts to his rank of major, and Fox Connor, who now becomes a colonel.

The reduction in rank of many of these officers probably will be only temporary, as new appointments must be made to fill vacancies which will occur when the army is reorganized under the recent act of congress. The promotion boards are now making up the new list.

Surprised at Bell Demotion.

Rockford, Ill., June 19.—[Special.]—Announcement that Maj. Gen. George Bell, commander at Camp Grant, is one of the officers reduced to pre-war rank caused astonishment here. It had been expected he would retain the rank of major general because of his excellent record as chief of the Prairie division.

START WORK ON LARGE CATHOLIC SCHOOL AT AREA

Waukegan, Ill., June 19.—[Special.]—Work of construction of the $10,000,000 Catholic college at Lake Era, near Area, Ill., has begun. Carloads of building materials are arriving on the site. The Soo line is extending its tracks to facilitate the hauling of material.

The college will be the largest of its kind in the United States and priests will finish their training there instead of going to Rome.

It will be under the jurisdiction of Archbishop Mundelein of the diocese of Chicago. The eighty acres of land upon which the college is to be erected was purchased from Senator Rodney B. Swift of Libertyville, Ill.

CAPITAL GOSSIPS WHEN DEVIL DOG OUSTS BARNETT

Surprised That Lejeune Is Made Marine Head.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 19.—[Special.]—Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, who commanded the 2d division, in which was included a brigade of marines, was appointed commandant of the United States marine corps today by recess appointment of President Wilson. Secretary Daniels, upon whose recommendation the appointment was made, announced that the action was taken in order to give recognition to the man who figured most prominently among marines that saw active fighting service in France. Maj. Gen. George Barnett, for six years commandant of the corps, was relieved of duty, although he had served only two of the four years of his second term.

MAJ. GEN. J. A. LEJEUNE.

Surprises National Capital.

The unexpected supplanting of Gen. Barnett, who is a prominent figure in Washington society and officialdom, caused a sensation, second only to the Daniels-Sims controversy. Among members of congress who are here opinion is divided, some Republicans as well as Democrats, frankly commending Secretary Daniels, while others take a contrary view.

Representative Britten of Illinois, a member of the house committee on naval affairs, sharply criticized Secretary Daniels.

"If congress were in session I would introduce a resolution to bring out the facts," said Representative Britten. "I will introduce such a resolution in December. I heard six months or more ago Secretary Daniels was looking for some excuse to take this post away from Gen. Barnett. He has been fumbling around all this time. I don't think Gen. Barnett should thus be publicly insulted after the wonderful record he has made."

Barnett Asks Leave of Absence.

Gen. Lejeune will take command of the marine corps on June 30. Gen. Barnett has asked for a sixty days' leave of absence, after which time he will be assigned to other duties as a brigadier general, unless he avails himself of his right to retire with the rank of major general. Gen. Barnett, who has served with distinction in the marine corps for forty-three years, has been anxious to round out forty-five years of service.

Gen. Lejeune's appointment must be confirmed by the senate next winter.

Asked if the appointment of Gen. Lejeune is the beginning of a general shakeup in the navy department, Secretary Daniels said "No." He denied Gen. Barnett's removal was any reflection upon him, saying that under the terms of Gen. Barnett's reappointment two years ago it was for four years "or until relieved by the president."

WOMAN ELWELL JILTED IN PALM BEACH SOUGHT

Police Told of Husband's Threat and Quarrel.

New York, June 19.—[Special.]—A jealous Palm Beach husband and a woman cast aside entered the mystery of Joseph Bowne Elwell's death today. At a conference of police and assistant district attorneys in the Criminal Courts building these facts were brought out:

Elwell, in Palm Beach, broke with a woman, declaring that her husband had threatened him, and left Palm Beach for Lexington, Ky., the following day.

Instead of traveling in his automobile, as was his habit, he went by train, leaving his chauffeur to drive the car to Lexington alone—and, incidentally, to throw any pursuers of Elwell off the scent.

Edwin Rhodes, Elwell's chauffeur, told of the Palm Beach affair and of the departure from Palm Beach. He described a scene in a garage at Palm Beach—Elwell coolly telling the woman he wanted nothing more to do with her because of the threats her husband had made; the woman pleading and in tears accusing Elwell of "making an excuse to get rid of her," and her final hysterical departure, replete with the reproaches of a woman cast aside.

"Went Away from There."

Rhodes declares he did not know whether the woman's husband actually had threatened Elwell or whether the gambler merely used the "threatening husband" as an excuse to rid himself of a woman who had become tiresome.

"All I know is that we went away from there the next day," he concluded.

The officials at the conference refused to state whether the chauffeur had named either the man or woman.

Elwell posed as a divorced man when at Palm Beach, according to Florence Ellenson, the Asbury Park girl, who telephoned to him from Asbury Park on the day before his death and made an engagement to meet him on the morning of his death at the Pennsylvania station. She denied that Elwell had telephoned to her on the morning of his murder, but said that she had been expecting a call, which did not come.

Seek His List of Loves.

After quizzing the chauffeur the council of detectives and lawyers turned to William Barnes, Elwell's secretary, for a directory of women whose intimacy with Elwell might have furnished a motive for the murder. Barnes said that he knew of fifty women who were intimately connected with Elwell.

The chauffeur had told of information regarding the women of Elwell's circle which he received from Annie Kane, the housekeeper, who was superseded by Mrs. Marie Larsen last October. Annie Kane, the chauffeur, said, told him of all sorts of intrigues of Elwell with married and unmarried women. He also told of chance conquests. Elwell, he said, would hail women at random, from his auto, and if rebuffed, would explain that it was a mistake in identity. His explanations, the chauffeur added, sometimes ended with their riding away side by side.

Had Several Enemies.

District Attorney John T. Dooling declared it had been learned that Elwell had "several enemies," but declined to state how many or who they were. The investigators have stated repeatedly that they had learned of no quarrel involving money transactions, either at the stock market, race track, or card table, and that his enemies were made by his reckless adventures with women and his abruptness in quitting them.

Further information showed today that the murderer must have escaped at 8:30 a. m., within a very few minutes before the arrival of the housekeeper, Mrs. Marie Larsen, if he did not remain in the house after her arrival and make his escape when she rang for the police. That the murderer had probably been with Elwell for some time before the shot was fired was declared to be indicated by Elwell's failure to call Miss Ellenson on the long distance telephone before 8:30, when her train left.

Found Soon After Shooting.

"The shot was fired within ten or fifteen minutes before the arrival of the housekeeper," Dr. Charles Norris, the city medical examiner, said today. "It was a matter of minutes before her arrival, and I would put fifteen minutes as the probable outside limit, although it might possibly have been a little longer. He lived for two hours afterwards at Flower hospital. It was very remarkable that a man with a wound of that kind could have lived two hours, and he certainly could not have lived more than a few minutes longer than that.

"The call for an ambulance was received at the Flower hospital at 8:35. The fact that he was breathing heavily when the housekeeper found him does not aid in fixing the minute of death, because a man with a brain wound would have continued to breathe that way until he died.

Suicide Theory Absurd.

"I have read in the evening papers today that the theory of suicide has been put forward again. That is absolutely absurd. The fact that there were no powder burns about the wound proves that the revolver was held at least eight or nine inches from the forehead. The imbedded powder grains over an area three inches in diameter indicate that it was held more than nine inches away, probably a foot or more. The powder grains do not give exact information, because it depends on the exact size and quality of the charge of powder and on other things, but the absence of burns gives definite information."

Information in the hands of the district attorney's office, together with the statement of the medical examiner, seems to place the time in which the crime could have been committed between 8:15 and 8:20.

Four Have Keys to Mystery.

Two and possibly four persons have it in their power to clear up the mystery, Assistant District Attorney Joyce declared.

"I firmly believe that two, possibly four, persons know the identity of the murderer of Elwell," Joyce declared. "I sincerely trust that these people will see this thing in the right light and tell us what they know."

He added that he believed the facts in possession of "those who know" are being withheld to protect the reputation of a woman.

The owner of the pink lingerie found in Elwell's home has been identified by the police. So far her name has been guarded and she has been referred to as "Miss Wilson," the name by which Elwell's intimates knew her.

The "kimono girl's" husband, broken in spirit by the revelations of his wife's friendship for the gambler, has convinced the police that it was not his hand which avenged his honor.

"I didn't know, I didn't know," was all he was able to tell the investigators.

Will Probate Will June 25.

Andrew MacRery of the firm of Davies, Auerbach & Cornell, attorneys for the estate of Joseph Bowne Elwell, stated this morning that a petition for filing the will for probate would be made on June 25, when the widow and son, Richard, would be cited to appear in the Surrogate court.

So far as the examination has gone there appears to be $10,000 in personal property and $15,000 in cash. All the realty that has been found in the name of the whist expert up to date is the island at Palm Beach and property at Long Beach.

CHERCHEZ LA FEMME

Lexington, Ky., June 19.—[Special.]—Who is the woman who accompanied Joseph Bowne Elwell on a trip to Lexington two days, the last week in December? Henry Oswald, of the New York homicide squad is asking the question of Kentucky friends of the murdered whist expert. Barry Shannon, manager of E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour farm, says Elwell introduced the woman to him as "Miss Wilson," and that he gained the impression she was from New York, though Elwell did not say as much.

The records at the Phoenix hotel show that Elwell on the December trip had two rooms connected by bath, but there is nothing at the hotel, nor does anyone know, that either of them was occupied by any one save Elwell.

No "Miss Wilson" appears to have been registered at the hotel on or about the dates given. Miss Anne Griffy gave Oswald a copy of the letter she received from Elwell June 12. It expressed the hope that she had recovered from the effects of an operation upon her tonsils, and was signed "Joe." This letter was in response to one Miss Griffy sent Elwell thanking him for flowers, he sent her, while she was in the hospital and which led to the Kentucky investigation.

At Algonquin, Where Health and Happiness Are Free

"THE ALGONQUIN BABY."

Happiness for 400

Two hundred mothers and as many children are at Algonquin, THE TRIBUNE'S free hospital and camp, today. The last group arrived from Chicago yesterday, filling the place to capacity.

Among the newest arrivals was little Gracie, 6 years old. It was a bit chilly, and Gracie, having vivid recollections of last winter, when she seldom had sufficient bed clothing, exhibited a sad face.

After a good, warm supper, at which freshly pasteurized country milk was plentiful, the little girl and her mother were taken to their quarters for the night. A few minutes later Gracie was tucked in bed between heavy woolen blankets, which made her as comfy as can be. It was the first time she could remember ever having enough bed clothing to keep her warm. She clapped her hands with joy.

In a few days, when it turns warm again, Gracie and her companions will be just as comfortable. Most of the youngsters have been underfed and their mothers are weary from ceaseless toil. When they return to Chicago their health will be rehabilitated.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 19.

SENATOR WARREN G. HARDING, Republican presidential nominee, abandoned plans for a vacation, and will remain in Washington until about July 15.

SENATOR CARTER GLASS of Virginia, who is slated to be the chairman of the resolutions committee at the San Francisco convention, held an hour's conference with President Wilson just before departing for the Pacific coast.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY DANIELS caused a stir by announcing the appointment of Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune as major general commandant of the marine corps. Maj. Gen. George Barnett, commandant of the marine corps for the last six years, was relieved from the post, although his present four year term had two more years to run.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR PAYNE exacted from Senator Jones of Washington, chairman of the senate commerce committee, a pledge that he would urge the elimination of national parks from territory affected by the water power bill before withdrawing his objections to the signing of the measure. This action, it was learned, made it possible for the president to affix his signature.

GIRL'S HATPIN ROUTS 2 THIEVES, SAVES HER $250

Linda Marshall saved her purse, containing $250, from two thieves early yesterday morning with the aid of a trusty hatpin.

LINDA MARSHALL.

Miss Marshall, a telegraph operator, was returning from work when the men stopped her in front of her home at 715 Grace street and tried to grab her pocketbook.

"Don't you dare come near me," she said, and she thrust the hatpin toward them.

They stepped back. Just then the door of the apartment building opened and one of the tenants stepped out. The thieves started to run.

Patrolman Edward P. Schoenecker saw them fleeing and placed them under arrest.

They gave the names of Elmer Anderson, 2304 North Clark street, and Ernest Belfray, 903 Wellington street.

Unable to Find a Flat, Man Found Dead of Gas

Raymond Barnes, son of O. P. Barnes, publisher, was found asphyxiated last night in the home of his parents in Oak Park. He had attached a rubber hose to the gas stove.

Barnes was transferred to the Chicago office of a Toledo concern for which he had worked and is believed to have been despondent on this account. He had been unable to find a flat.

His wife and son, Thomas, have been living in River Forest with her parents since their return from Toledo.

U. S. Collects Data for More 'Snappy' Uniforms

Washington, D. C., June 19.—In an effort to obtain better fitting uniforms for American soldiers, more than 100,000 men in the army have had their measure taken, the war department announced today.

The measurements were said to form the most comprehensive survey ever made for tailoring purposes and will be made available to the clothing trade. Measurements showed that the biggest chested soldiers came from western states.

Nonsense, Admiral's Reply to "Oil Seizure" by Navy

Los Angeles, Cal., June 19.—"Nonsense," was the term applied today by Admiral Hugh Rodman, commander of the Pacific fleet, to the allegation that the United States navy had threatened to land marines at Los Angeles harbor and seize fuel oil from the plant of the General Petroleum company unless the company would sell oil to the navy at the navy department's price.

'SILK STOCKING' HABITS DIDN'T CURB THE 25TH

Has 122,731 People in It; Bigger than Spokane.

Chicago's truck garden of twenty-five years ago—the Twenty-fifth ward—has a larger population than Spokane, Wash., or Duluth, Minn.

Like the Twenty-seventh ward, it is a state within a city, and its aldermen, Frank J. Link and Henry D. Capitain, represent more persons in legislative matters than do United States Senators Pittman and Henderson of Nevada.

With its 122,731 inhabitants it is as large as Ogden, Utah; Kankakee, Evanston, and Bloomington put together. It has twice the population of Gary, Ind.; Cedar Rapids, Ia.; and Springfield, Ill., and is three times as large as Aurora, Rock Island, and Joliet. The population of Sacramento, Cal., could find homes in it, and there would be room left for those of Davenport, Ia.

Had 18,000 When Annexed.

Old residents of this "principality of the north side" recalled yesterday how thirty-five years ago they sat on their front porches and watched the farmers in their lumber wagons going "to town" with loads of produce and returning with a jug of whisky.

When the ward was annexed in 1889 it included part of the city of Lake View and "wide places in the road" known as Buena Park, Sheridan Park, Edgewater, Birchwood, and Argyle Park. The population was then a little over 18,000.

Then in 1893 Rogers Park was added pushing the northern boundary from Devon avenue to Howard and Rogers avenues. In 1911 the ward lost two square miles of its area when the aldermen made the territory between Cornelia and Fullerton avenues into the Twenty-third ward.

Wilderness and Gardens.

In 1889 the territory between Lake View and Rogers Park was a wilderness mixed with truck gardens. The Edgewater district was a sandy swamp.

As late as 1899 it was the wilderness between Lake View and Rogers Park that was picked for the setting of the famous Cronin murder because of its sparse population.

In those days the Rogers and the Touhys still owned upwards of 1,200 acres in Rogers park and Ravenswood. Phillip Rogers gave his name to Rogers avenue and Rogers park, and his descendants laid out the district.

Then too, Rogers avenue was still known as the "Indian boundary," being part of the line fixed by treaty with the Indians to the north, beyond which they might not step. The line extended west to the Mississippi river and gave the white man access to both Lake Michigan and the river and the red skin parallel rights on the north side of the line.

The latest figures on Chicago's second largest ward show that 85 per cent of the population is either American, German or Swedish born, the division being 48 per cent American, 25 per cent German and 12 per cent Swedish.

Always a Bit "Silk Stocking."

The ward has been known for years as a "silk stocking" district. Perhaps this penchant for being just a little bit "different" is shown first in the report of John D. Ware, Chicago health commissioner in 1891.

"This (the Twenty-fifth) is the only ward in the city where the rule on manure boxes is enforced. Here either a vault or a tight box is invariably provided.

"One unprejudiced drive through the alleys will convince the most skeptical that manure can be kept within bounds and the alleys free from it."

Nearly Always Republican.

Even before that the district was known as "well to do," for a report to William Boldenweck, the last mayor of Lake View and afterwards government subtreasurer in Chicago, reads:

"Our city is fast filling up with residents who are well to do and who keep their own stock, often several horses and a cow."

Only twice in its thirty-one years of history has the Twenty-fifth ward deviated from rock ribbed Republicanism. Just after it was annexed two aldermen—William Brookman and Austin O. Sexton—were elected on Democratic and Labor tickets. In 1895 James Pease, afterwards sheriff, got control of the ward, and for twenty years it was his stronghold.

EVANSTON SOCIETY GIRL BECOMES BRIDE OF PENNSYLVANIAN

MRS. CHARLES A. BECKWITH.

Chicago and north shore society last night attended the wedding of Miss Billie Kirkman, daughter of Mrs. Ella Gates Kirkman, 1225 Ridge avenue, Evanston, to Charles Allen Beckwith, son of Charles S. Beckwith of Allentown, Pa., which took place in St. Mark's Episcopal church, Evanston.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur Rogers, rector of St. Mark's, officiated. Mrs. Howard Baker served her sister as matron of honor, and Miss Katherine Lewis was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Martha Smith of Hackensack, N. J., Miss Elizabeth Beckwith, sister of the groom, Allentown, Pa., Miss Marion Lewis and Miss Ruth Kimball of Chicago. Three year old Barbara Baker was flower girl. Marshall Guthrerz of Washington, D. C., served as best man.

The ushers were West Wulchet of Evanston, Miner Russell of Philadelphia, George Buckwell of Pittsburgh, and Abram Stratton of Chicago.

HER REMARRIAGE A FAILURE, SAYS MRS. MESSING

Having divorced and remarried her husband, Mrs. Florence Messing filed a bill for separate maintenance yesterday against Abraham J. Messing, alleging desertion.

The bill recites that the Messings were married Aug. 17, 1895, at Peoria, and lived together until March 1912, when Mr. Messing deserted her. She obtained a divorce in June, 1914. On Oct. 28, 1917, she "met the defendant and was married to him again at Crown Point, Ind.," the bill alleges. They continued to live together until June 5, 1919, when Mr. Messing again is said to have left her.

When Rabbi Abraham J. Messing's home at 4650 Clarendon avenue, was called, Mrs. Messing answered the phone.

"Are you the Mrs. Florence Messing suing Abraham J. Messing for separate maintenance?" she was asked.

"I have nothing to say about the matter," she said as she hung up the receiver. There are four children. Allan, 21; Fannie, 18; Virginia, 15, and Elizabeth, 11 years old.

SECRETARY TO POLICE CAPTAIN HELD AS ROBBER

Taken by Flivver Squad as He Enters Auto.

Policeman George H. Carleton, member of the department for ten years and private secretary to Acting Capt. Thomas Duffy of the West Chicago avenue station, had parked his automobile at West Dakin street and North Central Park avenue. It was 1 o'clock Saturday morning.

As he returned and prepared to enter it, four men surrounded him. Each carried a revolver. Carleton was seized before he could draw his.

"You're under arrest," they informed him.

"Who? I? What for?"

"Robbery."

They were Detective Sergeant Cosley Madden, Patrol Sergeant John Griffin, and Policemen Ward Castleman and James Scott, comprising the flivver squad of the Irving Park station.

Hunting Drug Store Robbers.

"You're crazy," replied Carleton, but he accompanied them to the station.

A neighbor had telephoned the station that two men were robbing the drug store of Louis E. Stoebig, 5061 Irving Park boulevard; also that a mysterious automobile had parked at Dakin and North Central Park avenue.

The flivver squad first visited the store. Entrance had been effected by forcing a rear door. Cigars and tobacco valued at $50 had been taken. The door to the compartment where the store's supply of liquor is stored was also forced. But Mr. Stoebig had no stock.

Carleton Identified.

Capt. Joseph Mullin of the Irving Park station, notified Chief Garrity after the neighbor, whose name is withheld, had identified Carleton as one of the men in the store, Capt. Mullin said. The chief ordered that he be immediately relieved of his star and suspended.

Mr. Stoebig signed a complaint, charging Carleton with robbery. Capt. Mullin and Acting Capt. Duffy sought to interrogate Carleton, but he declined to answer any questions. His only comment was:

"This is ridiculous."

He later obtained his release on bonds of $5,000. He is 34 years old and lives at 2704 North Central Park avenue.

Judge Frees Policeman of Charge of Pandering

Judge Pam yesterday pronounced Detective Sergeant Frank Freemuth innocent of a charge of pandering. The officer was accused of taking Gertrude Bennett from a disorderly house to the Florence hotel, but the judge announced that in view of the character of the prosecuting witnesses he could not convict Freemuth. The state indicated that bribery charges against the officer would probably be dropped.

LOWDEN WAITS FOR CONFERENCE TO DECIDE STAND

Unwilling to Run Again, but May Consent.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Gov. Lowden will not be a candidate for renomination and reelection for governor unless his personal objections are overcome before tomorrow afternoon.

He will be a candidate if a conference of Lowden and anti-Thompson leaders to be held tomorrow afternoon fails to agree upon a candidate for governor conferees believe is certain to defeat any city hall candidate.

Under no circumstances will the governor be a candidate for United States senator.

This was the situation existing last night and confronting Illinois Republicans.

Governor Tells Stand.

The governor himself expressed it as follows:

"I wish to withdraw from active politics. There may be, however, a duty that I owe to the state at large which may overcome this inclination. In justice to the state and to my friends and advisers I must withhold judgment at the present moment.

"Under no conceivable circumstances will I be a candidate for United States senator."

Four principal candidates are being considered as ones on whom it may be possible to unite the anti-Thompson forces. There may be some dark horses.

The principal candidates are:

Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby.
State Auditor Andrew Russel.
State Treasurer Fred E. Sterling.
Former Speaker Edward D. Shurtleff.

Shurtleff last night was the best bet. Gov. Lowden has given no intimation whatever as to his personal choice in the event that he is not a candidate himself.

All Interests Represented.

In the conference will sit spokesmen for all involved interests, Chicago and downstate included. There will be men speaking for the Brundage and Deneen elements in Cok county. The propspect is that all of the state officials and the downstate candidates for places on the state ticket will be present. Gov. Lowden will talk for himself. The announced intention is to formulate a policy that doesn't consider the mayor or his Chicago faction except as foes.

Before the conference sits, it is apparent that the utmost pressure will be exerted upon Gov. Lowden to become a candidate. He spent the day yesterday at the Blackstone, talking against representative delegations which were urging him to run again.

Moves to Protect Ticket.

First steps toward protecting the legal Republican candidates for electors were taken by Col. Frank L. Smith, chairman of both the "old" and the "new" Republican state committees. Chairman Smith issued a statement that went the route in urging the submersion of factional differences pending the filing of an unquestioned and legitimate ticket of candidates for electors, taking the recent decision of the Supreme court on the primary law into consideration.

"My intention is to cause, through whatever legal means are at hand, action to the end that a state convention shall be held on Sept. 21, which will name or confirm a list of unquestioned candidates for presidential electors," he said. "And I will be guided by the best unbiased and disinterested legal advice that I can secure in all that I am required to do as state chairman."

IMPEACH WILSON, ONE OF 14 POINTS OF SOCIALISTS

Wausau, Wis., June 19.—Impeachment of President Wilson is demanded by one of the planks in the "fourteen point" platform adopted here today by the state convention of the Socialist party. Impeachment of Attorney General Palmer and of Postmaster General Burleson is also demanded.

Gov. E. L. Philipp's name was also included in the list of those condemned for "indifference to the rank and file," but his impeachment was not specifically called for.

Every plank in the platform read by Victor Berger affirmed belief in international socialism. One plank placed blame for the world war on "big business."

William Coleman of Milwaukee will be the party candidate for governor and Frank J. Weber will make the race for United States senator.

Illinois Democratic Leaders Ready for Trip to Frisco

Left to right: Ernest Hoover, Taylorville, chairman of state committee; P. J. Lucey, Streator, public utilities commissioner; George E. Brennan, Chicago, chairman of delegation; Val B. Campbell, East St. Louis, leader; Isaac B. Craig, Mattoon, secretary of state committee; Dennis J. Egan, Chicago, chairman Cook county executive committee.

HARRISON, DUNNE, SABATH, LEAVE FOR CONVENTION

Main Body of Democrats Starts Tonight.

The vanguard of the Illinois delegation to the Democratic national convention left Chicago last night.

Tonight the main body of delegates will leave and by Thursday all of the Illinois Democrats who are expected to play an important part in the convention will be in San Francisco.

In the party that left last night on the regular trains were: Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, former Mayor Carter H. Harrison, William L. O'Connell, Congressman A. J. Sabath, and Oscar F. Mayer. Dunne and Harrison are delegates at large to the convention, and Sabath and O'Connell district delegates. Sabath will be the Illinois member of the committe on resoltions.

125 in Main Party.

The delegates who will leave tonight compose the party led by George E. Brennan, chairman of the delegation. There will be 125 in the party, including practically all of the down state and Chicago delegates who did not get away last night. The delegation will travel in special cars, leaving the Rock Island station at 10 p. m.

Democrats Finish Work.

The "old" Democratic state committee met yesterday in the Hotel Sherman as a state convention. It ratified the election of delegates at large and of district delegates to the San Francisco convention as they were made by the primary election on April 13. It also formally nominated the twenty-nine Democratic electors who were chosen in the congressional district conventions on May 5 under the "new" law, and directed that they be certified to the secretary of state as the legally nominated candidates.

This action apparently clears up the Democratic record and assures a legal ticket of candidates for electors, whatever may be the ultimate legal entanglements started by the knockout of the 1919 primary act.

Lowden Challenges Iowa Governor to Wrestle

"There is no improvement for the good of the people that cannot be worked out under our form of government without revolution or dry rot," said Gov. W. L. Harding of Iowa, speaking yesterday at the annual picnic of the Hawkeye club at Jackson park. Gov. Lowden invited the club to hold its next picnic at Sinnissippi farm, at which time, he said, he would challenge Gov. Harding to a wrestling match.

'SURE, SANE, SENSIBLE,' PARIS PAPER SAYS OF SENATOR HARDING

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, June 19.—The Petit Parisien frankly admits it cannot forecast Senator Harding's foreign policy, but it believes it will be essentially American and probably "too strictly American to suit the interests of Europe and the world. As an executive he will never act without consultation and will not lead European chancelleries into awkward misunderstandings and regrettable errors. We always can be certain that as an executive he speaks the will of congress and of the American people."

The journal defines Senator Harding as "a faithful henchman of the bosses, Knox, and Lodge, and the nominee personifies the policy which roused the senate against the German treaty."

The royalist conservative Gaulois believes America secretly fears confiding its destinies to a conspicuous personality which might abuse the omnipotence the Constitution grants, pointing to "Roosevelt, whose imperialism upset his doctrines, and Wilson, whose humanitarian ideology upset his nationalism."

Eclaire, inspired by Aristide Briand, the French statesman, calls Harding "sure, sane, sensible." The election means a return of the good old days when the politician entered the White House, hung his hat in the vestibule, walked to the presidents' office, and rammed advice down his throat without rejection—which is a welcome change to Wilson's aloof tactics."

COLBY REFUSES TO 'KEYNOTE' AT SAN FRANCISCO

Washington, D. C., June 19.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby denied today published reports that he is in line for selection as permanent chairman of the Democratic convention at San Francisco.

"This report has no foundation," Mr. Colby said. "I am not even a receptive candidate for the permanent chairmanship."

Worried Over Colby.

San Francisco, Cal., June 19.—[Special.]—The proposal of Bainbridge Colby as the administration candidate for permanent chairman of the national Democratic convention is giving concern to the friends of several of the aspirants for the Democratic presidential nomination. Several weeks ago Democratic leaders began to hear a report that President Wilson would be gratified if the San Francisco convention made Mr. Colby its nominee for president.

HARDING WINS BULL MOOSERS BACK TO FOLD

Poindexter and Moore Favor Nominee.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 19.—[Special.]—Senator Warren G. Harding today abandoned his vacation program and decided to remain in Washington until about the middle of July to devote himself wholeheartedly to campaign planning and party unification. The senator made this announcement: "On account of my household arrangements and the difficulty of taking away the working establishment, such as I have had to create here, I have decided to abandon my vacation trip. I shall remain here until I go to Marion for the formal notification of my nomination, and that, I believe, will be about July 15."

The Republican nominee has been giving considerable attention to the task of bringing the old Roosevelt and progressive following enthusiastically into camp. He has been meeting with gratifying success and he expects to continue his efforts in this direction next week.

Poindexter for Harding.

The most conspicuous development in the way of reuniting the party today were declarations for Harding by Senator Poindexter of Washington and Alexander Moore of Pittsburgh. Senator Poindexter used to be the one real "Bull Moose" in the senate. His indorsement of the Harding-Coolidge ticket was warm and enthusiastic. In view of Senator Poindexter's "irreconcilability" on the treaty issue, what he had to say on this issue was regarded with special interest.

"There will be no danger, under the administration of these men (Harding and Coolidge) of American independence or honor being compromised or bartered away," said Senator Poindexter. "They can be depended upon to promote the establishment of an international court of conciliation, but at the same time to protect this country against the depotism of a supergovernment, backed up by the 'major forces of mankind,' whether under the name of a league of nations or any other name."

Moore and Harding Confer.

Mr. Moore, who was a supporter of Hiram Johnson, had a conference with Senator Harding and when he emerged from the nominee's office he announced he was going out and "take his coat off" for Harding.

"I couldn't be a good American and not be for him," said Moore. "There is no doubt that the people want a president who is 100 per cent American. Harding typifies this. He is the personification of the desire of the country to get back to normal."

Next week Senator Harding will confer with many more leaders of the progressive wing of the party. Among those who are scheduled to see the nominee are ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio, chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign for Senator Harding's nomination, will attend the conference. This conference will consider not only the date and plans for the notification ceremonies but various questions relating to organization and plans for the campaign.

WOMAN CUTS THROAT; DIES.

Mrs. Sophia Gruszeski, 1758 South Hermitage avenue, died in St. Mary's hospital yesterday of wounds sustained June 13, when she cut her throat. According to the police, she had been despondent over ill health.

WET-DRY FIGHT AT GOLDEN GATE WILL BE BITTER

San Francisco, Cal., June 19.—[Special.]—The preliminary outlook is that the wet-dry fight will be carried to the floor of the Democratic national convention when it meets here. While many party leaders, regardless of their individual leanings, would be glad enough to let the whole matter rest on the recent Supreme court decision and not make it a party issue at all, they believe William Jennings Bryan will use all his power to force the convention to take a definite position.

Some fear a majority of those on the platform committee will favor the drys, whereas others claim a big majority of the delegates are keen to see a restoration of a greater degree of "personal liberty."

The tactics of the wets, so far as they have been worked out, will be to bring in a minority report if there is anything in the platform committee's report that in any way seeks to commit the party to the present complete prohibition, and let the convention itself decide.

Chinese Fire on Japs, Whose Ships Retaliate

TOKIO, June 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—An official statement issued by the navy department today, telling of the firing by forces of the southern or Canton government of China on the Japanese warship Fushimi, says:

"Southern troops entering Chang-Sha, China, opened fire on the Japanese warship Fushimi, wounding two of the crew, one seriously. The Fushimi was forced to reply to the Chinese fire, causing casualties among the Chinese."

HOUSE LEADER OF G. O. P. PLEDGES REDUCED TAXES

Sees Economy as Guide in New Congress.

Washingotn, June 19.—Hope for an early reduction in taxes is held out by Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican leader of the house, in a statement prepared for the final issue Monday of the Congressional Record and made public tonight.

"We shall enter the new session of congress in December and the new congress in March," said Mr. Mondell's statement, "with the way opened for a substantial reduction of the tax burdens."

The Republican leader in his statement made no prediction as to when the lower taxes would become effective, but said reductions would not be possible until after the close of the fiscal year, which begins next month.

Wants Excess Profits Taxed.

The proposed changes in the tax laws also were not revealed by Mr. Mondell, although he indicated his disapproval of the administration program for the discard of the excess profits levies. He contended that such action at this time would mean a "shifting of burdens from large incomes and profits to the small and normal incomes and profits."

Expenses Reduced Billion.

No hope for a return to pre-war expenditures and appropriations was expressed by the Republican leader, although he predicted that for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1921, a reduction "by upwards of a billion dollars" would be effected, making the annual government expenses approximately $3,250,000,000. Fewer government employés and smaller appropriations for the army and navy were cited by Mr. Mondell as possibilities for reductions after July 1, 1921.

CHAMP CLARK TO BE NAMED BY HIS OWN DISTRICT

Montgomery City, Mo., June 19.—Congressman Champ Clark will be placed in nomination for president at the Democratic national convention, it was announced here today by Judge Emil P. Rosenberger, delegate to the convention from the Ninth [Clark's] district.

If Clark is not nominated before Missouri is reached, Judge Rosenberger will present his name.

The refusal of William G. McAdoo to enter the race and "ever growing sentiment for Clark" makes Clark the ideal candidate, the judge declared.

Mr. Clark, who has represented the Ninth district in congress twenty-six years, so far has refused to enter the race formally.

MAYOR CLEARS WAY TO BOLT IF HE'S BEATEN

New Organization Comes Into Existence.

Mayor Thompson yesterday built the springboard from which he can either leap into the proposed new "third party" or turn a double somersault back into the arms of the G. O. P.

It is labeled "The Pro-American Branch of the Republican Party," under which title it was incorporated with the secretary of state at Springfield by a half a dozen of the mayor's closest political friends.

Its use is to be decided by eventualities.

The principal determining factors will be:

1. The result of the September primaries, particularly as they affect the future of Gov. Lowden and the control of the state by the Thompson forces.

2. The final adjudication of the dispute as to whether the "new" Thompson or the "old" anti-Thompson county and state committees shall be given recognition by the Republican national committee and campaign managers.

Ready for Bolt.

If Gov. Lowden should be renominated or the Republican national campaign managers should abide by the Supreme court decision and refuse recognition to the invalid Thompson committees it is expected that the springboard will be turned in the direction of the "third party."

If the city hall defeats Lowden or the Lowden candidate for governor at the September primaries, or if it is recognized by the national campaign managers, then, it is expected, that the use of the springboard will be perfectly "regular."

The stated purposes of the "Pro-American Branch of the Republican Party" as filed with the secretary of state leave it a wide open future.

Purposes Are Stated.

They are, to quote the incorporators:

To revive and promulgate the Americanism of George Washington and the Republicanism of Abraham Lincoln.

To resist the aggressions of organized wealth, and

To rededicate the Republican party to the cause of human freedom and the welfare of the American people.

There are indications, however, that for the present at least, the Thompsonites are not prepared for an open break with the national Republican party.

Statement Is Issued.

In a statement issued after the incorporation papers were secured they say:

"The purpose of those promoting this organization are comprehensively stated by its objects.

"The declaration of these principles in the Republican party is necessarily in general terms. Some of them were more specifically stated by Senator Harding in his primary campaign in Ohio, as follows:

"'Keep America for Americanism and avoid entangling alliances with old world powers.

"'Favor a return to normal business conditions and a square deal all around.

"'Favor reduction of expenses of government operation.

"'Oppose compulsory military training for the youth of the land.

"'Oppose the establishment in this country of the European system of conscription in times of peace.'"

A further and fuller statement is promised within a few days.

List of Incorporators.

The incorporators of the new Thompson organization are Harry B. Ward, who was elected by the Thompson forces as secretary of the Republican state central committee, which was knocked out by the Supreme court decision; George B. Gillespie, attorney for the Thompson forces in the hearing in the primary law case before the Supreme court; Virtus C. Rohm, chairman of the Republican county central committee, knocked out by the Supreme court decision; William H. Reid, commissioner of public service; Charles N. Wheeler, special writer for the Republican, the Thompson organ; Irene Pease Mantonya, one of the leaders in the Thompson women's organizations, and Cornelius R. Miller.

The organization, it was decided, will extend throughout the state, it being planned to have branches in every county.

While the Thompson forces were filing their incorporation papers in Springfield, notices were being sent out for a "Thompson for president" meeting today at 3519 South State street.

"Harding was silent on mob rule and opposed the bonus for soldiers," read the summons for today's session. "We call William Hale Thompson as candidate for president of the United States, on the new party ticket, as the man who will enforce the constitution and keep this government out of the hands of 'foreign jugglers.'"

Wilson Thanks Knights for Honor Paid Him

New York, June 19.—President Wilson's appreciation of the fact that the Knights of Columbus' statute of Lafayette, to be presented to France in August, will contain a bas relief of Mr. Wilson, was expressed in a letter received today from Joseph P. Tumulty, the president's secretary, by James A. Flaherty, supreme knight.

"The president deeply appreciates the compliment," the letter said.

The relief shows Mr. Wilson in the act of declaring to congress that Alsace-Lorraine must be restored to France. The statue is to be unveiled by Marshal Foch.

Raise $4,000 at Picnic to Buy Cows for Germany

A fund of $4,000 which will be used to purchase cows to be shipped to Germany was raised yesterday at a picnic held under the auspices of the American Dairy company, of which Heinrich Heine is president at Highland park. Two thousand persons attended the barbecue, vaudeville program and oratorical contest on the grounds of William Moritz, 1441 Deane avenue, Highland park.

Tammany Chiefs With Their Families

MISS EMILY SMITH, GOV. ALFRED SMITH, MRS. ALFRED SMITH.

TAMMANY CHIEFS REACH CHICAGO; PLAN PROGRAM

Murphy and Smith Talk with Brennan.

Charles F. Murphy, boss of Tammany Hall, and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Tammany's complimentary candidate for president, arrived in Chicago yesterday with their families. They had left French Lick Springs, Ind., where they had been preparing to make a fight against the nomination of William G. McAdoo for president, to find upon their arrival that the fight was not necessary and that McAdoo had put himself out of the race.

Naturally they were pleased, but they did not express themselves as so. As usual, the Tammany boss kept silence before newspaper men, and the governor followed his example.

They did confer with George E. Brennan, chairman of the Illinois delegation to the Frisco convention, and agreed with him that the elimination of McAdoo revived the possibility of a third term candidacy for President Wilson. They also agreed with him that the condition of the president's health made it inadvisable for him to run. They let it be understood that they were not averse to the candidacy of Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio.

The Programs Agree.

The Tammany program at the convention is much the same as that of Illinois—namely:

Binding state delegations by the unit rule.

Retention of the two-thirds rule.

Suppression of the influence of William J. Bryan.

Liberal interpretation of the prohibition amendment, preservation of state rights, and modification of the Volkstead enforcement act.

Declaration of sympathy for the "Irish republic" in the platform.

Lewis Nixon, New York public service commissioner, joined them later.

Joseph E. Davies, head of the Wisconsin delegation and former chairman of the federal industrial board, also arrived in the city yesterday, stopping at the Blackstone. He expressed regret at McAdoo's refusal to be a candidate and said he now favored the nomination of Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska.

McAdoo Friends Back Palmer.

San Francisco, Cal., June 19.—[Special.]—Secretary Newman of the Palmer committee tonight made the following statement:

"There is no reason to accept Mr. McAdoo's statement at anything except what it purports to be, and we presume his friends will abide by his wishes and refrain from presenting his name to the convention.

"One inevitable result of his withdrawal is a marked movement of McAdoo leaders and delegates to Palmer.

"I am happy to announce Raymond Baker, director of the mint and until today one of the stanchest McAdoo supporters in the country, joined the Palmer forces."

"I was sorry Mr. McAdoo determined upon the course he has taken," said Mr. Baker tonight. "However, I know his statement is sincere and I have a telegram from him confirming it. As a Democrat interested in Democratic success I am now unqualifiedly for Mitchell Palmer."

Hant "L" Motorman as Bandit Who Robbed Girl

An elevated motorman and a brown curly haired companion are being sought by the police as the two highwaymen who attacked Miss Lena Techlaw, a telephone operator, dragged her into an alley, and robbed her of $15 early yesterday morning, while she was on the way to her home at 3053 East Eighty-seventh street. Miss Techlaw was hysterical and under the care of a physician yesterday, when she told her story to the police.

Seeks Damages of City for Race Riot Injuriese

Fred Speer, 3642 Indiana avenue, blames the city for failing to protect him during the race riots last summer. He declares, in a suit filed in the Superior court yesterday for $2,500 damages, that he lost his false teeth, his spectacles, his clothes, and a watch and chain when Negroes set upon him during the rioting.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES F. MURPHY.

JOHNSON BREAKS HIS SILENCE TO ADMIRE WEATHER

Senator Hiram Johnson, after twenty-four hours' sojourn near the scene of his recent defeat for the Republican presidential nomination, continued his silence yesterday on the outcome of the Republican convention.

The senator took an early morning stroll on Michigan boulevard when a TRIBUNE reporter met him almost directly under the spot where the big "Hiram Johnson for President" sign had been hanging during the convention week.

"Too bad we couldn't have had this delightfully cool weather for the convention" said the senator.

"Are you saying anything yet about the nomination of Harding and your attitude toward the ticket?" the senator was asked.

"Not a thing," was the reply.

At that moment Harold L. Ickes of Chicago, a Lowden supporter and one of the Republican progressives came along. Senator Johnson grabbed Ickes' arm and the two walked back to the Blackstone. Later Mr. Ickes said there was no political significance in his talk with the California senator, senator when he is in town. Senator and Mrs. Johnson leave tonight.

DE PAUL CONFERS HONOR DEGREE ON SPAIN'S ENVOY

The Very Rev. Thomas F. Levan, president of De Paul university, conferred the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon Señor Juan Riano y Gayangos, the Spanish ambassador to the United States, at the commencement exercises Friday night. It was awarded in recognition of Señor Gayangos' efforts in protecting American citizens and their property, and in supervising American interests in Germany and Austria-Hungary during the war.

Convicts 5, Frees 14, and Disagrees on 12 Rail Men

Los Angeles, Cal., June 19.—Five guilty, fourteen not guilty, and a disagreement as to twelve was the report returned today by the jury hearing the case of thirty-one railroad men tried in the United States District court here on charges of violation of the Lever act through alleged participation in the switchmen's strike last April.

BUBONIC PLAGUE CASE IS FOUND IN MEXICO CITY

Mexico City, June 19.—A case suspected of being bubonic plague has been discovered in this city, according to the Democrata today. The newspaper quotes the subcommissioner of the first police precinct as reporting to the health department that "according to reports," a patient was suffering from the plague. The version of the case given by a reporter for the newspaper, however, says the suspect patient, a woman, is dead.

Two New Cases in Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, June 19.—Two new cases of the bubonic plague were reported here yesterday.

If True, We May Have to Hold New World's Fair

And now old sea tanned, weather scarred John Scolvo lumbers out of the grave he has occupied for some 400 years to start a Cook-Peary controversy with the late Christopher Columbus. Through his present day spokesman, Dr. Sofus Larsen, librarian of the University of Copenhagen, old John, a Dano-Norwegian navigator, claims he beat Columbus to America by sixteen years. In a recent publication Dr. Larsen claims Scolvo sailed by way of Greenland and Iceland and landed on the mainland of Labrador in 1476. Dr. Larsen's work has been translated by J. Christian Bay, head of the medical reference section of the John Crerar library, who says he believes Scolvo's claim is authentically established.

Faherty Sends Wacker to Plead with Bankers

Michael J. Faherty, "builder of the Thompson administration," has sent an olive branch to Chicago bankers by way of Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago plan commission. He said he had asked Mr. Wacker to explain to bankers that the only work the city is doing now is necessary preliminary work to big improvements which will not be actually begun for two years." In a recent statement James B. Forgan declared that the city is headed for bankruptcy unless it makes immediate retrenchments.

OLYMPIAN WRECKED; SIX HURT.

Marmath, N. D., June 19.—Six persons were seriously injured when the Olympian, east bound passenger train on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad was derailed near Buffalo Springs, S. D., yesterday. Heavy rains had impaired the roadbed.

HEARST TRUMPET FOR NEW PARTY; "DELAY A PERIL!"

"We Must Consecrate Ourselves Anew!"

New York, June 19.—William Randolph Hearst, in a signed editorial in his New York American and other papers, calls for the organization of a new political party. He concludes his appeal as follows:

"Citizens: Delay is dangerous; immediate action is imperative. Let us assemble in a new Independence hall, issue a new declaration of political independence, and consecrate ourselves anew to the human rights and popular liberties this republic was created to conserve."

Says Johnson Was Foredoomed.

Hearst denounced the action of the Republican convention at Chicago and says of Hiram Johnson:

"Johnson was foredoomed to defeat in that convention of hidebound reactionaries and subsidized politicians because he was progressive and because he was popular."

Referring to the resolution adopted in memory of Roosevelt, Hearst says:

"It was like a desecration of the dead, for it was obvious enough that the Republican party has no use for any progressive except a dead progressive; that it considers a dead progressive an asset and a live progressive a liability."

Democrats Surrender to Baruch.

As to the Democratic party, Hearst says:

"The Democratic party offers no refuge for independent, upstanding Americans. It has traded its few progressive policies for the promise of a Baruch campaign fund raised from the same predatory interests that control and corrupt the Republican party. It has abandoned its Americanism and sacrificed its very democracy to become the agent of an autocrat more concerned in magnifying his importance abroad than he is in protecting the welfare of his own people at home. It has nothing to offer but the warning spectacle of the blind leading the blind into the ditch of defeat."

The editorial does not mention the third party convention called by the committee of forty-eight to meet in Chicago in July and does not specifically call for a meeting at any definite time or place.

New York Gets 2,646,554 Quarts of Milk in a Day

New York, June 19.—A new high record for the amount of milk received in New York City was established today when 2,646,554 quarts came in, according to Ole Salthe, acting director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs.

Police Arrest Girl and 'Husband' for Silk Theft

The trail of a large quantity of silk missing from the John V. Farwell company led Detective Sergeants Bolum and Magnum yesterday to 5513 Kenwood avenue, where they arrested Miss Nellie Cline, a clerk employed in the company's silk department. More than $2,000 worth of the stolen silks is said to have been found in her room. The police also arrested George Weisterhousen, who has been posing as Miss Cline's husband.

GIMBEL JAILED ON CHARGE OF PROFITEERING

Says He Made 275 Per Cent on Clothing.

New York, June 19.—The arrest here today of Frederick Gimbel, member of Gimbel Bros., which operates large department stores in several cities, and a merchandise manager and clothing buyer of the establishment, will be followed by similar action against a number of other alleged profiteering department store merchants of like importance, it was stated at department of justice "flying squadron" headquarters here tonight.

Other department stores as large as Gimbel's already are under investigation and federal warrants will be requested as soon as inquiries are completed to allow agents to file charges of profiteering, Special Agent Price, who conducted the investigation of the Gimbel firm, stated. He predicted these additional warrants would be forthcoming at an early date.

Released on Bail.

Mr. Gimbel, Merchandise Manager J. J. Dowdell, and Clothing Buyer C. D. Slawter, who were arrested in the Gimbel Bros. case today, were released in $1,000 bail each by United States Commissioner Hitchcock after they had pleaded not guilty to charges of profiteering on four specific counts alleging profits of 90 to 275 per cent in clothing. Their preliminary examination was set for July 6.

$33 Suit Sold for $75, Charge.

One of the highest profits alleged to have been made was at an advertised sale of men's clothing. It is charged a suit costing $33 was sold for $75. Other charges were that a $5.50 mohair suit was sold at $20, a $15 suit was sold for $33.75, and another suit costing $5.50 was sold at $15.

Fixed Prices Illegal.

Washington, D. C., June 19.—Warning that agreements between manufacturers and dealers which prevent dealers from reducing the selling prices of manufactured articles is unlawful was sounded today by the department of justice as part of its campaign to lower the cost of living.

Indictments recently were obtained against the Colgate company, Attorney General Palmer stated, charging criminal violations of the Sherman act for procuring agreements with dealers to adhere to fixed resale prices.

General reduction in prices is expected by officials of the department as a result of the clear definition of the law, as it is pointed out that many merchants have been unable to cooperate in the campaign to lower living costs of the fixed prices on certain manufactured articles.

LISTEN TO THIS TALE OF WOE.

In Dr. Evans' column recently appeared a letter from "H. H." which was interesting enough to reproduce:

"H. H." writes: "Your article concerning the survey of defectives in a Minnesota district seems to me very instructive. Probably there is no such place which has not some defectives, at least some of the commoner kinds, but mixed in with a large majority of normals they are concealed from practically all observers. We have to observe a particularly bad district in order to get the full force of the situation—to understand degeneracy. When that bad district is a city slum we have largely erred in thinking that the bad surroundings account for the warped and twisted humans. But in a country district there is little excuse for this deception.

"I think it should be held that the defectives were crowded into the mountains or sought them to escape the pressure of civilization. If they were normals and were forced into the hills they would build roads, however difficult, and would keep in touch with the world, have a commerce, schools, etc.

"It seems a fair assumption that (a) when these eastern families moved to Minnesota they either settled in a place of average worth which became later a valley of little productivity because of their worthlessness, or (b) they deliberately settled in a poor country because they lacked the sense or the ambition to pick out good land.

"In other words, it is, for the greater part, the defective who makes the slum and when a normal is born in the slum he escapes.

"I have been much impressed of late with the idea that under harsher conditions of life the mortality rate of the subnormal was high enough to prevent a large proportion from living to the age of reproduction. But more and more in modern decades society has bent its energies to preserving every flicker of human life regardless of its source. Environment has been put to the front as everything.

"Two dogmas are accepted: that the merest flicker of human life, regardless of everything, is more precious than anything else, and that, except in the case of idiots and imbeciles, every person is capable of unlimited development and advancement. The good of the race is lost sight of entirely in this alignment of dogma. Nearly all of our civilization is merely making life easier to live. In so far as it is that it is distinctly decadent. It leads downward inevitably. A few more generations, perhaps only a few more decades, and the percentage of irresponsible will become too great to permit of stabilizing a society which grants so much individual freedom, which depends so much on personal character and discipline, which creates such an involved mode of living that a little halting in the machinery imperils all.

"If for three generations more we make life fatter and easier at the rate of present progress and permit the ready increase of the unfit while all responsible persons limit their offspring, we will have a condition in which democratic society as we know it will be impossible. It is not possible actually to visage these conditions because, if degeneracy increases very much, the elaborate means for making life more complex and interdependent as a condition for greater ease and luxury will be the first to fall.

"Self-government, when it works well, is the best government, not because it governs better, but because it implies and must have a wonderfully high average of individual powers. It means a lot of very capable folks. When they are less capable they cannot make the thing go and will, if they deteriorate enough, lose their self-governing estate. They will not even know they have lost it for a long time and a society ruined by the defectives will not know even that it has any except the outstanding. The fish cannot see the ocean."

It is true—is it not?—that much reform and philanthropic effort in the last half century have been directed to preserve the unfit.

It is true—is it not?—that as men the men of today are far below the men of Washington's time.

It is true—is it not?—that it would be practically impossible to check the reform tendency and let the unfit perish.

Then, with the unfit reproducing faster than the fit, and with the fit bending their strong efforts to preserve all the offspring of the unfit, where are we heading?

We hope "H. H." is seeing things at night; we hope that the stream of the unfit purifies itself by time and travel and sunlight, like a stream of water; but it is true that among other living beings the natural law of survival of the fittest obtains; and that among human beings the best of us are not raising our own children, but are raising the children of the worst of us.

RAVINIA PARK.

Ravinia Park opens its season next Saturday with Scotti in "Tosca," and will continue with him and other artists of the Metropolitan company of New York. Louis Eckstein's policy for the park has been to make each season a preliminary to a greater one, and this year no concessions at all are asked from criticism.

Opera at Ravinia is not opera with reservations. It presents a summer season which does not beg to be accepted with explanations. This accomplishment gives music in this locality a home and not merely lodging for the night. It gives a continuity to musical life and makes it, in the form of opera, a resident and not an exotic.

If middle western culture is to proceed with a root growth and not to be represented by an occasional bunch of cuttings for the table, it must have continuity and steady, sustained development. Ravinia Park, as recognized by all intelligent citizens, is one of the fundamental artistic institutions of the region.

It is open to the people of the region at prices which have no counterpart. What it needs is popular support at such prices, not because it is a place which the people ought to support esoterically but because it is a place they will thoroughly enjoy and which will enrich life.

WHAT BOLSHEVISM IS.

In the remarkable series of articles contributed to THE TRIBUNE by John Clayton and Col. Henry J. Reilly, both of THE TRIBUNE Foreign News service, and in the three full pages of photographs procured in Moscow by Mr. Clayton, our readers have placed before them an authentic picture of what bolshevism means to the nation stricken by it—a terrible picture, which democratic peoples may profit by, to renew their faith in the principles of individual liberty and of human progress through the individual's initiative, to renew their respect for the right of individual property as an incentive to individual and community development, and to renew their abhorrence of class war, the aggrandizement of the state, and the excesses of fanaticism.

Both Col. Reilly and Mr. Clayton are trained observers with strong liberal sympathies. Of Mr. Clayton it may be said that his prepossessions were strongly favorable to the bolshevist experiment. Both have come out of Russia, where they observed conditions at first hand. Col. Reilly was in Kiev, entering with the Polish and Ukrainian forces. Mr. Clayton entered Russia from Finland, and so has studied conditions at the center, talking with bolshevist officials and with all classes and factions, including our former resident, Emma Goldman.

The reports of both observers coincide in the conclusion that the Russian revolution in the hands of Lenin and Trotzky has fastened upon the Russian people a new tyranny, which is not restoring Russian energies but sapping them, which is obstructing restoration of both industries and agriculture, and which has maintained itself by the cruelties and oppressions of a ruthless minority. No private liberty which western capitalist democracies set up has been respected under the "dictatorship of the proletariat," neither free speech, nor free press, nor free assembly.

The dictatorship of the proletariat purported to make the hand master of the brain. All human progress has been won by the mastery of the hand by the brain. Russia under communism has but enforced history. Bolshevism, pretending to point the path of progress, has thrown the Russian people back into an era ages past in Europe and America. The forces which have brought peoples out of primitive conditions up to modern life—private initiative, stimulated by the right of private property, free thought and speech, respect for life, the accumulation and free employment of capital, the ballot and trial by jury—have all been suppressed. The classes which had acquired knowledge have been almost wiped out, and with them the leadership essential in modern life and in modern progress, in economics, finance, and social organization. The result is that all constructive activities in Russia are nearly paralyzed and there is an organization of ignorant force dominated and directed by a few fanatics and a greater number, though still a small minority, of self-seekers. The brain still controls the hand, but it is not the brains of Russia, but the brains of a very few men, many of them not Russian, who have contrived to control enough blind force to master the whole. In Russia, instead of evolution through the mind, there is a throw back to the tyranny of the jungle law, and the land is almost a waste after two years of bloodshed and destruction.

This is the picture drawn by men who have been in Russia and seen with their own eyes, heard with their own ears, what they report. In America the radicals shut their eyes to these facts because these facts explode their theories and stultify their claims. But there is one radical, at least, who cannot shut her eyes to the truth because she is in the thick of it.

"You're right, it is rotten," she said to Mr. Clayton. "But it is what we should have expected. We always knew the Marxian theory was impossible, a breeder of tyranny. We blinded ourselves to its faults in America because we believed it might accomplish something. I've been here four months now, and I've seen what it has accomplished. There is no health in it."

The hand never will rule the brain for any time. In moments of madness when it does it destroys itself. Labor of the hand, which topsy turvy theorists would set up to rule, must always be directed by the conceiving and planning mind. By this alone can the hand exist. The hand can contrive only the simplest necessities. Labor without capital and direction must dwell in the cave of the primitive man. When it seeks to rule it wipes out what makes labor endurable and in the progress of the human has brought labor out of darkness to a great and growing share in the rewards of civilization.

Editorial of the Day

HOW TO READ.

[Nebraska State Journal.]

Newspaper people are so accustomed to the depreciation of their work that most of them will polish their glasses and read again the remarks of Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale. "Read more newspapers and books," he advises, "and leave magazines alone if you want an educated public; magazines are filled with trivial stories."

Of course, newspapers are filled with trivialities also. Their chief advantage over the magazines lies in their headlines, their classification, and the arrangement of the matter which permits the reader to drop any subject after the opening paragraph without danger of losing any vital feature of the story. One can skim a newspaper in a few minutes, pausing only here and there to read with care something that especially interests them. A magazine cannot be dealt with in that way. It is necessary to read each article through to receive any benefit. If this cannot be done it were better to let it alone. When so competent an authority as this Yale professor condemns the magazine for its triviality, it is time to begin considering the whole question on a serious basis, for certain it is that an immense amount of time is spent perusing this form of literature.

When it comes to newspaper reading it should be understood that the whole business of producing them is based on the theory that few people will read everything they contain. The practice some people indulge in of reading every line in a newspaper from first page to last is wasteful of time and dissipating to the intellect. The headlines and the opening paragraphs and the classification of the material all serve as guides to enable the reader to find at once what he wants. If he is interested in the grain markets he turns first of all to that page. If baseball is his chief interest, he plunges into the box scores. If he lives and has his being in politics it will be hard to win his eyes away from Chicago date lines during the coming week. And so it goes. Every paper is made larger than anybody thinks necessary because of the necessity of appealing to all tastes and all grades of intelligence.

BOOK REVIEW.—One of the most useful of recent publications is "Impromptu Speeches: How to Make Them." It keeps our sanctum door from blowing shut.

KEEPING THE LINE.

(Charles Lamb, "Newspapers Thirty Years Ago.")

In those days every Morning Paper, as an essential retainer to its establishment, kept an author, who was bound to furnish daily a quantum of witty paragraphs. Sixpence a joke—and it was thought pretty high too—was Dan Stuart's settled remuneration in these cases. The chat of the day, scandal, but above all, dress, furnished the material. The length of no paragraph was to exceed seven lines. Shorter they might be, but they must be poignant.

A fashion of flesh, or rather pink-colored hose for the ladies, luckily coming up at the juncture when we were on our pr. tion for the plaice of Chief Jester to S.'s Paper, established our reputation in that line. We were pronounced a "capital hand." O the conceits which we varied upon red in all its prismatic differences! from the trite and obvious flower of Cythérea, to the flaming costume of the lady that has her sitting upon "many waters." Then there was the collateral topic of ankles. What an occasion to a tru. chaste writer, like ourself, of touching that nice brink, and yet never tumbling over it, of a seemingly ever approximating nething "not quite proper"; while, like a skillful posture-master, balancing betwixt decorums and their opposites, he keeps the line, from which a hair's breadth deviation is destruction; hovering in the confines of light and darkness, or where "both seem either"; a hazy uncertain delicacy; Autolycus-like in the Play, still putting off his expectant auditory with "Whoop, do me no harm, good man!" But above all, that conceit arrided us most at that time, and still tickles our midriff to remember, where, allusively to the flight of Astraea—ultima Coelestum terras reliquit—we pronounced—in reference to the stockings still—that Modesty, taking her final leave of mortals, her last blush was visible in her ascent to the heavens by the tract of the glowing instep. This might be called the crowning conceit; and was esteemed tolerable writing in those days.

But the fashion of jokes, with all other things, passes away; as did the transient mode which had so favored us. The ankles of our fair friends in a few weeks began to reassume their whiteness, and left us scarce a leg to stand upon. Other female whims followed, but none, methought, so pregnant, so invitatory of shrewd conceits, and more than single meanings.

MALARIA REWON PALESTINE?

WRITING on this Sunday morning for the people who will read on another Sunday morning, I have decided to translate some information about malaria conditions in Palestine as the Australians found them in 1917 and 1918.

The British advanced through Sinai in 1916. They did not suffer from malaria there except as a few troops formerly in the Egyptian delta had relapses. When they occupied the line from Gaza to Beersheba during the summer of 1917, they did not suffer from malaria.

There were enough mosquito breeding places, but Maj. Evans of the Australian army says the native population had moved out of the country and the mosquitoes were not infected.

In the autumn of 1917 Jerusalem was captured and the valley of the Jordan was occupied. The Jordan is a swiftly flowing stream with clean cut banks fairly free from growth of all kinds. It lies in a valley eleven miles wide and 1,300 feet below the sea level. Surrounding the valley is a brim of mountains 4,000 feet high. This makes a deep, hot, dry saucer in which insect life exists in great abundance.

This valley is watered in part by irrigation ditches built by Herod and in operation continuously since that time. Some of the feeders, creeks and rivers of the Jordan, are clear, rapid streams with well defined banks, while others are sluggish sloughs running through marshes. There are many springs. Bible readers will recall some of the springs of Palestine.

The British recognized that malaria would be a problem in the summer of 1918 if they continued to occupy the valley of the Jordan, as seemed inevitable. Up the river from Jericho, and crossing the old Roman road were two tributary rivers, Wadyel Anjah and Wady Nueramen, lying wholly within their lines.

A third stream, Wady el Mellahah, rose in a marsh within the Turkish lines, flowed through a marsh in no man's land, and there crossed into the area occupied by the British.

The Australians dug straight, clean banked ditches to carry the water of these streams within their lines, drained the marshes, and stopped Herod's irrigation ditches. They built an aqueduct to bring in a water supply.

All the ponds were covered with heavy petroleum oils. Insofar as was possible the stagnant waters were cleaned of weeds, brushes, algae, green scums, and all vegetable growth. Some bodies of water were stocked with mosquito-larva-catching minnows. The men were issued mosquito creams, gloves, and mosquito netting.

These precautions entirely would have saved the Australians from malaria had it not been for the mosquitoes which bred in no man's land and behind the Turkish lines, and which infected both armies. The Australians' malaria hospital rate was 2 per cent. On the other hand the Turks suffered greatly.

Maj. Evans said their hospitals were always filled with soldiers sick with malaria and the captured Turkish soldiers had to go straight to the hospital. Maj. Evans says the great prevalence of malaria in the Turkish army made the capture of Palestine easy.

Malaria, which is said to have wiped out the Grecian empire, to have destroyed the power of Rome, to have defeated Napoleon's Egyptian army, is thus credited with having wrested Jerusalem and all of Palestine from the grasp of the Ottoman empire.

TRY MODERN METHODS.

C. R. writes: "Will you please tell me what causes my little girl of 8 years to throw up? She started two years ago; had two spells during the summer months and three last winter. The spells are from three to five weeks apart since Christmas. We took her to a hospital, and the doctor there said it was her appendix. She throws up yellow greenish stuff. What causes it? She is constipated, more so the last six months. Could bad tonsils be a cause?"

REPLY.

Appendicitis easily could be the cause. Adhesions around the gall bladder or elsewhere in the abdomen could be the cause. Constipation is another possibility. The condition of the tonsils is not so apt to be the cause. The yellowish green vomit is bile which has run into her stomach because her intestines are working in the wrong direction.

When she gets a spell empty her lower bowel by several full enemas. Then give a palatable mild laxative. The custom of giving courses of calomel on the theory that the vomiting of bile means that the patient is bilious and his liver needs stimulating is a relic of the dark ages which does great harm.

WON'T HAVE BAD RESULTS.

Mrs. J. J. B. writes: "1. I took two ergot tablets by mistake for laxative tablets, but they did not cause me to menstruate. They were taken the week I should have menstruated.

"2. Will they harm or kill the fetus?

"3. Can anything be done to ward off any harm that might come from them?"

REPLY.

There will be no effect. Small and even moderate doses of ergot are harmless to the developing child.

TRY ARMY PRESCRIPTION.

W. R. writes: "Before I went into the army there was always something wrong with me, and after I was in the army for some time I could not feel any better. Now I have been out for six months, and I feel the same old way as before I went in the army. I have seen some of the best doctors, but they won't even tell me what is wrong with me. I am 25 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weigh only 140 pounds. I never have been sick in bed. There always is a pain some place. Can you tell me what this is, and what can be done for it, and also how to gain more weight? I cannot drink milk."

REPLY.

Why keep on thinking about your ills and running to "docs"? Map out your life on the army pattern. Eat the army food, bathe as you did in the army, sleep army hours. Do as much work and keep as busy as you did in the army and you will get in first class condition. There is no other way.

EX-SERVICE MEN AND THEIR INSURANCE.

It is hoped that no ex-service man will overlook reinstating his insurance before July 1 if he has let his insurance lapse and has been discharged for over eighteen months.

The premiums in arrears need not be paid. Only two months' premiums are required to put the policy in force again.

Call at one of the American Legion post stations or at the war risk insurance bureau, 1307 Stock Exchange building, Chicago, or the insurance section of the war department, Central Department, 230 East Ohio street, Chicago.

INSURANCE.

Kenmare, N. D., June 14.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Please give me the rate per thousand for a straight life policy, twenty payment life, and twenty year endowment at the age of 28.

Is there an accident clause that can be included and what is the cost of it?

Does this rate per thousand remain the same year after year or does it increase each year? E. E.

At age 28 the monthly premium rate per $1,000 is $1.39 for ordinary life insurance; $2.09 for twenty payment life; $3.34 for twenty year endowment.

There is no accident clause in the government insurance. If the insured becomes totally and permanently disabled, the insurance is paid to him in monthly installments.

The rate on the converted insurance remains fixed at the amount required at the age the insurance is converted. War term insurance increases in premium each year.

WILL LOSE MONEY.

Chicago, June 16.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—When in France a check was given me made out in francs. It was mislaid among some of my belongings and I have just come across it. I sent it into the war department, asking them to issue one to me made out in francs, but they returned it, saying they had no authority to do this. Where can I get it cashed? Am I to lose money through the present rate of exchange? Isn't there any protection for the soldiers who have similar experience?

T. Y.

You can get it cashed at any bank where you are known.

We regret to say that you will be the loser. The government has been very lax about this point and affords no protection to soldiers in your circumstances.

FULL FARE.

Chicago, June 16.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I happened to be in Chicago for a few days and picked up your paper. What I want to ask you is this: I am in the navy and am on my way home. Shouldn't I be granted a special rate?

G. E.

We presume you mean for traveling expenses.

If you are on leave at your own request you must pay full fare plus the war tax.

If you are traveling under orders of the navy you pay full fare but the war tax is omitted. However the navy would pay this expense.

UNDER AGE.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 15.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I have a son 16 years old who is very anxious to get into the navy. Is he old enough? Would he learn a trade and where would he go to enlist?

F. E. M.

Boys under 17 are not eligible for the navy. At the age of 17 they must have the written consent of their parents. At age 18 they must produce some evidence of their age, such as their birth certificate. He would have the opportunity to learn a trade in addition to his regular studies.

There is a summer school at Great Lakes Training station for boys under 17. It lasts for three months, after which time they are disenrolled.

NOT UP TO DATE.

Chicago, June 17.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Our neighbor has a number of chickens running at large, and they are kept in a very filthy condition, creating a disagreeable odor, also infesting our premises with rats. In addition to this nuisance, they possess a shrill-voiced rooster who keeps us awake most of the night. We have approached said party in a neighborly way requesting the yard be cleaned and the rooster disposed of, but obtained no results. Can something be done to eliminate this nuisance?

C. L. V.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on owner to remove accumulation of garbage and filth from coop and space occupied by chickens, abate nuisance of rats in coop and space occupied by chickens, and thoroughly clean and lime wash walls and ceiling of chicken coop.

WITHOUT A LEASE.

Chicago, June 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Last March my landlord told me my rent would be $5 higher on April 1. I've paid it. This month he informs me my rent will be raised $5 more, and no cleaning. He hasn't cleaned in two years. Is this legal? And can he raise my rent twice in three months? I haven't any lease.

E. P.

If you have never had an agreement for a longer term he can raise the rent when he chooses on thirty days' notice. The department of health forces cleaning on proper facts. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEWSBOYS' CRY.

Chicago, June 17.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is there anything that can be done to make the newsboys stop yelling their papers so early in the mornings. Especially on Sunday, which is our only day for a good rest, and the boys make it impossible. M. O'C.

Relative to newsboys crying their wares in the vicinity of residence of your correspondent early Sunday mornings, you are advised that a boy was found calling his papers on June 13, about 7 a. m. He told the officer he has a newspaper stand at Thirty-sixth street and Indiana avenue. He was warned to cease the practice of calling his papers early Sunday mornings, and states he will not call them any more, but merely deliver them to his customers.

The officers have been instructed to see that he keeps his promise.

JOHN J. GARRITY,
General Superintendent of Police.

BRITISHER DIVORCES.

Chicago, June 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can you inform me what course to take to annul a marriage contracted in England. Would steps have to be taken here or there?

2. Is there such a law there that when neither party has communicated for a certain number of years that the marriage is void, and what legal steps should be taken?

3. Also, would it make any difference if petitioner is a British subject or an American citizen? E. C.

1. Here, assuming that the complainant can show proper residence here.

2. Two years' desertion would be a ground for divorce under Illinois law.

3. No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SAVE THE COFFEE CUP.

South Bend, Ind., June 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—About that coffee amendment, I have been a constant disciple of THE TRIBUNE, and have noticed your drifting toward the wets. Now comes the coffee amendment of today, perhaps some fertile mind invented this as a joke, but if he means what he says he has failed to look and see who the voters are that have so persistently demanded the overthrow of Demon Rum during the last few years on the North American continent (excepting Mexico and Central America).

Let me repeat some of the old stuff the Prohibitionists drummed into our ears in the past, but of late they have stopped. Many have forgotten that coffee doesn't drive men home at night to beat their wives. Coffee doesn't craze men so they murder. Coffee doesn't befuddle the mind even like 2 per cent beer of the man in the engine cab, and cause him to fail to heed a signal and plunge a trainload of women and children into a wreck. All you dear readers remember the rest of this. It's all true, and don't let THE TRIBUNE worry you who like your coffee and your tobacco about a twentieth or twenty-first amendment, for it was not the fact that alcohol is injurious to the person who takes of it that brought on the condition we are now in. But it was the thinking voters who are willing to abstain (or try to) for the everlasting benefit of all the men, women and children, beasts and birds in America. But I won't promise you to stop reading your paper.

N. P. K.

THE COFFEE AMENDMENT.

Chicago, June 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your able editorial on a coffee amendment in today's TRIBUNE is much to the point, and the forerunner, let us hope, of others equally able and dealing with other pernicious vices to which this American nation seems so strongly and strangely addicted.

There are many evils, of course, besides coffee drinking that might be dealt with by constitutional amendment, if that is the remedy and does not merely divert the evil into other channels, as the eighteenth amendment has done for the alcohol evil.

Among these other evils to which effective legislation might well be applied I suggest an amendment or law dealing with the suppression of busybodies and the publishers and disseminators of pure bunk. With these narrow minded, narrow gauged fanatics legally forced to mind their own business, other amendments might then be unnecessary, and tobacco, chewing gum, and other harmless pleasures may yet be saved for the use of citizens of this country.

But, as you say, if logic is worth anything, a coffee amendment will follow. I quite agree. Here is the syllogism:

The American public likes bunk. Statement that coffee is harmful is bunk. Therefore American public will approve of statement—and finally express its approval of the statement and disapproval of coffee in a constitutional amendment.

THOMAS J. WILD.

A DARE TO THE DOCTOR.

Chicago, June 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I read with great interest an article in your valuable paper of June 11 in regard to the injuries brought by the use of coffee.

As I am not a citizen of this county and feeling that the American people's affairs are none of my business, I will not give my opinion in regard to the matter, nevertheless as Dr. Evans claims that "you cannot keep well and drink coffee," I wish to offer myself for a test.

I will drink between four and five gallons of liquid coffee monthly for any length of time—and keep well—and smoke an average of 100 good Havana cigars per month for good measure. The only condition I make is that the coffee shall be good and made by me, which will be about 1,000 per cent stronger than the coffee commonly used in the United States.

Of course, Dr. Evans or any other doctor may say that I would not live long and there would be no one to refute his statement, so I will give a few figures which will answer that.

The average person in Rio de Janeiro drinks more and stronger coffee during the month than the average person in the United States drinks in one year. Nevertheless Rio de Janeiro in 1910 with a population of 811,000 had 178 centenarians and France with a population of 38,000,000 for all the country had 184, and if Dr. Evans takes the pains to analyze the death rate of the different countries he will find some food for thought.

As far as I am concerned I have been drinking coffee, strong and plenty, since I was born, and although I am 30 years old, never was sick except with malaria fever in West Africa, and with flu in Chicago two years ago, notwithstanding the fact that I have traveled in eight countries and in some of them in times of contagious diseases.

Metchnikoff, who wrote a book on longevity, states that a lady in Petrograd lived 118 years and drunk an average of forty cups of coffee per day. What next?

ANNIBAL M. PERREIRA,
Brazil-American Bureau.

COURTESY—GOING UP!

Chicago, June 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wonder if Chicago people, generally speaking, know how very rude and ill mannerly they are, or, at least, they have impressed me as such. I am a lady elevator operator for a flies department store in Chicago. Many times passengers in the elevator are talking and go past their floors which, had they paid attention, they would not have missed. Many times I have taken them back (which I do not actually have to do) without a word of thanks. I try to be courteous at all times and have an unusual amount of patience with the public, but I do wish the public would think that Chicago often gets a black eye just because of their crude, ill mannerly ways. During this convention week the visiting women have certainly been perfect ladies, and it has been a real pleasure for me to go out of my way, if necessary, to be nice to them. C. M.

Last week's best circulators in the Public library were:

"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"The Portygee," by Joseph C. Lincoln.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"The Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Keynes.
"The Great Desire," by Alexander Black.
"Avowals," by George Moore.

THERE has been too much lately of the preservation between covers of the necessarily ephemeral newspaper stuff which columnists and visiting authors and other dignati set down. Every precious syllable is collected from the yellowing files of newspapers and magazines and reprinted in blue and gold covers, with "Price, $2" as its trademark of virtue, and shelves are cluttered with the sort of things that our grandmothers used to cut out and paste in scrap books—except that most of it never would have enjoyed the dignity of the scissoring. All of which is the result of reading Rudyard Kipling's "Letters of Travel." They are mostly scraps of journalism written in his younger days when he traveled by his pen. In the good old days of passes the Canadian Pacific used to take every year a group of newspaper men on a free tour, and get, through their consequent writings, thousands of dollars' worth of free advertising. Many of the leading lit'ry lights of America have gone on that tour. Rudyard Kipling was provided with a private car, but otherwise he fared no more luxuriously than the countless literati who yearly visited the expensive haunts of the Canadian élite. Practically the entire book is written in that style—a literary return for travel. It is not Kipling at even his second best. His tirade against New York in the first letter is a childish sticking out of his tongue at the American people, who, we all admit, is a child itself and prone to make faces at the rest of the world, but who is always nice to the little boy from next door until he starts telling how much greater his mother and father are. Rudyard Kipling is guilty of extreme ungraciousness. Articles written in the heat of his disappointment at finding New York suffering from a severe attack of the measles of torn up streets and subways in the making might be excused. They were pertinent and forgivable in 1892. Republished as literature in 1920, when they were meant for nothing but journalism thirty years ago, is unforgivable. The later travels, in 1913 in Egypt, are less vitriolic, but they, too, class as good journalism instead of literature.

"Married Life" is May Edgington's idea of a typical modern marriage, and is dedicated "In admiration to a completely successful husband," but she does not add "my own."

Now and then a plea goes up for a good old fashioned story with all of the pitfalls and mud holes imaginable in the course of true love, with the shadow of death parting the true lovers and breaking into the sunlight of life, with—you know the kind of story that makes helpless sentimentalists out of half of the women in the world and potential divorcées out of the happily married ones. "The Cry of Youth" is the answer to that plea, a "strong love story," as the press agents say. Cynthia Lombard has written in it an idyll of an Italian mountain peak which will make the bookings to Italy even harder to get.

"France and Ourselves" is a collection of the immortal works of Herbert Adams Gibbons on the subject of the relationship between France and America—a relationship which is settling back into a normal friendliness now, after a few years of almost maudlin devotion on both sides and a few months of sickening hatred on both sides. Mr. Gibbons has, in "France and Ourselves," written some very enlightening things about France since the war—not literature, but interesting for the facts they contain.

Lew Sarett, poet of "Many, Many Moons," stopped by the other day on his way to the chief ranger's office in Yellowstone. He is to be a forest ranger all summer and to write pomes on top of mountain peaks. Next year he will be a member of the faculty of Northwestern.

In the death of Eleanor H. Porter, whose Pollyanna is still the most popular girl character in America, the country lost one of the few completely New England women writers. She did not write typical New England stories, but she was personally peculiarly of the land of our first settlers. She was born in a village in the White mountains. She went from there to the Boston Conservatory of Music. After that she taught music in Boston. In 1894 she married John Lyman Porter, a Boston business man, and after that she lived practically all of the time in Cambridge.

"Maureen" is the old Patrick MacGill again, the author of "The Rat Pit" and "Children of the Dead End," the almost merciless transcriber of Irish poverty and grimness, with very little of the lighter humors which got into Mr. MacGill's pen during the war. "Maureen" is a cold, hard tale of a girl without an official father, of the sordid life of the peasants of Donegal, and of a Sinn Fein movement which is startling and dramatic in its climax. It is not the great book that his first two were. "The Rat Pit" and "The Children of the Dead End" are masterpieces of power and beauty in sordidness.

Gerald Stanley Lee always reminds me of the pompous gentleman who used, when I was a little girl, to stand, with two fingers stuck in the bosom of his Prince Albert coat (or whatever they were called then), with the Stars and Stripes floating above him on the bandstand at the fair grounds, and, after the town band had murdered "The Star Spangled Banner" while he stood thus, delivered the Fourth of July oration. He was always bombastic; he said a lot of things that sounded very patriotic and cosmic, but somehow on the morning of the fifth of July he settled back into being old man Rogers (or whatever his name was) and nobody but the rest of his G. A. R. post thought he was the greatest citizen of the town. Every so often Gerald Stanley Lee strikes an attitude and delivers an oration to the American people. What he says is—well, let's say thought provoking. It stirs up a wave of respect for the occasion rather than for the orator, and then, suddenly, it is forgotten. His latest oration is "The Ghost in the White House," already in a fourth edition, already having summoned a crowd. The "ghost" is "a vague, helpless abstraction, a kind of ghost of the nation called the people"—an oration about what the people demand in the president, of their beliefs about the job of being president. He suggests that "the American people, when they see what I am believing in this book, would be inclined in looking up their candidate for the president to pick out a president who would have written this book—the gist of it—if he had time." And there you are.

"Old Junk," by H. M. Tomlinson, is a collection of brief records of travel on land and sea and in the spirit, pictures of voyages along the African coast, through tempests, and across clear, blue waters. Mr. Tomlinson writes with that rare sense of the beauty of words which is Conrad's special power. His ideas are delightful; his sharing them real literature. "Old Junk" is casual, for it is an assortment of unrelated short essays, but it is altogether charming.

"What's the World Coming To?" is Rupert Hughes' latest best seller. Distilled from the dregs of the war, which he drained in "The Cup of Fury," this new story is a picture of America in early peace times, of America today. Whatever one says for or against Rupert Hughes as a representative American novelist, this one must say, that he does his forging while the metal is red hot. He writes of today, not of yesterday or tomorrow, and because he writes of the present as we are living it, as he is living it, he makes backgrounds which are historically important and will be so considered in the future by literary historians. He writes a good story; his plots are always exciting, usually so thrilling that the reader forgets that the book is also a trenchant commentary on contemporary life. Once you realize that Rupert Hughes is primarily interested in recording contemporary American life and not in writing best sellers his novels won't seem merely ephemerally entertaining.

Mrs. Rupert Hughes is making her debut as a poet in "Diantha Goes the Primrose Way."

"The Boy Scout and Other Stories for Boys," by Richard Harding Davis, is a fresh volume added to what Augustus Thomas calls "safe stuff to give a young fellow who likes to take off his hat and dilate his nostrils and feel the wind in his face."

Daisy Ashford, after speaking sharply to Satan time and again, has finally—after the manner of the old tale—been pushed into the temptation which she was praying against. "Daisy Ashford: Her Book" will be brought out some time this month, with all the remaining masterpieces of her childhood, together with "The Jealous Governess or the Granted Wish," by Angela Ashford, her sister.

"Debs," the authorized life and letters of the official martyr of the Socialist party, has been set down by David Karsner and published by Boni & Liveright. The fate of Eugene V. Debs—whether he remains in the Atlanta prison for the full term of ten years or is released, as many active pro-Germans have been released—remains on the knees of the government. A concerted plea is being made for the annulment of his sentence. This life, written with passionate devotion, is propaganda for his release.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

"THOUGH LOST TO SIGHT, TO MEMORY DEAR."
By Thomas Moore.

Sweetheart, good-by! The fluttering sail
Is spread to waft me far from thee;
And soon before the favoring gale
My ship shall bound across the sea.
Perchance, all desolate and forlorn,
These eyes shall miss thee many a year;
But unforgotten every charm—
Though lost to sight, to memory dear.

Sweetheart, good-by! One last embrace!
O, cruel fate, two souls to sever!
Yet in this heart's most sacred place
Thou, thou alone, shall dwell forever.
And still shall recollection trace
In fancy's mirror, ever near,
Each smile, each tear, upon that face—
Though lost to sight, to memory dear.

SINGLE HANDED, U. S. FLYER SINKS BOLSHEVIK SHIP

Red Troops Fight for Lives in Dnieper.

WITH THE POLISH ARMY AT THE FRONT, May 18.—[Delayed]—Confirmation of destruction of a bolshevik tropship in the Dneiper river by an American aviator of the Kosciusko squadron during the Polish Ukraine drive has been received by the Polish military authorities. The American credited with this military feat, accomplished single handed, is Lieut. George M. Crawford of Wilmington, Del., a member of the Kosciusko squadron of American aviators for nearly a year.

In the retreat across the Dnieper the bolsheviki used steamboats. Word was sent to Maja. Cedric E. Fauntleroy of Chicago and McGehee of Arkansas, squadron commander, to put a stop to the movement. Lieut. Crawford was assigned to the task.

Attack Troopship.

Lieut. Crawford loaded both his machine guns with incendiary ammunition. After a flight of nearly one hundred kilometers he located one of the troopships and at once attacked it, in the face of rifle fire from the soldiers. The American swept the ship's decks with his machine gun fire, many of the bolsheviki jumping overboard.

Lieut. Crawford attacked again, the wings of his airplane being pierced by bullets. He saw a fire start and watched the ship, enveloped in flames, settle down into the water, while hundreds of soldiers fought for their lives. The ship disappeared, according to reports by members of the Polish army.

Polish Army in Peril.

BERLIN, June 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Alarming reports of the military situation on the Polish bolshevik front are received from Breslau.

The Poles have suffered important reverses, it is said, and in some parts of the front large bodies of troops may be forced to surrender.

Among the losses reported to have been suffered by the Poles, the report says, are two regiments of cavalry, which were annihilated, and 30,000 prisoners taken by the bolsheviki, who also have captured 165 cannon. The fall of Minsk is expected, it is asserted.

Reds Menace Warsaw.

The front from Dunaburg to Podolsk is yielding gradually, and belief is expressed that Warsaw may be occupied by soviet troops. Gen. Haller's men at Czenstochow have mutinied and expelled some of their officers. Near Kiev the Poles have withdrawn to the line they occupied on April 20, where the Third and Seventh army corps are surrounded and may be forced to capitulate.

POLES DISCREDIT RUMORS.

New York, June 19.—The alarming views from Berlin concerning reported conditions on the Polish front are not shared by the official Polish bureau of information here, which stated today that its dispatches from Warsaw showed the Polish front was being strongly held some 350 to 450 miles east of Warsaw.

More Troops to Protect Japanese at Nikolaievsk

HONOLULU, T. H., June 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Japanese war office has announced it will send additional troops to Nikolaievsk, according to a Tokio cablegram to the Nippu Jiji, Japanese language newspaper here. A number of Japanese soldiers and civilians were killed at Nikolaievsk by bolsheviki last winter.

POLISH ARMY DEFEATED

1—Disquieting reports concerning the safety of the Polish army are coming from Breslau, Silesia. The Beresina line, it is known, has gone to pieces and Minsk is in danger. The southern end of the line has also collapsed as the Poles pulled back from Kiev.

2—Warsaw is reported to be in danger of falling.

3—The Polish archives are said to be removed to Posen, and many Poles are fleeing into Germany.

4—The Polish News bureau denies these reports, and claims that they are simply exaggerations of the retreat from Kiev and the reverses on the Beresina.

DE VALERA CALLS CHARGES FALSE; CHICAGO LOYAL

New York, June 19.—[Special.]—John Devoy, Justice Cohalan, and others having charged Eamonn De Valera with "meddling in American politics" and spending $50,000 which should have gone to Ireland, the president of the Irish republic says he regards the charges as "symptoms of a disease brought on by lack of coöperation and coördination." He says the $50,000 is greatly exaggerated and that the money came from the Irish treasury. That, too, was where the cash from the sale of Irish bonds went.

"We did not spend more than half that sum at Chicago," he asserted. He characterized the charges as a "tissue of misstatements."

John M. Flynn, secretary of the Chicago local council of the Friends of Irish Freedom, yesterday denied there had been a break between that organization and Eamonn De Valera. "By its constitution and the wishes of its members, the organization is whole heartedly behind President De Valera," said Secretary Flynn. "We affirm our absolute confidence in President De Valera."

Red Fears Steal Away as League Procrastinates

LONDON, June 19.—The decision by the council of the league of nations to await the result of the soviet government's promises to evacuate Enzeli, Persia, before the league takes action on the request of Persia for defense against the bolsheviki is characterized by the soviet government as a defeat of the league of nations, according to an official wireless message from Moscow.

Caruso Offers $10,000 for Return of Jewels

East Hampton, N. Y., June 19.—A reward of $10,000 "with no questions asked" was offered today for the recovery of the $500,000 worth of jewels recently stolen from the boudoir of Mrs. Enrico Caruso here. The announcement was made by A. C. Bennett, representing a Manhattan insurance company.

'TIGER' BRANDED AID OF ENGLAND AT FRENCH LOSS

Assailed for Halting Gen. d'Esperey in 1918.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, June 18.—Former Premier Clemenceau's political enemies in Paris are exulting today over what they believe to be a definite opportunity to ruin "The Tiger" at the end of his long career.

Andre Fribourg, deputy secretary of the chamber committee on foreign relations, has notified Premier Millerand that he is going to interpellate on the eastern question and all matters pertaining to it since October, 1918.

The chief purpose of this interpellation, according to the French press, is to bring to light M. Clemenceau's attitude toward the army of the orient and his orders to Gen. Franchet Desperey halting the advance of the French troops toward Budapest and Munich.

Charged with Favoring England.

Politicians here declare that the investigation may lead to the indictment and trial of Clemenceau for placing England's interests above those of France.

Yesterday morning Le Matin printed a letter from M. Clemenceau to the general, made public by Paul Benazet of the chamber foreign committee, which they say is only one of a number in a dossier which will be published during the progress of the inquiry. This letter ordered the general to cease the march toward Munich and changed the direction toward Odessa. M. Clemenceau explained his intentions of using the army of the orient against the bolsheviks.

Didn't Want Victory in East.

The publication of this letter was followed this morning by a leader in the Oeuvre, headed: "Clemenceau Deserves Well from England," charging that the former premier of France is playing England's game throughout the operations in the east and that English objected to a decision of the war on the eastern theater, which would put French troops into the enemy capitals during the negotiations of peace, and that to prevent this he stopped the march of the victorious aramy toward Budapest and Munich.

The attitude of the French press towards Clemenceau is one more indication of the bitterness of the feeling that is rapidly growing up between France and England on the eastern question. M. Briand has declared his intention of partaking in the debate which will follow the interpellation. His attitude is indicated by an article by Bare, former chief of the cabinet, in this morning's Eclair.

"After the breaking of the Bulgarian front," he says, "most people wondered why Gen. D'Esperey didn't make a move to his decisive victory. One expected a march by our troops on Budapest, Munich, and Vienna. We know today, thanks to the letter published in Le Matin, that it was Clemenceau who prevented this. He ordered the breaking up of the army of the orient at a moment when the most glorious hopes were entertainable.

"Clemenceau is not, perhaps, always coherent in his ideas, but he is very tenacious in his hatred. The Saloniki army was unbearable to him, as it was Briand, who constituted it, despite Clemenceau's vehement protest.

"When Lord Kitchener wanted to recall the British troops belonging to it, M. Clemenceau supported him fully, even, it is said, sending to London one of his friends to change the opinion of Lloyd George, who was preferring the argument of Briand to those of Kitchener. Very fortunately Clemenceau failed in his attempt."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

In the story of the arrest of two men accused of using the name of the Elks' club for advertising purposes published yesterday the name of Cameron Fish was used as chairman of the cowboy sports contest committee. Justin McCarthy is the chairman.

In reporting the filing of the inventory of the estate of Dr. H. J. Haiselden yesterday THE TRIBUNE stated he was chief surgeon of the German-American hospital, "now called the Grant." Dr. Haiselden was never connected with the Grant hospital, Grant place and Larrabee street. There is no connection between the Grant hospital and the German-American hospital.

GREEK PREMIER'S VISIT SURPRISE TO ALLIED CHIEFS

FOLKESTONE, England, June 19.—The arrival here this evening of the Greek premier, Eliphtherios Venizelos, occasioned considerable surprise. He was accompanied by the Greek minister at London. Officials do not deny the presence of M. Venizelos is unexpected; some even talk of the "unbidden guest."

It can hardly be supposed, however, the visit of the Greek premier is a surprise to the allied premiers meeting here. In addition to the questions of the German indemnity and the carrying out by the Germans of treaty obligations, an important point in the discussions will be the Turkish settlement.

Premier Lloyd George tonight sent M. Venizelos an invitation to lunch with the premiers at Sassoon tomorrow.

Our Every Claim About Britigan Subdivisions Fully Justified

For years we have been selling Chicago subdivision property to the people of Chicago. In all, we have sold to the public over 50 subdivisions, some large and some small, amounting to over twenty millions of dollars. When a house like ours can point to that immense volume of business it shows that the house is active, honest, and that its patrons are satisfied. When, however, a house can point to that volume of business and say that all these properties have increased in value a very substantial average since we sold them, then such a house feels a justifiable pride in this record and is more confident that the public at large will rely upon its claims for future offerings.

Increased Values Range From 10% up to 1400%

We have instances of properties that have increased in value as much as 1400% in the last six years. There are many lots that show increases of from 10% to 100%. We have subdivisions that have been improved and sold to the public at prices 50% lower than those properties could be purchased and improved today. We have subdivisions on which hundreds of buildings have been erected, including schools, churches, stores and shops. In other words, we have back of us a fine record of achievement made in the face of the most abnormal conditions that ever existed, when war clouds darkened the horizon and people found it difficult to keep up their investment enthusiasm.

Our Customers Have Been Our First Consideration

Britigan subdivisions have been built for Britigan purchasers. Month after month and year after year we have built our good will on the basis of promises fulfilled and great things accomplished. No matter how bad the weather the ditches have been dug and the sewer pipes and gas mains laid. No matter how high the price of labor and material, we have paved our streets and built our sidewalks. We have kept faith with every one of our purchasers. We have made each property what we set out to make it—a valuable addition to the City of Chicago.

Get the Facts About Another Great Property

With this great record of achievement behind us, we now come to the public to offer them another great subdivision as full of values, as complete in physical improvements, as well restricted and beautiful as any property recently offered in Chicago. This property possesses great future opportunities for increased values; but it is essentially a restricted home property, surrounded by home districts, located on good transportation. It is not away out in the country, not on the fringe of the city, but is a property that is in Chicago and of Chicago and will be developed and beautified so that it will take on values rapidly. There are already buildings under construction in this property, sewers, water mains, gas mains are being laid, many of the sidewalks are completed and the first great developments in this subdivision will soon have been entirely completed. It is property that is ready for you today, property on which you can build as rapidly as you desire, in a district in which you will be glad to live, possessing schools, churches, stores, shops, excellent transportation and all the other features that would characterize a high grade residential community.

Hundreds of thousands of people in Chicago have this year realized that had they acquired a home during the last ten years they would be hundreds and perhaps thousands of dollars ahead today. High rents, cramped living conditions and the inroads of business on residence districts that have have not been restricted, the changing character of over 40 districts in Chicago—these and other forces like them should make the people who live in these districts under these poor conditions think gravely about acquiring a homesite and building thereon suitable homes for themselves and their families.

A Big Opportunity for Some Real Advertising Salesman

One of the largest engineering publications has an opening for a real live up to date advertising salesman. This publication is now the largest in its field, and is growing rapidly. We want a man who will measure up to the possibilities of the opportunity presented.

If possible this man should be familiar with engineering products and machinery in general, and have some knowledge of export trade, although this is not absolutely essential.

The man we want is probably now employed and making good, and can only be interested in a real opportunity for immediate and future expansion. To suit our needs he must be this kind of a man, because he must grow with the paper.

BIG AND LITTLE POWERS CLASH ON WORLD COURT

Split on the Same Rock as 1907 Hague Tribunal.

BY HENRY WALES.
(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
[By Special Cable.]

THE HAGUE, June 19.—Marked hostility toward the peace conference "big five" being preserved as world arbiters developed at today's meeting of the advisory committee attempting to form an international court of justice, and not an inch of progress was made in agreeing upon the proportion of judges in the court from among the big and little states.

Fears are already being expressed that the league court will be defeated by the same obstacle which wrecked The Hague tribunal in 1907, when the fight between the big and little powers prevented the organization of the court.

The little powers' representatives today defied their opponents to define exactly a "great power," asking whether the United States or Great Britain was the principal world power, and demanding to know whether China was not entitled to rank with the "big five," as well as Brazil, Argentina, and Germany, and the Russia of the near future.

Root Champions Great Powers.

At this morning's session nine members spoke in turn regarding the method of selecting the judges, Elihu Root and Lord Phillimore agreeing that this was the crucial point in the proceedings. Mr. Root championed an assured representation for the great powers, speaking in English, which was translated. He recalled the American solution of the problem by representation according to the population, and insisted that nations of from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 people needed a permanent judge. The small power adherents mentioned China sotto voce, but Root paid no heed and proceeded to state that a sure mutual understanding was reachable.

Phillimore of Great Britain, author of the league of nations covenant; Lapradelle of France, Bussiti of Italy, and Adatci of Japan supported Root, but Descamps of Belgium, who is chairman of the committee; Hagerup of Norway, and Loder of Holland sided with the little powers and insisted that small sovereign states were just as much entitled to representation as the big powers. Aletamira of Spain, not wishing to admit that Spain was a little power, took no part in the controversy.

Root indicated that seven big powers, eventually including Germany and Russia, were entitled to permanent, assured seats, with a balance of eight seats voted by the other countries.

Eject Brazil's Representative.

When the committee first convened today Ramul Fernandez, chancellor of the Brazilian embassy at Paris, was refused permission to take part in the proceedings. Under Elihu Root's leadership the committee took the attitude that they were individual jurists invited to organize a court of justice and not representatives of various nations. Mr. Root was forced to take this stand, as the United States had not ratified the treaty and league covenant, and he could not represent America.

The league of nations council had invited Glovis Vevilaqua of Brazil to join the committee, but Vevilaqua was unable to attend, and delegated Fernandez. This morning the committee asked Fernandez for his credentials, and when he explained that he was substituting for Vevilaqua the others voted against him, and he was barred.

It is expected that Fernandez will return to Paris, as he is dissatisfied with the committee's assurance that he will be permitted to be present when Brazilian affairs are discussed.

Meetings to Be Censored.

The advisory committee today censured Secretary Anzilotti and the league of nations secretary, Arthur Sweetzer of Boston, for issuing too comprehensive communiques.

As a result there was no communique today except a statement by the committee which resumed yesterday's discussion of the selection of judges.

Another Wilson Disappointment.

The seat of the league of nations will be transferred from Geneva to Brussels when the assembly meets at the Belgian capital in November, I hear authoritatively. The British, French, and Italians agreed on Brussels because Belgium offered the palace to house the league, whereas the league must buy property or build quarters at Geneva. President Wilson and Col. House were the sole members of the Paris peace conference favoring the Swiss location, but the other powers agreed, expecting the United States, as the charter member, to finance the building of the league's home; but since American hostility has been revealed common sense demands that the Belgian offer by King Leopold of the Brussels palace as a league home will be accepted.

Wilson objected to Brussels because it was too near the scenes of the war and Belgium's belligerents would not have the peaceful poise necessary to the atmosphere of the league.

Old Time Chicagoans Observe Golden Anniversary in Indiana.

MR. AND MRS. A. V. REZEK.

A pioneer Chicago couple, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Rezek, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday at Grovertown, Ind., where they are now living. He is 78 and she is 72. After their marriage in 1870 they settled in De Koven street, opposite the place where the great Chicago fire started. Mrs. Rezek knew Abraham Lincoln and was in Washington when he was assassinated. They have five sons, three daughters, thirty grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. They lived continuously in Chicago from 1866 until 1919, when they moved to a small farm at Grovertown.

FAKE WORKMAN ATTEMPTS LIFE OF EX-KAISER

Wounded in the Jaw by Would-Be Assassin.

BY HENRY WALES.
(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
[By Special Cable.]

THE HAGUE, June 19.—The former kaiser was attacked on Wednesday by a German, who entered Doorn house disguised, and attempted to kill him, but inflicted only a slight wound on the jaw.

The assailant entered Doorn house disguised as a Belgian laborer, several of whom were repairing waterpipes. He awaited the former emperor in a hallway and assailed him.

William tussled with the individual and defended himself, but received a blow with a blunt instrument on the cheek, inflicting a wound. Guards were called in and arrested the man, who refused any explanation.

Some Doubt Attack.

At least that is the most consistant story of what happened on Wednesday afternoon. The townspeople are divided, some insisting that an attempt was made to assassinate the former emperor, and others declaring the event was only an attempt of a German visitor to get a glimpse of his ex-ruler.

Henry Rennick, of the Associated Press; Mrs. Enid Wilkie of the New York Times, and myself, went to Doorn to investigate the mystery, and were placed under arrest by Capt. Van Hartman, commanding the Dutch gendarmerie, because we did not have the special passes permitting us to be at Doorn. We were released and ordered away.

The Dutch secret service sleuths thought Mrs. Wilkie was a man disguised as a woman, but the kaiser's secretary, Herr Peereboom, the son of the mayor of Wieringen, remembered her from the time she visited the crown prince, and her obtained her release.

All is Well, Says Guard.

"Nothing unusual happened," said Peereboom, "The reports that attempts were made on the ex-kaiser are untrue. The kaiser is improved in health and soon will renew his woodsawing."

Herr Vellemann, the Dutch newspaper photographer, who snapped the ex-kaiser from atop a load of hay, stated he did not believe the reports of the attempted assassination, but the Amerongen schoolmaster insists that a German crossed the frontier without papers, mounted the wall and fired at the kaiser, missing him. The schoolmaster says the man was arrested and taken to Arnheim, and deported to Germany.

The Doornites insist that the kaiser's doctor dropped the information that his patient was suffering from a blow in the jaw, but the doctor refuses to be seen.

BRITAIN NEVER TO CONSENT TO IRISH REPUBLIC

Premier Says Not Until Badly Beaten.

LONDON, June 19.—Premier Lloyd George declared to the railway delegation with which he conferred yesterday with regard to the sending of troops and munitions to Ireland, that the government never would agree to an independent Irish republic unless absolutely beaten to the ground.

This statement appears in the official report of the conference.

The premier, drawing an analogy between Ireland and the United States, said President Lincoln faced a million casualties and five years of war rather than acknowledge the independence of the southern states, and the British government would do the same thing if necessary.

Terror Night in Londonderry.

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, June 19.—This city passed another night of terror Friday night as a result of violent pistol and rifle fighting between Nationalists and Unionists.

There was a two hour pitched battle at the riverside.

Comparative quiet was finally restored by the soldiery.

Many of the men engaged in the hostilities were ex-soldiers. The small police force was powerless in the face of the violence of the opposing parties, and the military ultimately had to be called out.

Troops Bring Peace.

The efforts of the troops resulted in the restoration of comparative tranquil conditions by midnight, although firing continued several hours more.

The reports received by the authorities during the morning showed that several men had been wounded in the fighting.

During the fray armed parties of both factions controlled large areas in various parts of the city. These parties stopped all pedestrians, whom they searched for arms.

Deny Churchman Ignored U. S. Air.

San Francisco, Cal., June 19.—The California branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom today issued a denial that Archbishop Mannix, of Melbourne, Australia, who is on a visit to this country, had refused to stand while the band on the steamer Ventura played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The archbishop and his party, the statement says, stood while the air was being played but did not join in the singing because they did not know the words. When the British anthem, "God Save the King," was played Dr. Mannix and his party refused to arise. Later when "America" was played he thought it was a repetition of "God Save the King."

Martens, Soviet Envoy, Denies Receiving Recall

New York, June 19.—Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, self-styled ambassador from soviet Russia, denied in a statement issued here today that he had been recalled by his government, Mr. Martens also stated the report that Santeri Nuorteva, secretary of the soviet bureau, had gone to London to consult with Mr. Krassin, was true, and that he went "with the assistance of the Canadian authorities."

"BEST PEOPLE ON EARTH" TO SEIZE CHICAGO JULY 5

200,000 Elks Coming; Big Cowboy Show.

O, bury me not on the lone prair-ee,
Where the wild coyote will howl o'er me,
Where the rattlesnake strikes, and the winds blow free,
O, bury me not on the lone prair-ee.

The best People on Earth will occupy Chicago, 200,000 strong, a week from tomorrow.

The grand lodge convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will begin here July 5 and continue until July 10. For the last week the 2,600 lodges throughout the couatry by mail and wire have been sending notice of their plans to invade the city.

Special Trains and Steamboats.

William J. Sinek, exalted ruler of the Chicago lodge, who had the job of collecting $150,000 needed for the entertainment of the Elks visitors, declares the convention will be the best the best people ever held.

The California delegation is coming on a special train and several Michigan lodges have chartered steamships to voyage herewith. The Milwaukee lodge will sleep on the municipal pier, having rented 600 cots. Frank Bering, manager of the Hotel Sherman, who has charge of accommodations, says everybody will be taken care of.

A big Independence day celebration in the loop with floats and everything, will be a feature. Harry Beals is chairman of the float committee. E. C. Lewis has charge of the information bureaus.

Some Athletics Show!

The athletic program is going to be some show, take it from Charles L. Willey, who is running that part.

"It will make Chicago sit up and talk," says Mr. Willey.

The athletic events will include the world's championship cowboy sport contests, participated in by broncho busters, ropers, steer throwers, fancy riders, bulldoggers, and cowgirls on high and handsome horses.

The Auditorium will be the meeting place of the convention and Grand Exalted Ruler Frank L. Rain and other officers of the grand lodge will have their headquarters at the Congress. The Stars and Stripes will predominate in the decorations.

Big Doings in Grant Park.

The cowboy sports will begin next Saturday, two days before the actual opening of the convention. These will be staged in Grant park, back of the Art institute, and there are them that do say our mayor may be one of the boys to straddle a bronc.

For this entertainment the Elks committee is building a half mile oval track sixty feet wide, with grandstands to seat 25,000 people. Upward of 100 horses and steers will be brought here for the occasion. These include 150 head of Mexican longhorns, to be used in the bulldogging and roping events. Bulldogging is a sport in which the cowboy gives the longhorn about twenty feet start, then takes after him, drops oq his horse, grabs the steer by the horns and twists them until he throws the animal.

Talent Flocking Here.

Prize money of $25,000 and championship belts and titles are to be awarded in the cowboy contests, and the big purses are expected to draw the classiest talent of the west, southwest, and northwest. Up to date there have been eight women and sixty men entries. Ed McCarty of Cheyenne is shipping twenty entries in outlaw broncs, including the famous Coyote, that has won twenty-six contests and never has been ridden. One hundred noted outlaw horses will romp about during the festivities.

Among other well known westerner cowboy contestants who will be here are:

JOE GARDNER, ranch owner of Sierra Blanca, Tex., world's champion steer roper.

JIM MASSEY, Snyder, Okla., world's champion bulldogger.

EDDIE BURGESS, a Cherokee Indian of Schulter, Okla, who won the steer roping contest in Calgary last year.

HUGH STRICKLAND, Fort Worth, Tex., who has won more than fifty first prizes.

MIKE HASTINGS, Portland, Ore., former bronc buster and bulldogging champ.

BRYAN ROACH, Chicasha, Okla., champ bronco buster.

CLAUDE SAWYER, ranch owner of McAlester, roping champ of Oklahoma.

The West Comes Half Way.

It is costing the Elks $106,000 to stage these cowboy stunts, and there will be seen in Chicago, they say, the stars of all the shows for which easterners in the past have been spending thousands of dollars and traveling thousands of miles to witness. This is the first time the west has come half way.

That ain't all the show, but it gives you some idea of it.

TCHITCHERIN'S POLICY UPHELD BY BOLSHEVIKI

MOSCOW, June 17.—The foreign policy of M. Tchitcherin, the bolshevik minister of foreign affairs, was indorsed by a resolution of all the Russian central executive committee today after a lengthy debate in which Tchitcherin's attitude towards hostile powers was attacked by Sosnovsky and Osinsky, members of the military faction, and defended by Karl Radek and others.

B. Tchitcherin in a long speech asserted Russia had maintained the policy of trying to make peace with all her enemies the last five months. He blamed western capitalism for failure. He declared England was trying to impose conditions for the resumption of trade, and offering nothing in return.

The bolshevik foreign minister described America as following a progressive policy, although its real interests demanded its entering full trade relations with Russia before its British competitors. He characterized French policy as hostile and Italian policy as neutral, while Czechoslovakia was at [illegible]

LOWDEN OFFERS REWARD OF $200 FOR MOSS SLAYER

Army Men Scour Country for 4 Deserters.

While authorities of three states—Illinois, Wisconsin, and Iowa—were conducting an exhaustive search for four deserters from Camp Grant, who are believed to have killed Mrs. Maude Lucille Moss, Gov. Frank O. Lowden yesterday offered a reward of $200 for their arrest.

Mrs. Moss, a daughter of Bion J. Arnold, was shot from ambush Tuesday night while riding in an automobile with her husband, Capt. Leroy H. Moss, and a party of friends.

Although it is believed by some that the men are still hiding near Monroe, Wis., where they were seen last Wednesday, Capt. Robert G. Howie, military intelligence officer at Camp Grant, believes they were at Muscatine, Ia., late Friday. He asked the governor of Iowa to send telegrams to sheriffs of all Iowa counties. The commander of the Rock Island arsenal also received a tip that the men had left Muscatine for Davenport.

Gen. Dickson's Auto Stolen.

Still later reports indicate that the soldiers may have been the ones who invaded the garage of Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson at Ramsey, Ill., early yesterday and stole his touring car, leaving a small, badly used car in its stead.

Cpl. S. O. Tripp believes the men are making for Mexico, and all points in southern Illinois and Kentucky traversed by motorists have been warned to be on the lookout for the Dickson car.

Capt. Moss and Capt. W. H. McCreight, in whose machine Mrs. Moss was riding when killed, went back to Camp Grant from Chicago yesterday to join in the hunt. The deserters sought are Charles Peters, Henry Tassel, J. B. Bonnell, and Tony La Riccio. Peters is said to have made threats against Capt. Moss.

Adopts New Theory of Case.

It has been the opinion at Camp Grant that the shooting was an accident, but Capt. Howie said he had obtained a new clew which convinces him the murder was premeditated with malice as the motive. This clew took him on a visit to the military farm at the camp, where he questioned a number of soldiers.

"All I can say now is that this new information places a wholly different and more sinister aspect on Mrs. Moss' death," he said. "It has to do with the four men for whom we are searching."

Thirty soldiers have been rounded up by the Chicago police in the various cheap lodging houses.

None of those rounded up by the police here is believed to have been in the party that fired at the Moss machine from ambush. Only a few of them have been found to be wanted at various camps for absence without leave. They will be sent back to their respective camps. The others have shown they could not have been connected with the affair, as they were miles away from Camp Grant at the time of the shooting.

COST PROHIBITS DUPLICATION OF GIANT STEAMERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

LONDON, June 19.—There will be no more giant ocean liners of the Olympic and Leviathan class built this generation. They have ceased to be a paying commercial proposition. This announcement was made by Harold Sanderson, chairman of the Oceanic Steam Navigation company, at a dinner on the Olympic, which has been reconsiditioned and fitted with oil burning apparatus. It will resume New York to Southampton service next Friday. The Olympic, which is the largest and most luxurious British ship, cost $10,000,000. It would cost $25,000,000 to duplicate it today. Such a cost is prohibitive. Future ships will not be over 30,000 tons. The life of the big boats now running is estimated not to exceed twenty years.

Co-operation Does It

Eighteen families living in the Sunnyside apartments, at the corner of Ridge avenue and Washington street, Evanston, have formed a Tenants' Cooperative association and are making arrangements to purchase the building.

There are eighteen apartments, consisting of three four room, six five room, six six room, and three seven room flats. Each apartment has a heated sun parlor. All of the leases expire by fall.

According to the arrangements with George Crain, a real estate dealer who now owns the building, the coöperative association will be formed on the basis of $100 shares. Each tenant will buy five shares for each room in his apartment.

The price placed on the building is $133,500. When each tenant has subscribed the $500 a room for his apartment the tenants' fund will reach $58,500. This is the amount of the first payment on the building, and a mortgage for $75,000 will be given in addition.

Each tenant will pay into a general fund $3.50 a month a room. This will be used to defray operating expenses. Another payment will be made monthly for the raising of the mortgage. Officers of the association will be picked by the tenants. Each tenant will be "boss" over the janitors.

'PADDY THE BEAR' MURDERER SLIPS FROM POLICE NET

"Nuts" Nolan, Slain Man's Aid, Vanishes.

"Nuts" Nolan, lieutenant of "Paddy the Bear" Ryan and believed to have been the man who shot him down in Racine avenue on Thursday, has dropped out of sight. Even his pals of the "Valley gang," who had him planted, are ignorant of his whereabouts. According to their schedule, Nolan was to have surrendered himself on Monday or Tuesday, but Nolan gave his friends the slip.

So the police, who are keeping their dragnet set in the west side bad lands, have little hopes of bagging Nolan until "things quiet down" and he slips back into his old haunts.

Linked with Whisky Theft.

Only a few of "The Bear's" friends attended his wake, which began yesterday. Detectives were there to question his friends, but blank looks were the only answers they received.

The police in the meanwhile have linked Ryan and his gang with the recent theft of 700 cases of whisky from the saloon of Harry A. Zoslawsky, 1407 South Racine avenue. It is said that Ryan and six of his aids walked into the saloon and carried out the liquor while "The Bear," disdaining to wear a mask, covered the proprietor with revolvers.

Victimized "Mike de Pike."

While it is the common gossip among police characters that Nolan killed the gang leader because he had been "double crossed," the police are also working on the theory that perhaps some saloonkeeper who had been robbed of liquor by the gang had sought revenge.

"Mike de Pike" Heitler, notorious resort owner, is said to have been one of the persons victimized by "Paddy" and his gang.

DRAINAGE FLOW CUT BY LANDIS; RELIEF FORCED

Supreme court decide the case in our favor."

Wisner Points to Perils.

"This decision is probably the hardest blow Chicago has had in several years," said George M. Wisner, consulting engineer of the district, last night.

"It means, if it should be enforced at once, that the city's health will be endangered and that the district will be forced into a huge debt.

"Take the rain that falls on Chicago, for instance. Half of it is drained off by the river. Now if we are allowed to draw only 250,000 cubic feet of water it means that most of the rain will flow into the lake along with much sewage and waste.

"Then we will not be able to make as much electricity at Lockport as we are now and we would have to curtail the city's supply. The city would be forced to spend many thousands of dollars more for current than at present.

"If they would just give us time we might reach some compromise on this thing. Judge Landis has given us until sixty days after the Supreme court opens in October. It may take several years to build plants to care for the sewage and would cost the district near $200,000,000.

"However, the most important thing is the city's health. I hope the writ of supersedeas is issued, because a wave of typhoid fever will sweep Chicago if we should be forced to abide by the decision next December."

The battle in the courts started twelve years ago when the district violated an agreement made in 1907. By the terms of that agreement the district was limited to the use of 250,000 cubic feet of water.

United States Seeks Injunction.

When this amount was exceeded the government sought an injunction to restrain the withdrawal of more water than provided in the agreement, contending that the water level of the lake was being lowered and that navigation was being interferred with.

Last spring a professor of Northwestern university announced that Lake Michigan was lower at that time than it had been for more than fifteen years. He did not explain the cause.

Judge Landis took that fact into consideration and announced that "on the evidence the authority of the United States is paramount and according to the law an obstruction to navigation did exist."

"I do not know just what effect Judge Landis' decision will have on our water supply and drainage system," Health Commissioner Robertson said. "I am having a thorough investigation made and will issue a statement on Monday."

Troops Guard Duluth Jail Holding 13 Negro Suspects

Duluth, Minn., June 19.—Squads of national guardsmen marched up and down Superior street in the vicinity of the St. Louis county jail tonight, prepared to resist any attack on the jail where fourteen Negroes are being held, thirteen of them in connection with an attack upon a white girl.

You Can Live in Ease and Comfort on The Income From Your 10 Acre Grove

Architect's Drawing Waterbury Club House to be built this year

All This Will Be Yours if You Can Join With Other Successful Business Men and Investors in the Purchase of a Unit in the Great Waterbury Organization

OUR PROPOSITION

Near the beautiful, clean and healthful city of Bradentown, Florida, on the Manatee River, and in the very heart of the greatest grapefruit district in the world, the James L. Waterbury Company of Chicago has purchased and is developing a 10,000 acre tract of land. In the center of this tract this company is building a modern and beautiful city for the use of the people who purchase 10 acre units in this property on our unique plan of selling. The deep, rich soil of this land and the half tropical climate make it possible to grow the finest grapefruit in the world in this district; and the Waterbury Company has laid the foundations for the greatest grapefruit producing and marketing organization that has ever been created.

OVER SIX HUNDRED PEOPLE HAVE ALREADY BOUGHT

We have already sold over 6,000 acres to over 600 people, among whom are substantial bankers, business men, manufacturers, merchants and retired investors. We are now offering about 380 ten acre tracts to the people of Chicago and believe we have in this investment the most extraordinary opportunity for big future yields in income that has been offered to you in years.

STUDY THE ELEMENTS OF THIS INVESTMENT

The basis of this investment is land situated in the choicest grapefruit section in America. There are only a few sections in this whole country where grapefruit can be successfully grown—this is the greatest demonstrated section. This land has a high earning power brought about because grapefruit is a cash crop which sells at a high price and cannot be over-produced. Great earnings are assured moreover because a big organization operating under low costs and getting high prices is back of the land and its operation.

WHY WE SELECTED GRAPEFRUIT LAND

As we have said, the basis of the Waterbury investment is grapefruit land, situated in Florida. We found that grapefruit land possesses exclusive characteristics, which no other land possesses. These characteristics are as follows: (1) Good grapefruit grows successfully in only one state in the Union—Florida. (2) Here it is a certain crop, prolific when properly planted and developed, and can be very profitably grown. (3) A commercial grapefruit grove in Florida is worth thousands of dollars per acre. (4) The annual net income from successful commercial grapefruit groves are greater than the income from any other agricultural or horticultural land, when the groves are properly cared for. (5) The crop is a CASH crop. (6) In price there is no competition.

These conditions impelled us to make a study of the grapefruit industry in Florida and so we spent months and thousands of dollars in examining the practical side of the industry. We selected in Manatee County finally the largest body of land suited to the growing of grapefruit which we could find.

YOU BUY THE LAND OUTRIGHT

This land we divided into ten acre tracts for sale to the investing public on a unique plan. You pay $125 an acre for your land plus $195 an acre for clearing and planting, making a total of $320 per acre or $3,200 for ten acres. Each year thereafter you pay us the actual cost of care and maintenance until the grove comes into bearing. To this cost we add 10% for our overhead. The first price of $3,200 for ten acres must be paid in cash or part cash and the balance good bankable notes. This limits the investment to those who can pay for their grove in cash or who can pay one-half cash and give bankable paper for the balance.

OUR TRACTS ARE SOLD TO INVESTORS

Our tracts are sold principally to investors—the kind of investors who do not intend to make their home on the property and who do not depend upon it during the next few years for income. Fine homesites are provided in the townsite, which is located in the center of the property and lots in this townsite are sold at a very reasonable figure. There is no more beautiful spot in America and the character of the people who have bought assures you of good neighbors and fine friends in a semi-tropical climate—where life is indeed worth living.

OUR BIG VOLUME ORGANIZATION

The James L. Waterbury Company is a big volume organization, operated on the same principles as the big volume manufacturing or merchandising concerns. When we examined this investment we found that an individual owner would spend a very large sum in bringing his grove to bearing. Our figures show us that this would cost a lot of money—too much money for the ordinary man—but we also found that a big volume organization could do it on a large scale for the individual at a much lower cost to him and still make money for organization—because organization operates on a different basis of cost and on different volume production. We therefore worked out a plan by which the cost of planting, caring for the land during the tender years of the orchard, pruning the trees, giving expert management and care to each individual ten acres, could be spread out over a large operation covering 10,000 acres, thus reducing costs to a figure far below that on which the individual could operate.

YOU CAN GET A COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR LIFE ON A TEN ACRE GROVE

The average man finds it hard to save up more than a few thousand dollars in his lifetime; and this, invested in ordinary securities at 6% or 7%, will hardly bring him in enough to pay even a low rent on a home or an apartment. We are giving such a man an opportunity to make a yearly income as great as would be the income on $50,000 or more invested in average well-rated securities. No better or more feasible plan of participating profits has, in our opinion, been worked out for the man of average income, and we invite an examination and a thorough discussion of it by all investors.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO GO TO FLORIDA

This is an investment for the man who wants land with the high earning power, without being compelled to go to Florida and take care of it himself—in other words, an investment that will bring the big returns without any effort on the part of the investor. For less than $6,000 you can get a ten acre Waterbury grove brought to full bearing, which grove would cost you, at the present scale of labor and material, at least $9,000. You can stay at your work and the grove will be selected, planted and brought to bearing without any work or worry on your part. We reap your harvest for you and remit you the proceeds; we care for your property at a much lower figure than it would cost you individually; we give you the absolute protection offered by a big, responsible institution, while your land is maturing, and guarantee you better results from the point of view of net returns than you could possibly get if you handled the grove personally.

GET THE FACTS ABOUT THE WATERBURY PROJECT

We have prepared a fine 56 page booklet on this great investment, which we will distribute to those who are interested in the Waterbury project. As we do not wish to sell this investment to the man who cannot carry it, we urge only those who are financially able to consider this investment to send for the booklet.

MAKE A TRIP TO FLORIDA AND LET US SHOW YOU

No finer vacation could be taken than a trip to Florida's west coast, where there are always cool breezes, fine ocean bathing, great beaches, fine hotels equipped for the summer as well as the winter tourist. Get in touch with us and we will arrange a trip for you that will be pleasant, profitable and instructive. Let us show you the greatest endowment policy in the world—an endowment policy that will bring money not only to yourself, but to your children and their children. Let us show you how a big volume organization has created a glorious opportunity in America's most fertile section—Manatee County, Florida. We want you to know how you can gain for yourself an active participation in the profits that big volume organization in the past has rolled up only for the chosen few.

Make organization work for you instead of you working for organization. That is the way the men of wealth have made their money.

CLEW TO WOMAN KIDNAPER GIVEN BY GIRL VICTIM

Points Out Store Where Finery Was Bought.

The police obtained a clew last night that may lead to the arrest of the woman kidnaper who in the last week has taken two little girls from their homes, bought them new clothing, beaten them, and then returned them to the neighborhood of their homes.

It was furnished by Ila Ryan, 3 years old, 901 South Kedzie avenue, when she pointed out the shop of David Braun, 1216 South Kedzie avenue, as the place where the woman bought her the new clothes.

Ila was taken away Thursday afternoon. An automobile driven by a man stopped near where she was playing. Two girls in middy blouses, blue dresses, and black hats with cherries on them, got out and played "blind tag" with her. After the bandage had been put over the little girl's eyes the woman placed her in the machine and speeded away.

Second Girl Beaten.

Vivian Freisinger, 4 years old, 735 South Kedzie avenue, had a similar experience—but she was whipped more cruelly than Ila.

The parents of Ila and the police asked the child to tell where the machine had gone. Ila started from where she was when the auto appeared and then walked to the shop.

The patent leather shoes, the apron, and other articles given Ila by the woman had been purchased there. The girl was made to change clothes in a passageway between the shop and another building.

Mrs. Braun described the woman and the two girls in middy blouses.

"Prisoner" Writes to Mother.

The police are trying to find another girl, believed to have been kidnaped. She is Helen Kowalski, 13 years old, 1512 Holt avenue. She disappeared Thursday. Yesterday her mother, a widow, received a letter from her.

"I am a prisoner in a house on Dearborn street with some people and five children," she wrote. "We are treated very mean. I would like to go home, but can't find the way, and they won't let me go until Aug. 6. They are mistreating us. All I get to eat is dry bread and coffee."

Fights with Woman.

Mrs. Michael Hackett, wife of a policeman, 3517 West Eighteenth street, engaged in a fight Friday afternoon with a woman she believes is the strange kidnaper.

"I saw her carrying Catherine Collins, 3 years old, who lives at 1823 Clifton Park avenue," Mrs. Hackett said. "She was a dark haired woman, young, and had a long black shawl over her shoulders. The shawl almost hid Catherine. I asked her what she was doing with the girl. She said Catherine was undernourished and she was taking her home to feed her. Well, we fought, and I got the girl. The other woman ran away."

Two Men Arrested.

Complaints of the mistreatment of little girls in a shed in the rear of 353 North Sangamon street led to the arrest yesterday of Antone Lopinski, 38 years old, 3000 Quinn street.

Later Anna Burda, 10 years old, 1253 Anconia street, and Anna Janderists, 12 years old, 1152 West Austin avenue, identified Lopinski as having attacked them. Lopinski, the father of three children, is said to have confessed.

John Lerthom, 24 years old, of Summit, was taken into custody following an alleged attack on the 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Serella, also of Summit. Lerthom was threatened by a group of angry citizens, who were prevented from attacking him by the police.

IRON COMPANY FOREMAN KILLED.

Harold Murrin, 25 years old, 6428 Bishop street, a foreman for the Iroquois Iron company, 3267 East Ninety-fifth street, was killed yesterday. While Murrin was superintending the unloading of a string of coal cars a moving car crushed him against a wall.

SOLDIER-SLAYER IS FREE ON PLEA OF THE UNWRITTEN LAW

The plea that a man has right to avenge an offense against his sister, even to the extent of slaying her betrayer, was upheld in the Criminal court yesterday when a jury, after fourteen hours deliberation, found John A. Chance, a soldier at Fort Sheridan, and Harry Rochette not guilty of the murder of James Cavanagh. The technical grounds for the finding of the jurors was that the shooting, which occurred in March, 1919, was not premeditated.

HARRY ROCHETTE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Attorney Everet Jennings, counsel for the defendants, in his plea asserted that the quarrel between the men had arisen when Rochette attempted to force Cavanagh to marry the former's sister, Virginia, or in some other way protect her.

JOHN A. CHANCE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Rochette made no attempt on Cavanagh's life, nor did he carry a weapon until he heard that Cavanagh and his gang were 'looking for him,'" said Attorney Jennings.

Chance was charged with having the revolver at the time of the shooting.

A jury in Judge Brentano's court found Peter Demitropoulis guilty of murdering Nicholas Kyriokopoulis, a banker, in a quarrel over financial matters in September, 1918. His punishment was fixed at fourteen years in the penitentiary.

ROBBERS' SHOTS TURN 'SHIMMY' TO SHIVERS AT INN

During an attempt early yesterday to rob the Green Corner inn, a roadhouse on the outskirts of the village of Lyons, the place was riddled with bullets and the bartender, Fred Monroe, was shot twice in the abdomen, but the bandits obtained no money. Quick thinking by Monroe saved the cash.

A merry party was in progress. A dozen couples were dancing the "shimmy." Waiters were hurrying back and forth, serving "soft" drinks.

Suddenly patrons and employés were startled by shooting and the breaking of glass. A fusillade from the outside smashed windows and registered hits on the bar mirror, the walls, and pictures.

Women screamed and fainted; men ran for the exits and some jumped through windows.

Monroe scooped the money from the cash register, passed it to Sidney Lewis, a patron, grabbed a revolver, and was ready to give batle when the two bandits entered.

All hands went up but the bartender's. He leaped the bar and took up the offensive. There were half a dozen rounds, and then Monroe collapsed, wounded.

While one menaced the patrons the other robber searched the till and back bar for money, but it was safely tucked in Lewis' pocket, and Lewis was out of harm's way.

Seventh Dunning Inmate in a Week Makes Escape

The Irving Park police started a hunt yesterday for the seventh inmate to escape from the Chicago State hospital for the insane at Dunning this week. The fugitive is Matthew Layden, 2518 South Mozart street, said to be "harmless."

The human hand exercises unlimited gradation of power in producing loud or soft music on the piano.

But the average player-piano is stiffly limited in sound volume to loud, soft, and medium.

The incomparable Steger Player-Piano, however, affords many gradations of pianissimo alone—a range wider than that of any other player-piano.

ILLINOIS PUSHES WORK ON ROADS; BEATS HANDICAPS

State May Build 400 Miles Before Frost.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—[Special.]—Between two and three miles of permanent highways were completed each day last week. This week it is expected trat the average will be increased. Frank I. Bennett, state director of public works, said he hopes to finish more than 400 miles before the frost arrives in the fall. This work is being done under the 1919 contracts.

Fifty-three concrete mixers were in operation last week at various places throughout Illinois on state road construction. At fifty-three points work was being done. There are a total of eighty mixers on the jobs, but twenty-seven of them haven't got into service. If labor, materials, and other essentials are available to get these twenty-seven working within the next ten days and keeping them working, Mr. Bennett said there is no question about finishing the 400 miles.

Meets Considerable Delay.

"There has been considerable delay in getting under way," he went on, "because of the excessive rains, the inability of the contractors to get regular and continuous delivery of sand, gravel, stone, and cement by reason of the car shortage, the switchmen's strike, and on account of the orders from the car service commission requiring that coal cars be used in the coal trade up to 50 per cent of the requirements of that industry.

"This commission also has restricted the shipment of other materials to 50 per cent of the capacity of the various producing plants.

"We hope, however, to complete nearly all of the old contracts during the present season. We will get along fine if we can get the full eighty mixers going.

To Let Bridge Contracts.

"We are about ready to let contracts in various parts of the state for grading and bridge work, so that other roads will be ready for the laying of pavements next year. We are able to do this because there is little material involved in this work to be transported. Comparatively few cars are needed to haul materials for bridges and culverts."

To a layman the car shortage does not appear to be improving materially. Eleven coal mines in and around Springfield were shut down yesterday because of the lack of cars. Probably more than 2,500 miners thus were put out of work.

C. W. Beardon of Bloomington, superintendent of transportation of the Chicago and Alton railroad, said today more than 1,000 cars loaded with coal are standing ready for shipment between Springfield and Carlinville on this one line alone.

State Police Hunt for Kidnaped Coughlin Baby

Norristown, Pa., June 19.—State police began a hunt today for the kidnaper of the 18 months old Blakely Coughlin.

It was the first definite campaign of searching mapped out since George H. Coughlin, the father, gave up hope of personally negotiating with the abductors of his child. Several definite clews are in the hands of the state police.

DOUBLE GLORY

Fifty-fifth Year as Tribune Reader and Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary in Same Month.

MR. AND MRS. H. T. DAEMICKE

H. T. Daemicke of 6127 Greenwood avenue, this month will celebrate both his fifty-fifth anniversary as a TRIBUNE reader and his fiftieth wedding anniversary.

"Yes, sir," he said yesterday, "I have read THE TRIBUNE every day for fifty-five years, and although I am 75 years old, I expect to read it for a good many more. Why, I wouldn't know what to do without THE TRIBUNE.

"We're going to celebrate our golden wedding anniversary June 22."

Mr. Daemicke, who started in the hardware business at Archer avenue and State street in 1865, retired fifteen years ago.

HEIRS TO LOSE IF THEY ATTACK WILL OF RUBENS

The will of the late Attorney Harry Rubens, disposing of an estate valued at between $500,000 and $600,000, was filed in Probate court yesterday. Should any beneficiaries contest the will, that person's legacy will be declared voided and will go to Grant hospital, the document directs.

The household furniture and automobiles, together with a life annuity of $15,000 a year, is bequeathed the widow. She is also permitted use of the apartment, rent free, for three years. Through an ante-nuptial agreement, made in Paris, France, July 25, 1914, Mrs. Rubens immediately comes into the possession of $100,000 deposited by Mr. Rubens at that time.

A son, Harry Rubens Jr., is left $75,000 in stocks and bonds. In event of his death the bequest shall be divided between the two daughters. Mrs. Hertha Mosser and Mrs. Anna Wagner. Mrs. Mosser is willed $43,000 and Mrs. Wagner $211,000.

Finally the testament directs that $25,000 be given Gustav F. Fischer, a friend; $5,000 to Grant hospital and $1,000 to each of several other friends. The Northern Trust company is made executor.

FATHER DEFENDS STUDENT SON CALLED SLAYER

Hanover, N. H., June 19.—A. H. Meads, an attorney of La Grange, Ill., today took charge of the defense of his son, Robert Meads, under arrest on the charge of killing Harry E. Maroney, a fellow student at Dartmouth college.

Mr. Meads came here after visiting his son, who is held in jail at Woodsville. With him was Fred S. Wright, an attorney retained at the time of the arrest.

They conferred here with Judge Harry E. Burton, before whom young Meads was arraigned after his capture. Judge Burton later said the object of the confeence was to give Mr. Meads an opportunity to ascertain the facts in connection with the charge against his son, as the father refused to accept accounts in the newspapers.

WOMEN REVISE RULES ON CLUBS AT FEDERATION

Name Board of 5 to Decide on New Members.

Des Moines, Ia., June 19.—[Special.]—An amendment to the by-laws of the General Federation of Women's Clubs providing that a committee of five members at large shall approve unanimously the petitions of clubs asking membership in the federation, was adopted at the conference this morning after a long debate and the rejection of many substitute motions.

If there is a refusal by the committee, an appeal may be made to the national board of directors, and if a four-fifths majority approves, the club may be entered on the national roster.

For New Cabinet Member.

Several resolutions will be acted upon Monday morning. It was voted to approve the Smith-Towner bill, which calls for a department of education, with a cabinet officer at the head.

A resolution was adopted calling for a larger appropriation for training in home making.

It was also resolved to ask Secretary Meredith of the department of agriculture to take up the problem of rural life, with a view to solving the problems of the decrease in food supply, the loss of farm homes and the decrease in farm labor.

The federation will vote Monday on a resolution asking club women to urge all women to vote in all elections in which the law gives them that right. The resolution calls the ballot the connecting link between the home and the government.

Conferences on education, thrift and literature and libraries were held this afternoon, with the various chairmen presiding.

Discusses Age—Youth.

"The greatest of all professions is home making. No woman has a right to marry unless she has some knowledge of the psychology of childhood. Too long have we trusted to maternal intuition."

Mrs. Pennybacker called attention of the duty of parent to children in contrast to the debt of children to parents. She declared that the door of sympathy between youth and middle life and between youth and age too often was closed. In 90 per cent of the cases, she said, age was to blame.

TORNADO SWEPT ROMANCE GIVEN NEW LIFE BY SUIT

When the recent tornado swept through Melrose Park, wrecking houses, barns and churches, a romance was included in the wreckage. The wrecked romance is to be rebuilt, through a decision by Judge McDonald in the Superior court yesterday.

Irene Smith, 16 year old village belle, and Douglas Spencer, were sweethearts until the soldier arrived in Melrose Park to prevent looting after the storm. Irene's affections were captured by Henry O. Luth, a national guardsman, after three hours' courtship. Irene married the handsome soldier.

Too late she remembered Douglas. Bidding her new husband farewell and telling him she would never see him again, she ran home. Three weeks later Irene married her old suitor. She told her second husband about her first wedding and a consultation was held by Irene and her two husbands. Suit for divorce against husband number one was commenced. Plans for a new wedding with No. 2, strictly legal, are being formed.

COLORED WOMAN IS FIRST IN STATE TO BE ADMITTED TO BAR

Miss Violette N. Anderson of 3347 Calumet avenue, is the first colored woman to be admitted to the bar in Illinois. She is a graduate of Chicago Law school and will participate this afternoon in the commencement exercises in Oriental Consistory auditorium, Dearborn street and Walton place.

Miss Anderson is a graduate of the Chicago public and high schools and for fifteen years has been a court reporter.

"It was a hard, uphill struggle, but I persevered," she said yesterday. "I hope to be able to do much for the uplifting of my people, for I realize that my work is only begun. There is some satisfaction in knowing I am one of a very few women of my race to be admitted to the bar. There are only four others in the United States."

City to Demand Right to Inspect Gibbons' Books

Corporation Counsel Ettelson ordered yesterday that a formal demand be served on County Treasurer Gibbons tomorrow that a city auditor be permitted to inspect his books. The city hopes to find data for a mandamus action to compel Mr. Gibbons to turn over $27,000,000 in tax collections which the city contends is on interest in various banks at 2 per cent. In view of the bankers' refusal of another $15,000,000 loan on the tax warrants, the city is in dire need of the money.

OUTPUT OF SOFT COAL AHEAD OF LAST YEAR MARK

Washington, June 19.—Bituminous coal production during the week ended June 12 reached the highest level since the beginning of the strike of railroad switchmen, with an increase of 3 per cent over the last preceding full time week, ended May 29.

The total production, as announced today by the geological survey, was 10,332,000 tons, against 9,568,000 tons for the latter week. It was still 6 per cent less, however, than the rate for the week preceeding the strike.

The output thus far in 1920 is 38,900,000 tons ahead of that for the same period last year.

Preference and priority orders for the transportation of bituminous coal to tidewater for transshipment to New England were issued today by the interstate commerce commission. At the same time the commission issued preference orders for the assignment of coal cars within the territory east of the Mississippi.

The permits for the movement are to be issued for New England deliveries only upon a showing that the destination of the water movement of such coal is a United States coastwise point and that the shipper or consignee will be able to unload such coal at the port of transshipment without delay to the rail equipment.

Tells of 500 Mexican Girls Fleeing to U. S.

Miss Epha Marshall, president of the Evanston W. C. T. U., declared yesterday at a meeting of the organization that "more than 500 girls have fled from Mexico during the last few months to escape unspeakable conditions."

They have sought sanctuary in New Mexico, she said. Victims of banditti, they are penniless. Most of them had been orphaned by the firing squad.

New Mexico authorities are powerless to aid them and have appealed to the W. C. T. U. Miss Marshall said the organization had determined to raise $100,000 to build a home and training school for them at Velan, New Mexico. The Evanston branch already has pledged $5,000.

2 Kewanee Smokeless Boilers of 12,500 sq. ft. capacity installed

Big industrial plants—small industrial plants—all sorts, sizes, shapes and conditions of plants, factories, office buildings, hotels, churches and what not, are proper subjects for the Kewanee Smokeless low-pressure all steel heating boilers.

As a matter of fact, we don't know of a building of any description, outside of small private residences, that would not be immeasureably benefitted by the use of the Kewanee boiler. And any engineer who stands well in his profession—who really knows the heating game—will back up this assertion with no mental reservations.

The plant of the Cleveland Metal Products Co., 43rd and Western Avenue, Chicago, Geo. C. Nimmons, Architects and Davis Construction Company, Contractor, shown in the picture above, is a case in point. It is a fine, big plant that has two Kewanee Smokeless Boilers the combined capacity of which is 12,500 feet of radiation.

KEWANEE

This is but one of the countless industrial plants throughout America that have installed Kewanee Smokeless Boilers and profited, not only because of their heating efficiency but also because these boilers will burn the cheapest grades of soft coal without smoke. The saving over the price of anthracite and Pocohontas is almost incalculable.

So if you have gathered the idea that the Kewanee has specialized on boilers for apartment buildings, you have only to send for our big illustrated catalog and see reproduced therein the hundreds of fine, big industrial plants that swear by these boilers as they would by a valued old friend.

The success of the new Tobey-made designs has uncovered a great field for fine furniture designed for economical production.

LABOR AWAKENS TO DEMAND FOR GREATER OUTPUT

Building Trades Alarmed Over Conditions.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Here's a highly significant bit of tidings for all folks interested in high cost of living and its attendant phenomena:

Overtures have been made within the last three days by members of building crafts, urging a resumption of some building projects which have been held up on account of excessive costs. On their side, the men offer increased output. Some of their agents are loudly denouncing the cost plus system, and this is an echo of a sentiment that has been gradually seeping through the ranks of the workers for several months past.

Large builders report a general recognition among the artisans that cost plus contracts, by offering an inducement to contractors to pile in all labor possible in order that their percentage may be the higher, have tended to demoralize the working force and have been most responsible for the slump in individual productivity.

High Wages, Little Work.

As affairs stand now, the carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers and the rest of the trades are facing a rapidly diminishing employment. High wages, but little work is what the situataion is working to. Since the first of the year approximately $100,000,000 of building has been tied up in Chicago, postponed and called off because of high cost of labor and materials.

The slackening of activities has now reached the point where, combined with a labor glut in some lines due to an influx of workmen to Chicago, either forced westward by lack of jobs in the east or attracted hither by the high wage schedules, the building trades are rapidly approaching the doldrums. This condition has penetrated quite deeply, too.

Yesterday builders who a month ago were yelling for brick and sand and cement, reported that the brickyards were now doing the shrieking and were keeping the telephones busy asking why orders were not coming in.

It was the same in plumbing. Where a month ago contractors were begging for bathtubs and washbasins, yesterday they said supplies were being offered them by the factories.

Transportation is Better.

Transportation has eased up somewhat, building supplies are easier to get, too, because of the clamping down process the federal reserve banks have applied to less essential industries, but prices themselves are not tumbling, and until material costs come down, the big builders do not look for any important resumption of activities.

The attitude of building labor itself is vastly different from what it was a year ago, six months ago, or three months ago. The vanishing of the labor shortage has stimulated output. The slackening of work has hammered home the economic fact that high wages have to come out of production, and that, as Gov. Lowden phrased it, "You can't divide more than you produce."

Figures on Bungalows.

One builder estimated yesterday that a certain type of bungalow in 1914 took 650 carpenter hours to build, but in 1920 it required between 1,000 and 1,100 carpenter hours. The figures are relative, not exact, but they indicate a slump of at least 35 per cent in productivity. Wages have at least doubled, but output instead of keeping pace has dropped off one-third and has shoved labor cost upwards out of all proportion. But in recent weeks an increase of 15 to 20 per cent in man-hour output has been noted.

"We're moving towards an equilibrium," said one building authority. "Plumbers and bricklayers are like a pendulum, always moving towards an extreme. Six or seven years ago bricklayers were working like fiends, but since the armistice they have been sagging and slowing down, up to a few weeks ago, when the labor shortage turned into a labor glut and a man had to speed up to keep somebody else from stepping into his job.

Think for Selves.

"They're thinking men, and they are realizing that if they and the allied industries such as brickmaking had done a reasonable day's work for a day's pay activities would be a-booming right now. The public wouldn't have been scared out of building houses and other structures. When all industry speeds up, production costs will drop, and then watch this country go."

Heart Ill, Following Row, Kills Kin of Coughlin

George Kiley, 3042 Lake Park avenue, brother-in-law of Ald. John J. Coughlin of the First ward, was found dead yesterday morning beneath a viaduct at Maxwell and Canal streets. Heart disease is believed to have been the cause.

At the offices of the American Express company, where Kiley was employed, it was said he had had an argument with a fellow employé shortly before he started for the barns at midnight, but no blows were struck. The attack of heart disease, it was believed, was induced by the argument.

Kiley was a brother of James Kiley, head of the Kiley Box company, 901 South Lincoln street.

OBITUARY.

ALFRED WOLF, a wealthy silk manufacturer of New York City, died suddenly yesterday afternoon in the consolidated ticket offices in the Insurance Exchange building at 161 West Jackson boulevard. Mr. Wolf was canceling a reservation on a New York train, as he had decided to prolong his visit at the home of his brother, Morris, president of the Morris Wolf Silk company, in Chicago. It is believed heart disease caused his death.

DYRENFORTH'S WIDOW SOLE HEIR.

The will of the late Attorney Arthur Dyrenforth, disposing of an estate valued at $100,000, was filed in the Probate court yesterday. The widow, Mrs. Josephine Dyrenforth, 148 East Chicago avenue, was made sole heir.

HER THRONE VACANT

Queen of South Side's Little Italy, Who Is Dead.

MRS. ANNA CARLO BLASI.

"LITTLE ITALY QUEEN" IS DEAD; CROWDS MOURN

Mrs. Blasi Wielded Big Power in First Ward.

Silent, mourning crowds stood around the Columbus hospital. Mrs. Anna Carlo Blasi, "queen of the south side's Little Italy," lies there dead.

Crowds gathered about her home, 931 South State street, women weeping into their shawls, men, children. The street cars were blocked. The police had to clear a passage for the cars.

There were crowds in every room of the house, and on the porches awaiting the return home of the body of the "queen."

Mrs. Blasi died after a second attack of gallstones. Burial services will be held in Mount Carmel cemetery Tuesday.

Wielded Great Power.

The police could do nothing with the mourning crowds until a sign was printed and placed on the house where all could see—a sign saying: "She is not here yet. Tomorrow you may see her."

After that the crowds dispersed gradually, some of them weeping, some of them telling their beads.

Mrs. Blasi wielded unusual power in the south side district. She was a midwife and a bit of a politician, and a friend at all times. She got jobs for men and for boys and for women and girls; jobs for any who needed them. She saw that sick women had flowers and fruit. She saw that the dead were properly buried.

Aldermen Kenna and Coughlin, former Mayor Carter H. Harrison, Judge Bernard P. Barasa, and scores of other politicians were her friends. She saw that they got the votes. They saw she got the jobs for those of her subjects who needed them.

"Subjects" Bring Gifts.

"All the time she worked for others," said her son, Tony Carlo, last night. "She was sick, but she didn't stop her work. It was only when she was on her back unable to move that she quit.

"When he took her to the Columbus hospital thousands of people came every day. Some of them brought live chickens, some roasted or broiled or fricaseed or broiled young pullets, some wine, some soup in bottles or jars or fine china bowls, some fruits, some flowers.

"She came home. She had recovered. From the loop to Thirty-first street there were great rejoicings. But mother got weaker and weaker and finally we had to take her back to the hospital. I visited her last night. She complained of the cold. I stepped out when the doctor came—Dr. H. R. Kenney—and when he left her I asked how she was.

Headed Twelve Societies.

"'Bad,' he said, and he sent for the priest. She died shortly after the last sacraments, calling my name—'Tony! Tony!'

"Mother was president of twelve societies, and each society has about 1,000 members, men and women. They say they will walk behind her coffin from the house, through the district, to the train. Jim Colosimo had a big funeral. Jim was my cousin. But my mother's funeral—there has never been anything in Chicago like this will be.

"The services will be held in St. Peter's church."

Find Death of Salesman Due to Heart Disease

The theory that Philip Duffy, a salesman, who was found dead in a washroom in the Chamber of Commerce building, was the victim of violence, was exploded by a coroner's jury yesterday, who found that Duffy had died of heart disease.

Edwin J. Heath, Editor of Fourth Estate, Dies

New York, June 19.—Edwin J. Heath, managing editor of the Fourth Estate, died last night at his home in Richmond Hills, it was announced here today. He had been ill several months. He was born in Jaffrey, N. H., Dec. 22, 1864. He will be buried there.

How Does a $9,000 Home on the North Side Hit You?

There are several times 9,000 people in Chicago who would like to own a $9,000 home in a good residence section of the North Side.

Are You One of Them?

If So—Read This Advertisement and Act.

If I could show (at one time) the remaining 40 home sites in ASHWOOD to 50 prospective home owners who can afford a $9,000 or $10,000 home and who wish to reside in a good, clean, attractive residence section, there would not be enough home sites to go around.

ASHWOOD is in the only unbuilt zone on the North Side with transportation—surface and steam. It is near schools and churches and is properly restricted as to kind and character of buildings. Already nearby vacant property is selling at $100 a foot.

Most of these home sites have been sold to well-to-do, thrifty people, after they have looked elsewhere, who intend to build $9,000 to $15,000 homes. These people were not sold by the strong arm method or by "great advance over night" talk. They bought because they planned their future homes to fit their incomes in a North Side community where they "feel at home" and where they know the property will increase in value because of the class of homes built. It is to this class of thrifty, progressive, get-ahead-in-the-world people that this advertisement is directed.

You can buy a beautiful building site and build your own home with your rent money. $50 per month paid for rent at 6% in ten years amounts to $7,903.40, in fifteen years to $13,965.46, and in twenty years to $22,071.10.

RENTERS BUILD A NEW HOME FOR THEIR LANDLORD EVERY TEN YEARS.

Stop Being a Rent Slave Be Your Own Landlord

Secure one of the few really attractive home sites on the NORTH SIDE, a mile and a half from the lake, and then build your own home. Prices are exceedingly low. Large lots, 33 feet wide, at $35 and $40 per foot, sold on easy payments.

Chicago was never so underbuilt as it is today and a building boom in the near future is inevitable. This means much higher prices for really desirable home sites with transportation.

DO NOT WAIT TO BUY THESE HOME SITES, FOR THEY WILL NOT WAIT FOR YOU.

Great achievements— Firm foundations

A great engineering achievement and a manufacturing enterprise have one fundamental in common—a solid foundation.

As an engineering feat, Chicago's new bascule bridge is the greatest of its kind. Standing open, its two massive sections reach into the sky like the blades of a giant jack knife, permitting Ships of Commerce to pass on their way. Closed, it is the main artery of communication between two sections of a vast city.

To carry the tremendous weight of these immense "blades" with their countless tons of steel girders; to establish a rigid base upon which they shall balance perfectly, require firm foundations—reaching into the very vitals of the earth itself.

As this great bridge typifies firmly founded engineering accomplishment, so does the realm of industry afford an outstanding example—the House of Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts.

The principles upon which Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts were developed are deep-rooted, basic; built on years of practical experience, on years of boring deep into fundamental science and knowledge.

Amid the roar of whirling machinery in every factory of the world, belting is the paramount factor. Without it, few machines could turn. Without it, men would remain primitive, for nearly everything that man eats, wears or uses in his daily work at some stage in its manufacture or distribution depends upon belting.

Maximum production, high speed, constant service without hitch—these are the cry of the hour. Those who know them through years of tried performance stand confident that Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts will invariably respond to the utmost demand.

PREPS TO MAKE COMMON CAUSE AGAINST N. Y.

Best Twirlers of League Aid Tuesday Winners.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Regardless of how the championship game ends here Tuesday, when Lane Tech and Englewood battle for the city baseball title and the chance to play the New York High School of Commerce in the post-season game at Cubs park next Saturday, every high school in Chicago will be pulling for the Chicagoans in the game against the Easterners.

PHIL PHLEGER.
Lane captain.

It was learned last night that when the title game here is over Tuesday other schools will send their best pitchers out to work against the local champions in batting practice during the remaining days, so the champs may have their batting eyes keyed up to the highest pitch when they tackle the Gotham top liners Saturday.

Lane and Englewood will battle it out for the honor when they meet Tuesday afternoon. The place—unless changed by agreement of the two interested school principals is Mark White Square, Twenty-eighth and Halsted streets. There is a possibility of the location being changed to one of the local semi-pro parks, because there is likely to be a crowd of 5,000 students present and a grand stand and enclosed field is needed.

ARTIE BRYSON.
Englewood captain.

The High School of Commerce of New York City, which is coming here, appears to be a team a bit farther advanced in baseball than any of the Chicago teams, and it will take the best efforts Chicago can put forth to gain a victory. In May I saw this school of commerce team in the game in which it won the championship of the Manhattan division of the New York schools, and that day, against a team considerably inferior in ability, it played better baseball than I have seen played by any Chicago high school team this year.

Wins Despite Handicap.

It was a crew of enthusiastic boys led by Coach Kane, a former Fordham college player, a bunch handicapped because of no grounds, and only about a half an outfit of baseball uniforms, but it was a squad with the proper baseball spirit, and it went through and won the championship.

Now, while both Lane and Englewood are eager for the honor of meeting the New Yorkers, whichever one loses will do all it can to aid the winner in the big game against New York. If Lane should be victor, doubtless Pitcher Sims, the speedy hurler of Englewood, will go out one afternoon of practice and pitch to the Lane batters in their drill for the big game.

Should Englewood win, it is expected that Pitcher Walsh of Lane will go out at least one afternoon and lend him right arm for the batting practice to get the Englewood hitters in trim to hit against the clever Mr. Jacobs of the New York team.

Harrison Twirler Volunteers.

Coach Ray of Harrison, which is out of the race, has already promised to send his pitcher, Madsen, to work against the winner of the Lane-Englewood game in the final practice sessions for the big game, and it is likely that Hyde Park, Tilden, Parker, Lake View, and others will do the same.

MISKE MAY BE DEMPSEY FOE WITHIN MONTH

Jack Dempsey's next battle in the ring probably will be against Billy Miske of St. Paul. Negotiations for this match were worked out yesterday and all but closed when Jack Reddy, manager of Miske, and Larney Lichtenstein, who is acting as Dempsey's agent in Chicago, held a conference.

According to Lichtenstein, the champion is offered $50,000 for his end, with a privilege of 50 per cent of the gate for a contest in St. Paul. Lichtenstein said the articles probably would be signed in a few days and the bout might be held within a month.

Reddy demands that the bout be ten rounds to a referee's decision, which is understood to be satisfactory to Dempsey.

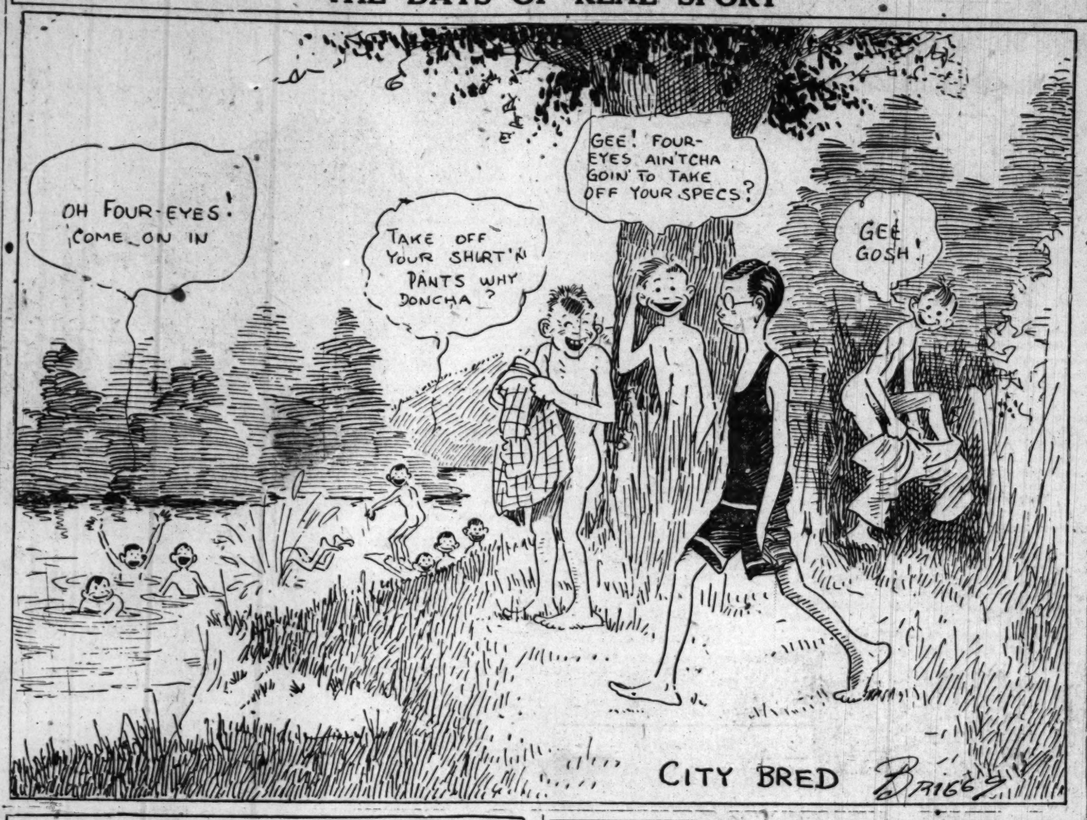
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



In the Wake of the News

HARDING ONE OF US.

While at first The Wake was inclined to shy at that middle name, Warren G. Harding is daily adding to the evidence that he is presidential timber. First was his declaration that he filled to a pair of eights, to which our Washington correspondent supplemented the information that Warren is one of the best poker players in the national capital.

On another page of this section we see Warren engaged in a round of golf.

Still another photo, not reproduced, shows the Republican nominee fondling a bulldog while taking a drag from a cigaret.

The Wake is convinced Warren is one of us.

Harding, however, will not be formally notified of his nomination until the middle of July. What a tremendous suspense he must be under!

Political Note: Gov. Lowden and Gen. Wood lunched at the Chicago club yesterday! But not together.

This Wake is conducted by Harvey T. Woodruff. Help! Help!

AS WE SAY IT NOW.

While looking back with a wistful gaze
To happy hours of the olden time,
We used to say, while in life's prime:
"O, for the joys of childhood's day!"

Now, since the years have changed our ways,
And we feel ourselves grown old and sear,
We say, as life holds less of cheer:
"O, for the pep of the yesterdays!"

It remained for the White Sox to discover a way to stop Babe Ruth's home run clouts.

MARKET LETTER.

Stocks, on the average, are stationary, while paper, commercial and writing, is stationery. The outlook is confusing and the retrospect depressing.

Bar silver is quiet because of the lack of bars. Stocks of copper on hand are increasing because of the 6 and 8 cent carfares. Leather is on the bottom, where it naturally belongs.

Traction shares moved a little out of their tracks, with jerks and bumps. Peoples Gas responded slightly to the prediction it would soar, but only a fraction compared with the sore consumers.

Worthington Pump suggests itself as one to buy on the dip and sell on the bulge. The only question is, How much water?

For the present keep close to shore on the Marine issues, and Stop, Look, Listen at the rails.

There Are Others.

In olden times I used to buzz
The cabarets each night;
On gal and gallon charms I was A Lobster right.

The years congenial grew stern
And wiped the festive tab;
The Water Wagon made me turn
Into a Crab.

Yep, Evolution sprinkled my Convivial ambish—
But when the Ladies amble by
I'm still a Fish.

FREEDMAN GIVES TILLMAN LICKING IN 10 ROUND GO

Tribune Decisions

Decisions of The Tribune fight representatives are:
At East Chicago—Solly Freedman beat Johnny Tillman [10]; Teddy Murphy stopped Johnny Lewis [4]; Bill Henry beat Stanley McBride [10].

BY RAY PEARSON.

Solly, sometimes called "Sailor" Freedman of our west side Ghetto, pulled a surprising reversal and resembled a scrapper of real class yesterday when, accompanied by Johnny Tillman of St. Paul, he opened the new fight arena built by George Oswego at East Chicago.

SOLLY FREEDMAN.
[Celebrity Photo.]

For Freedman to beat Tillman, a fellow who has given Jock Malone a lot of other classy welters an argument, was unexpected, but that is exactly what the Chicago boy did, and he accomplished it with a vehemence that establishes him once more in the good graces of Chicago fans, who believed he had "shot his bolt."

Freedman fought this time, fought better than we ever have seen him fight, and though Tillman outweighed him probably half a dozen pounds Solly only once or twice failed to win a session, and those times he couldn't be given worse than an even break.

Freedman Is Unmarked.

Facial decorations when they left the ring left no doubt as to which boy had won, for Freedman didn't carry a mark, while Tillman's lip was cut and he was bleeding from the nose. The St. Paul boy was weary and glad that his afternoon's work had been finished. An alibi is provided for Tillman in that he accepted the match on a few hours' notice and had no chance to train, but those who watched Freedman operate yesterday don't believe that a Tillman "in the pink" could have beaten him.

Crowd Is Disappointment.

The arena in the Indiana town is a dandy and large enough to seat close to 10,000 fans. The size of yesterday's crowd, which numbered not more than 1,500 fans, naturally was disappointing to the promoter. The gate probably was worth $2,500 to $2,600. Oswego put on three bouts, all billed for ten rounds, but there were only twenty-four rounds of boxing because Teddy Murphy of Chicago stopped Johnny Lewis of California in the fourth session of the semi-windup.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

Which would you rather see; a world's series baseball game or a championship prize fight?

The Answers.

C. S. UPTON, 3939 Gladys avenue, auditor—I would much rather see the ball game. I think baseball is a much cleaner sport and the culminating games are far more exciting than seeing prize fighters trying to batter out a world's championship.

K. L. MONTAGUE, Oak Park, Ill., insurance agent—The world's series for me every time. There is more fun and wholesome excitement in one ball game than there is in fifty big prize fights.

FRANK WASSERMAN, 6756 North Halsted street, carpenter—A championship prize fight is my preference. You don't have to sit out under the sun, except the recent heavyweight fights, and there are none of the long waits for something exciting to happen.

M. M. MANNERS, 1011 South Central avenue, Austin, dry goods merchant—Baseball games are my hobby. The world's series is sure great stuff to my notion, and I wouldn't exchange a seat at one game for a ringside seat to see Carpentier and Dempsey scrap or any of the other bruisers.

CHARLES N. DANIELS, 3945 North Western avenue, cobbler—I prefer baseball and, of course the world's series. Prize fighting may be all right for expert ring followers, but it doesn't hold much for me.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

New York, June 19.—[Special.]—Bob O'Farrell's yard home run in the first half of the twelfth inning today terminated in Chicago's favor a brilliantly fought battle between Cubs and Robins, with Sergt. Alexander and Al Mamaux slabbing. Score, 5 to 3.

BOB O'FARRELL.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

O'Farrell's fourply blow was of the yard variety as distinguished from the common or garden species, because it was made inside the yard, compelling him to sprint all the way to the plate, instead of out of bounds, with the attendant privilege of loafing around. And, as Bob is no ten second dasher, it had to be a vigorous clout into the deepest corner of center field to permit him to complete the circuit before the ball got back.

"Smart" Play Loses for Dodgers.

The Cubs already had broken the 2 to 2 tie which existed all the way from the sixth inning before O'Farrell delivered his yard home run, and at the time it was thought to be tautological, because it made the score 5 to 2, but a wild chuck by Hollocher on a chance to retire the side in the last half of the twelfth gave the Robins a run that would have knotted the count again but for Bob's bludgeon.

The game would have been Brooklyn's in spite of swell pitching by Alexander, but for a blunder by Zach Wheat in the sixth inning when he deliberately muffed a fly ball because he thought it was foul and there was a runner on third who would have scored surely on the catch. If Zach had pinched that pill right over the foul line the Cubs could have made only one tally off Mamaux in the regulation period. It was a case of too much foxiness on Wheat's part.

Deal Features in Field.

The Robins rapped Alexander pretty hard in the early innings before he got his belt tightened up for real combat. Swell fielding by Deal saved a run in the first inning, but in the second after two were gone Kilduff scratched a little roller toward third and beat it, making second on a wild throw by Deal. Miller followed with a triple, which would have scored Kilduff anyway.

Terry led the winning rally with a walk. Robertson sacrificed and Merkle scored Zeb with a two bagger to right. Herzog flied out. Then O'Farrell sent a sizzling liner to right center and it shot past Myers so far that Bob came home under his own steam, driving Merkle in ahead of him.

Robins Also Tally.

Mitchell batted for Mamaux with one down in the home half and walked. Hollocher threw out Olson neatly, then made a wild peg on a soft one from Johnston, letting Mitchell register, but Alex flagged Myers on strikes.

GAMES TODAY.

Chicago at Brooklyn. Pittsburgh at N. Y.

NOTES

Connie Mack's collection of talent will be on exhibition today.

Ruth probably will be able to play today at St. Louis. After the ball caromed off his brow it rolled almost to the home plate.

For champions, the Sox haven't done very well with the eastern clubs. Boston took three of four and New York did the same. Washington dropped three straight here.

Had his mates given him the proper support, Mogridge might have registered a nine round shutout. One of the two runs scored in the tenth was the only earned tally.

The Yanks collected most of their runs in the sixth. Successive singles by Vick, Meusel, Bodie and Pratt scored three. Pratt tried to get to second on his blow but couldn't make it.

Mogridge gave his ankle a bad twist and probably will have to take things easy for about five days. He fell just as he threw Jackson's bunt to force E. Collins at third in the tenth.

Pratt committed a comical error in the ninth. He picked up the ball that Lynn got two bases on and instead of throwing it toward the infield, let it fly toward the grandstand. Pipp captured it near the Yankee dugout. Lynn reached third on the throw and the game would have ended ther and there had Vick not made quite a catch of a hot liner driven by Leibold.

Notes

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 19.—[Special.]—One more in Brooklyn tomorrow.

That made four straight for the Cubs and two in succession for Alexander.

Robertson insisted on playing left field. He struck out twice in a row, but clouted a timely double in the sixth.

Flack made three of the Cubs' eight hits and was robbed of one by Griffith in the first inning by a spectacular catch off the right field wall.

The grounds were slow from three days of rain with no sunshine to dry them out, but there was a crowd of 15,000 on hand, so they played.

Hollocher's out in the eleventh was comical. His roller went straight to first base, hit the bag and bounded back, but Koney hustled anad grabbed it off the ground, keeping his foot on first, just in time for the out.

YALE CONQUERS TIGERS IN FINAL OF SERIES, 1 TO 0

New York, June 19.—[Special.]—Princeton's hopes of making a clean sweep of Yale in the major sports for 1919-'20 went glimmering at the Polo grounds this morning when the Elis won the third and deciding game of the annual baseball series, 1 to 0. It was a beautifully played game and a pitchers' battle throughout. Yale until the ninth inning did not get a man to third. Score:

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Miller Huggins' Yankees were in a comical mood yesterday, and played ball just as they felt. After flip-flopping around for ten innings like a crew of clowns, they finally succeeded in giving the White Sox enough to cop the last of the series. The tilt ended with a 6 to 5 count, and marked the first Chicago victory of the year over the Manhattan athletes.

Although there was plenty of action all the way through the ridiculous affair, some 25,000 patrons didn't get a satisfactory dividend on their investment. Most of them came not to see the Sox win or lose but in anticipation of witnessing "Babe" Ruth in one or more of his home run acts. "Babe" didn't put on his specialty stunt because a thrown ball jarred his scalp loose in the second inning and necessitated his retirement in the fourth.

Weaver Hits Him in Eye.

Weaver propelled the ball that caused Ruth's troubles. The home run hero responded to a lot of whoops and yells by singling to center to start the second inning. The next batter bounced one to Weaver, who stepped on second for a force out and then heaved to first for a double play.

Just as "Buck" threw Ruth came into the bag and the ball bumped him over the right eye. He recovered in a few minutes, and attempted to continue the pastime, but after letting a fly ball go over his head in the Sox fourth he asked to be excused because of an attack of dizziness. The crash raised a huge bump over his eye.

Ruth was not the only gent who suffered injury. George Mogridge, southpaw, who pitched right from the start for the Yanks and who would have won with ease had his mates played ball in the field, turned his ankle in fielding a bunt in the tenth. He limped out of the picture and Jack Quinn took his place. The game ended almost immediately.

Win on Stumble.

Felsch, the first man to face Quinn, lined safely to right. Vick stumbled going after the ball and it rolled to the fence for a triple, scoring Weaver and Jackson with the tying and winning runs. Weaver had reached base on a single and Jackson got there when his attempted sacrifice forced E. Collins, who opened the inning with a bounder that Pratt booted.

Going into the ninth the Yanks were apparently safe with a 4 to 3 advantage. They had accumulated this by unloading numerous hits against Eddie Cicotte. Jack Collins opened what then looked like the last round with a single. He stole as McMullin fanned, after which Schalk fouled to Hannah. Lynn was sent forth to bat for Cicotte and poked a fly to short right. It went for a double when Bodie, Pratt, and Vick all tried for the catch, J. Collins scoring the tying run.

Yanks Challenge Again.

The Yanks came right back in the tenth and resumed their advantage at the expense of Claude "Lefty" Williams. Bodie drew a pass to start the inning and Pratt scored him with a triple past Leibold. With a runner on third and none down it looked as though additional runs would go across, but Hannah crabbed it by bunting on the fly to J. Collins in an attempted squeeze play. It was a simple matter for Jack to heave to third to double Pratt.

JOHNSTON WINS TENNIS HONORS, BEATING TILDEN

LONDON, June 19.—A fine exhibition of tennis was witnessed at the Queens' club today, when William M. Johnston of San Francisco, the American champion, and William T. Tilden of Philadelphia met in the finals for the London championship. A tremendous crowd gathered to witness the contest, which Johnston won in magnificent style, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4. His playing, according to the experts, was far in advance of anything ever seen in this country before. It took three sets to decide the championship, Tilden winning the first by brilliant plays. As was expected, Johnston and Tilden captured the doubles quite comfortably from R. Norris Williams and C. S. Garland, also Americans, 6—3, 6—4.

The pace throughout the doubles contest was fierce and the match was over in thirty minutes. In both singles and doubles Johnston was penalized repeatedly for foot faults, but he was the outstanding player of the four.

Everybody is greatly disappointed that the luck of the draw for Wimbledon probably will bring Tildens and Johnston into opposition at the beginning of the week, but it is confidently expected the winner of this round will survive through the challenge round, when he will meet G. L. Patterson of Australia, the holder of the all comers singles championship.

WESTMORELAND.

C. A. Bush won the Argyle cup at Westmoreland, while A. T. Crumb with 92—20—72 took the Peace cup. The sweepstakes was led by J. M. Bozzo, 88—13—75. C. N. Stevens and S. E. Knight tied in the blind bogey event, each having a net of 87. In the qualifying round for the Aberdeen cup Dwight Bennett with 87—13—74 led the field. The pairings for the first round with the qualifying scores in parenthesis, follow: Dwight Bennett [87—13—74] vs. L. D. Taylor [92—15—77]; F. C. Stiles Jr. [87—9—78] vs. G. W. Springer [93—13—781; A. MILTON ANNEXES SECOND LEG ON UNIONTOWN RACE

Uniontown, Pa., June 19.—The 225 mile Universal trophy automobile race at the Speedway today was won by Tommy Milton, who averaged 94.9 miles an hour in his Duesenberg. His official time was 2:22:44.37. Only a few minutes separated the winner and the drivers who finished second and third. Jimmy Murphy crossed the line in 2:23:27.98, while Eddie O'Donnell, who was third, made the 225 miles in 2:26:44.45. Both Murphy and O'Donnell also drove Deusenbergs. I. P. Fetterman was fourth in a Monroe; Ralph Mulford fifth in his Mulford Special; Benny Hill sixth and Joe Thomas seventh in a Monroe.

Wade Morton of Philadelphia, driving a Meteor, in place of Willie Haupte, and his mechanician, Arthur Kemps, met with an accident on the one hundred and eightieth lap, when a tire blew out and caused their machine to topple and roll down the track. Attending physicians said Morton and Kemps were not injured seriously.

Milton, who won a prize of $6,000 today, also won the Universal trophy for the second time. The trophy will be awarded to the driver who wins it three times.

Ralph De Palma had a position with the leaders early in the race, but was forced out on the one hundred and twenty-second lap, because of a broken valve. Gaston Chevrolet and Roscoe Saries dropped out shortly after the one hundredth lap, due to engine trouble.

ANGLO-AMERICAN GOLFERS DISCUSS CHANGE IN RULES

LONDON, June 19.—Alteration of certain rules of golf was considered at a meeting of a special committee of Anglo-American golfers here yesterday, according to the Times. Standardization of the balls used also was discussed.

It was decided to recommend to the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews and the United States Golf association that, with reference to stymies, no alteration be made in the present rule.

Recommendations were made to unify penalties for lost balls, balls out of bounds, and unplayable balls. The penalty for the first and last should be "stroke and distance," but in the case of a ball out of bounds permission should be given clubs to govern the penalty by local rules, it was decided.

SYRACUSE WINS VARSITY RACE IN LAST HALF MILE

Ithaca, N. Y., June 19.—Wresting the lead from its greatest rival, Cornell, in the last half mile of the varsity championship this evening, Syracuse oarsmen won the feature event of the intercollegiate regatta by a length and one-half after one of the greatest rowing duels ever witnessed between American collegiate eights. Several lengths in the wake of the sprint-blade swingers came Columbia, leading Pennsylvania by a margin as great as that which separated the New Yorkers from Cornell. The times of the four crews for the two mile contest were:

Syracuse, 11:09 3-5; Cornell, 11:[illegible]; Columbia, 11:21 4-5; Pennsylvania, 11:[illegible].

Cornell's first year oar won an impressive victory in the opening race of the regatta. Cornell finished with four lengths of open water ahead of Syracuse, with Penn two lengths behind Syracuse and one and one-quarter ahead of Columbia. Times:

Cornell, 10:45 3-5; Syracuse, 11:03 4-5; Penn, 11:10 3-5; Columbia, 11:15 1-5.

The junior varsity contest was more or less of a repetition of the freshman event. Times:

Cornell, 10:45 3-5; Syracuse, 10:53 [illegible]; 11:14 4-5; Columbia, 11:17.

RAY TAKES MILE, BUT LOSES HALF TO T. CAMPBELL

Hankel Wins Over Mellor in 5 Mile Event.

Defeat of Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C. by Tom Campbell, formerly of the University of Chicago but now a student at Yale, and the downfall of Chuck Mellor of the Logan Square A. C. in the five mile run featured the city wide track and field championship preliminaries held yesterday in the south and north zones respectively.

TOM CAMPBELL.

Although Ray had previously won the mile in the fast time of 4:21, he was beaten decisively by the former Maroon, it being the fourth time that Campbell has taken the tricolor club star's measure in the half mile. Ray and Campbell started from scratch, with Bowers and Otis of Chicago having slight advantages.

Victory By Ten Feet.

Ray set the pace at the end of the first quarter, but on the back stretch of the second lap they raced for the turn, which Campbell won. The Yale runner had a slight advantage, as they straightened for the race to the tape and Campbell gradually increased his lead to ten feet in the fast time of 1:56 1-5.

As was the case with Ray, Mellor's efforts had been spent in winning the half mile runs in the north zone meet. He stayed up with the leaders until the last lap, when George Hankel, a former Logan Square runner, passed him and crossed the tape an easy winner.

Rundquist Star of Meet.

This meet was featured by the stellar performances of Gus Rundquist of the Swedish-American A. A., who led his teammates to an easy victory. Rundquist scored fifteen points by taking first places in the running high and broad jumps and running hop, step, and jump.

Qualifiers in both meets will meet in the finals to be staged by the Elks in Grant park on July 5. Summaries:

CONNOR, SPRINGFIELD, GETS PERFECT SCORE IN STATE SHOOT MEET

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

GIVING a remarkable exhibition of shooting, A. C. Connor of Springfield yesterday won the Jefferson Hotel cup competition, the feature event of the second day's events of the first annual trap shooting tourney of the Illinois State Sportsmen's association now being held at the Lincoln Park Gun club. Connor won the event with a perfect score of 50.

According to conditions the contestants were permitted to use both barrels, Olympic style of shooting. If the bird was missed with the first load the second could be used. In shooting his string Connor used his second barrel only once. As a result of his victory Connor won the trophy, which must be captured three times by the same shooter to become his permanent property.

Connor was compelled to shoot at his best all the time, because local shots crowded him all the way. Charley Burmeister, A. J. Usher, and A. F. Johnson of Chicago and T. A. Snell of Carlinville, Ill., each turned in scores of 49. Jay Graham was high professional with 49. Leading scores:

Jefferson Hotel cup, 50 targets, 16 yards—A. C. Connor, 50; T. A. Snell, 49; C. G. Burmeister, 49; A. J. Usher, 49; A. F. Johnson, 49; E. Fuch, Cincinnati, 49; Bill Tarmining, 48; Pete O'Brien, 48; Harry Dunnill, 48; Dave Thomas, 48, and Chan Powers, 48.

SPRINGTIME WINS COLUMBIA YACHT CRUISING HONORS

Nyland's Boat Beats Invader in Feature Class.

Michigan City, Ind., June 19.—[Special.]—The outstanding feature of the twenty-ninth annual cruising race of the Columbia Yacht club to Michigan City was the victory of Gus Nyland's Springtime over Invader in the race-about class. Springtime was built especially for the purpose of defeating Invader. The contest for 30 foot sloops resulted in a win for Lee Andrews' Ste. Claire.

Morgan Eastman's Dorello captured the elapsed time honor, crossing the finishing line first, with Farrell's Intrepid a close second.

Light northeast winds prevailed during the sailing of the race, which enabled the yachts to finish the distance in fast time.

Ogden T. McClurg's motorboat Indian will be the judges' boat on the return race to Chicago for the Stratford Hotel cup. The fleet will leave at 8:30 tomorrow morning in one detachment. Summaries:

WOODS and WATERS

By LARRY ST. JOHN

JUST CASTING GOSSIP.

Every experienced bait caster has his favorite lure—his old "meat getter" with which he begins and finishes — and if some unkind fate were to limit us to one bait we would not hesitate to choose the spinner, fly, and strip combination. This is a prime lure with many a caster, but in spite of its wide popularity it seems to be unknown in some quarters.

This lure is rigged as follows: To the end of the line tie a swiveled snap; to this hook a dipsey sinker for casting weight and a single or tandem spinner, about No. 3 size; then on the snap on the other end of the spinner fasten a weedless casting fly; hook to the fly a strip of pork rind (the bottled kind has a hole for the purpose), and it is ready to cast.

By having spinners of different shapes, sizes, and finishes, and red, white, yellow, and bucktail flies, the caster may have a wide variety of combinations to meet practically every water condition.

This lure, if the proper fly is used, is as weedless as anything you can cast. By reeling it slowly you can fish it deep; speeding up it rides higher in the water. By holding the rod tip up and retrieving fast it can be kept on the surface in the weeds. Let it sink, by slowing up, when you come to an open spot in the lily pads.

Not the least of the merits of this lure is its sureness as a hooker. Your fish are nearly always hooked through the lip, often through the tough maxillary, the mustachelike cartilage on the mouth, and if the line is kept taut fewer fish are lost than on plugs.

Compared with plugs and other patent casting lures, the spinner, fly, and strip is inexpensive, of more general all round usefulness, and, if the white rubber strips are used instead of pork, very compact.

Coming to the subject of plugs, have you noticed how the deep diving ones are taking fish? The secret is, they travel as deeply as the old fashioned underwater plugs with the added advantage of the wobbling, darting motion of the wobbler family.

In using such lures the caster should have a sturdy rod, for their resistance in the water will put a set in an ordinary tip. Lacking a "stiffish" rod, the caster should keep his tip pointed straight at the bait while retrieving, thus putting the strain on the line. While on the subject of wobbling baits it may not be out of place to mention that the old time pearl and copper wobblers are being used again in midwest waters and they are catching fish.

What are the favorite plug colors? The old standby, white body and red head, seems to be still in the lead, but some of the newer finishes like the crawfish, scale, perch, and aluminum body and red head, are pressing it closely.

Plug makers must continually be putting out new things, not only to catch fish, but to catch fishermen. It's good selling psychology. Any angler will try almost anything once. Besides, it does seem as if the fish finally "get wise" to the old lures, or at any rate they possess the human passion for novelty.

Another thing that is influencing bait makers is the growing favor of light tackle. To cast a heavy plug on a light bamboo rod is abusing the rod, so plug makers turn out what they call "baby" lures, about half the size of the standard models. One bait maker, a comparatively newcomer in the field, specializes on light lures to be used with pork rind. His baits are single hooked, light, neat, easy to cast; they catch fish and they sell well.

More and more bait casters are taking up fly fishing, and once they make a killing with a fly rod they become sold on the light tackle idea and see the advantages, from the sporting standpoint, of a long, springy rod. This influence will be felt in casting rod lengths.

In fact, for waters where bull's-eye accuracy of casting is not necessary the long rod and the side cast are more in evidence than in many years. We would not venture the prophesy that the Henshall pattern rod is coming back, but we believe that rods up to 7½ feet will be more commonly seen.

Play in City Net Tourney Is Delayed Until Today

The start of play in the annual Chicago city tennis tournament, scheduled for yesterday afternoon on the Chicago T. C. stone dust courts, was deferred until today. Due to penetrating rains of the last week, and the state of the calcium outlines of the court, it was thought better to hold off the opening matches another day, and first competition was carded for 2 o'clock this afternoon. All the prominent local players are entered.

Stiffen Your Beard
and make shaving easy

Lay a HAIR on a piece of paper, and draw the DULLEST razor across it. You will CUT the hair easily. You doubt this—but try it—you'll see.

The paper holds the hair firm for the blade's edge. That's why the razor cuts the hair easily.

But the stubble of beard on your face is not a solid surface of hairs. There are thousands of empty spaces between the hairs. The razor jumps across these empty spaces. The zig-zag, staggering, jolting, jumping of the razor blade across the empty spaces and through the hairs is what causes the "pull" and irritation.

A Great Discovery that ends all shaving troubles

The soft, firm substance of Barbasol fills the spaces between the hairs, holding them up against the edge of the blade. Barbasol offers the same gentle resistance to the razor as the softened hairs. The razor cuts straight across the base of the hairs close to the skin. You get a smooth, close shave without "pull" with few razor strokes.

Diagram of shaving with lather—magnified many thousand times.

Barbasol fills the empty spaces and holds the softened hair up —like this

Diagram of a Barbasol shave—magnified many thousand times.

The trouble with lather is that it is light and porous. It lets the weight of the razor turn the hairs down against the face. The blade cuts through the length of the hair, causing the "pull" so many men suffer from in shaving. To get a close shave, with lather, therefore, is difficult. You must go over the face several times, which increases the irritation.

Shave With Barbasol

No Soap! No Brush! No Lather! No Rub-In!

You put Barbasol on your face with the tips of the fingers—gently spreading a soothing, cooling film of Barbasol over the beard stubbles. Then shave. Barbasol does not lather. It requires no rubbing.

After shaving, do not use any soap to wash off the Barbasol. Just wipe your face with a damp towel, then with a dry towel. For Barbasol itself is the most soothing of face emolients. Barbasol and your razor are all the shaving kit you'll need.

Don't wait another day for your first Barbasol shave. Shave the Barbasol way tonight or tomorrow morning. It will be the best shave you've ever had—a cool, clean, comforting shave without razor "pull" and smarting skin. A tube of Barbasol costs only 35 cents.

U-BOAT GHOSTS BEFORE SAILORS FRET GERMANS

World Seamen's Meeting May Oust Teutons.

GENOA, June 18.—[Delayed.]—An indignant protest against the admission of German delegates to the International Seamen's conference was voiced today by Representative Bramah of the English Marine Engineers' association.

"One or possibly two so-called German seamen's delegates are present here, who during the great war took no steps to prevent the diabolical deeds perpetrated against the seamen of our country, as well as of the other allied nations," Bramah declared.

Appear for Government.

"These men do not represent the German seamen's unions, but were sent here by the German government and thus cannot be admitted as delegates of the seamen."

Bramah spoke in reply to Herr Fisball, who, speaking in German, protested because German delegates had not been allowed to participate in the convention thus far.

Herr Boring, one of the German delegates, British delegates say, was associated with Paul Mueller and others in signing a manifesto published during the war, agreeing to intensify the submarine warfare against the allies.

Germans Not Forgotten.

M. Rivelli, secretary of the National Seamen's Federation of France, said the Germans had not been forgotten; one had been proposed as a member of the committee on credentials but had failed of election.

M. Chappelle, for the Belgian seamen, was not allowed to speak, the chairman ruling the discussion would be resumed when the credentials report was presented. Adjournment for the day soon followed.

Americans Are Opposed.

Andrew Furuseth, Paul Charenberg, and Oscar Carlson are in Genoa as representatives of American seamen, but are attending the International Seamen's conference only in an unofficial capacity. They wrote to Baron Des Planches, chairman of the conference, saying they had no desire to take an official part until "all maritime nations will follow the example of our country and make their seamen free men."

County Announces Dates for Poor Child Outings

Dates of outings at Camp Reinberg, maintained for the county for children dependent, were announced yesterday by President Reinberg of the county board. One week is provided for Jewish children, another set apart for colored children and five weeks for the others.

The latter outings will begin June 23, July 8, 19 and 29, and Aug. 9; for colored children, Aug. 19, and for Jewish children, Aug. 30.

The county agent must be notified ten days in advance of the names and addresses of the children who intend to go in order that a medical examination may be made.

Tribune Reader Who Began with Initial Issue of Newspaper.

MRS. CATHERINE P. ANDREW
[Koch Photo.]

Another applicant for membership in the "Oldest TRIBUNE Reader club" is Mrs. Catherine Piatt Andrew of La Porte, Ind. She read a copy of the first edition that came off the press and declares her schoolmate, Mrs. Thomas Stewart, was responsible for giving the paper its name.

Mrs. Andrew was born in November, 1824, a few miles north of Cincinnati, O. Her father, James Andrew, and her uncle, Capt. A. P. Andrew, who donated the land on which the city of La Porte now stands, took turns in carrying her, a baby in arms, on the trip to La Porte. Mrs. Andrew was married on June 1, 1845, to Dr. George L. Andrew, who died in 1911.

"Through the friendship of Dr. Andrew with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stewart, we began reading THE TRIBUNE from its first publication," said Mrs. Andrew. "Mrs. Stewart named the paper. I think it was in 1850. Previously for a few years it had been called the Gem of the Prairie. Mr. Bross came to tea with Mr. Stewart and at the table said: 'Now all is ready to publish our paper, but we have not yet found a name.' 'I have always liked the New York Tribune,' said Mrs. Stewart. 'Why cannot Chicago have a Tribune?'"

Although she is more than 95 years old, Mrs. Andrew is still an active member of a women's literary society and of a reading club.

SEE WAY TO KEEP AGED EMPLOYES IN POSTAL JOBS

Discovery of a loophole in the law yesterday may save 200 postal employés who face loss of their positions because of their advanced ages. Among them are John M. Hubbard, assistant postmaster; Capt. Thomas I. Porter, in charge of the Chicago division of secret service, and Gen. James E. Stuart.

At the Federal building it was decided that, while the law requires the retirement of employés at the age of 65 to 70 years, dependent upon the classification of each department, it allows the chief of each department at Washington to reappoint each person affected for two year periods.

Successive appointments for a total of ten years will be allowed.

It is expected that all employés hit by the age limit will take advantage of this opportunity to continue in the service.

PRISON OR HOME? "SUFF" PICKET CHOOSES LATTER

Snared on Charge of Attempted Theft.

Miss Ethel Clawns, who claims to have been a picketeer of the National Woman's party, was offered a choice yesterday of going to the bridewell or to her home at Newark, N. J. She said she would go home. She had hoped to go to San Francisco to picket the Democratic convention.

Judge Hugh R. Stewart of the South Clark street court was the arbiter. Miss Clawns had been found guilty of a charge of attempting to remove various articles of feminine apparel from a State street department store without consulting the management. The judge first considered a fine of $75 and then reduced it to $25.

Judge Leaves It to Her.

"What will you do if I let you off with this light fine?" he asked.

"Why, I'll go to San Francisco and picket."

"Then I'll have to send you to the bridewell until that convention is over. That is, unless you agree to go to your home an dremain there."

"I will. I'll do anything to escape jail."

So she paid the $25 fine and a few hours later entrained for Newark.

She was the only member of the National Woman's party in court. The other picketeers have left for the Golden Gate.

Suffrage Status in Doubt.

Efforts to establish Miss Clawns' status with the suffrage movement were only partially successful. Telephone inquiry at the Illinois Equal Suffrage association elicited the following:

"O, no. We don't know who she is personally. They flock to the picket standard from all over the country, you know. Just like the I. W. W. What has happened to her?"

"She was pinched."

"Um. That is not surprising. But you were asking who she is. Just say in your item, a picket. Everybody will understand."

Miss Clawns was a picket.

EVERETT BROWN RE-ELECTED BY LIVE STOCK MEN

The National Live Stock exchange elected officers for the ensuing year at the closing session of the thirty-second annual convention at the Congress hotel yesterday.

Everett C. Brown of Chicago, president; C. H. Heinemann, Chicago, secretary, and W. A. Moody, St. Louis, treasurer, were re-elected.

The twenty-seven vice presidents, representing the various local live stock exchanges over the entire United States and composing the executive committee of the national body, were all reëlected except six. S. B. Stafford was named vice president to represent the Chicago exchange.

The next annual meeting of the National Live Stock exchange will be held at Cleveland, May, 1921.

This body decided to oppose actively any adverse legislation and to make specific recommendations on any legislative matters needed to benefit and encourage live stock raising. It will also urge the federal banks to finance the live stock producers.

JULY CORN $1.81, NEW HIGH MARK; CLOSE IS STRONG

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

July and September corn sold at new high figures on the crop and closed within a fraction of the top. Trade was light, but the local element went short on what it regards as a bulge and was forced to cover toward the last. Final trades were at net gains of 1⅞@1⅞c, while oats were up ⅛@⅜c. Rye was under pressure and lost ⅛@½c, while barley was unchanged.

Corn was on the up grade the greater part of the week, with a range of about 10½c, closing with net gains of 9¼@9⅝c, as compared with the previous week, while oats were up 3@3¼c. Rye was unsettled and closed 4c higher on July and 1½c off on September, while barley was unchanged.

Corn Sentiment Bullish.

There was little in the news on corn that attracted much attention, but sentiment was generally bullish and there is more or less disposition to buy the September on the breaks. Premiums of the cash article were well maintained early, but the spread between the July and the No. 2 yellow narrowed at the last as buyers refused to follow the advance in futures. Crop reports generally favorable.

A belief that next week would see numerous bad crop reports on oats led to persistent buying of September by commission houses, and, with a good class of buying on the July, an advance was easily attained. At 87c for September numerous resting orders to sell were encountered, but the close was at that figure. Several strong commission houses and local professionals are working on the bull side of the market.

Heavy Undertone in Rye.

Premiums in the sample market were firm at 15@15½c over July, paid for No. 2 white oats. Offerings light and shippers took hold readily. Crop reports from central Illinois were mixed, and there were complaints of dry weather from that section. Weekly forecast indicated moderate temperatures, with considerable cloudiness and occasional rains in all sections.

Rye showed a heavy undertone from the start, despite buying of July by houses with New York connections, the close was easy. Millers and the seaboard offered to resell grain, and it was understood No. 2 could have been obtained at 6@8c over July c. i. f. Buffalo. No. 2 on track sold at 10@11c over July.

Selling of lard by packers and scattered longs met limited buying support, but losses were only 5@10c. Ribs were neglected and closed unchanged to 2½c lower, and pork was unchanged to 10c lower.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The weekly review of the Chicago curb market by F. M. Zeller & Co. says:

Extreme dullness characterized the local unlisted securities market, few changes taking place; exception was noted in the automobile group, however, Motor Wheel advancing two points to sales at 13. Paige-Detroit was steady at 30 bid, 32 asked at the close, with very little trading taking place. Reo was inactive between 21 and 22. Stearns improved to 34 at the close on light trading.

Practically all trading in the rubber issues took place in Goodyear, the common selling between 125 and 130, ex. 150 per cent stock dividend; preferred was traded in between 88 and 90. Little interest was shown in the implement shares. Avery was somewhat stronger, being in demand at 110, with offerings at 116. Emerson Brantingham preferred was quiet at 75@80.

Sugar issues were very quiet. Columbia was in demand at 17¼, with offerings at 17¾; Holland-St. Louis, 16¼; Michigan, 11@11¼.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Corn and wheat receipts at primary markets the last week were the largest at this time in more than five years, and of oats were the smallest. Corn receipts were 5,841,000 bu, or 1,905,000 bu more than during the previous week, and 2,254,000 bu in excess of last year. Wheat receipts of 4,714,000 bu exceeded last year's by 2,978,000 bu, while of oats there were 2,515,000 bu, a loss of 651,000 bu for the week and of 3,125,000 bu from last year. The total primary receipts of all grains were 14,390,000 bu, or 163,000 bu less than last year, and 676,000 bu in excess of the five year average. Chicago had 2,134,000 bu of corn, or 479,000 bu over the previous week, and 905,000 bu more than last year, while of oats there were 1,103,000 bu, a decrease of 278,000 bu for the week, and 1,295,000 bu from last year.

Corn traders are looking for more than 300 cars in Chicago on Monday. The inspection sheet for Saturday, to be posted Monday, will show 194 cars. A few of the railroads have loaded more cars of corn and other grain within the last week, while the Illinois Central's loadings have decreased.

All corn futures advanced to new high levels yesterday and closed well toward the top. It was a pit condition, and, although there were many bearish opinions and a great deal of long corn was let go at $1.81 above for July, absorption of offerings was sufficient to make short sellers uneasy.

The British government has authorized millers to pay $2.12 per bu for home grown wheat in that country.

Some "Savings Contracts" Unsafe.

Any association which sells so called "savings contracts" covering a period of years should be required to publish complete statements of its condition at regular intervals, and should be subject to examination by state officials. Any person who signs a contract binding himself to make regular payments of his savings to a concern which does not disclose all details of its finances is imprudent.

This statement does not apply to the purchase of bonds, real estate, or other property on installments, but to the payment of savings to a concern which proposes to loan them at its discretion or use them in business, promising to return them with interest in a lump sum after a period of years. Building and loan associations are subject to examination by state officials, but a considerable number of concerns operating on somewhat similar lines are subject to no control but the judgment of their backers, who generally are men of limited experience in finance.

The most serious danger in connection with these promotions is that their assets may be dissipated so that when contracts begin to mature there will be no money to pay them. Another unfavorable point is that a severe forfeiture clause usually is concealed in their long and verbose contracts. A few weeks ago a Chicago woman who had been paying $16 a month to such a concern for a year found herself unable to continue. She expected to withdraw her entire $192, but found that under the terms of the contract she had signed she could get only $60, the other $132 being forfeited.

As the law does not interfere with these operations, it is left for investors to look out for themselves.

Charcoal Iron Company of America.

J. M., Ottawa, Ill.—The Charcoal Iron Company of America reported a deficit of $122,464 after interest last year. The amount of the interest charge was not reported, but the balance sheet showed $1,237,469, or 7 per cent, serial notes outstanding, and $233,661 of floating debt. Dividends on common stock were stopped about a year ago, and payments on the preferred ceased later. The $[illegible] paid in dividends last year came out of surplus, reducing it to $1,406,612.

Brief Answers.

E. C. G.—The Puget Sound Fruit Farms company has not replied to a request for official information, and the promotion "literature" does not give names of backers or any reference from which an idea of its financial standing might be obtained.

F. C. S., Atalissa, Ia.—When and if the Orchard Coal company complies with the Illinois law regulating the sale of securities, full information concerning it will be available.

RESERVE BANKS SHOW WEEK OF BIG FINANCING

As the result of a week of financial transactions of magnitude, including the retirement of a great block of treasury certificates of indebtedness, the payment for a new block of the same p... payment of the year's second installment of income and excess profits taxes, and government bond and interest disbursements, the weekly statements of the federal reserve banks and the New York clearing house banks disclosed some radical changes.

Both the New York and Chicago federal reserve banks made favorable exhibits, the common feature being a contraction in loans in continuance of the general policy of credit deflation. The New York clearing house banks' statement, however, was unfavorable and showed the effects of borrowings of income tax payers and of the $750,000,000 Belgian loan subscriptions.

New York Loans Slashed.

The New York federal reserve bank's improved position resulted chiefly from a reduction in loans of $134,297,000, those by government paper declining $103,825,000, and those on commercial bills contracting $30,472,000. The member banks reduced their loans about $112,000,000 and other federal reserve banks paid off about $22,000,000 of borrowings. Consequent to this reduction in loans the member banks' reserve account declined $48,000,000. Gold reserves declined $1,404,230. Gross deposits fell $33,724,000. Note circulation increased, $3,826,000.

As the result of these changes the ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined rose to 42.5 from 40.6 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, rose to 45.7 from 41.2 per cent in the preceding week.

Chicago Pays Off Debts.

The chief point of improvement in the statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank lay in the fact that it paid off all its borrowings from other federal reserve banks, a matter of $13,400,000, and now is clear of such indebtedness for the first time since the latter part of March. The bank was enabled to do this because of the lessening pressure for loans by its member banks.

The bank paid off its borrowings in gold, and consequently lost nearly $22,400,000 in gold to the gold settlement fund, through which obligations between the federal reserve banks are cleared. The bank also lost nearly $8,000,000 in the gold redemption fund, but gained about $15,000,000 in gold with the federal reserve agent. Taking these items together, total gold reserves showed a decline of $12,664,852, bringing the total down to $290,017,319, the lowest mark reported for some months. The decrease in net deposit liabilities permitted the relinquishment of so much gold without impairing the legal reserve position.

Loans to Members Drop.

Total loans declined $11,774,232, represented entirely by a recession of $16,930,810 on loans on government obligations, whereas loans on commercial bills increased $5,156,578. Total bills on hand decreased $10,814,275. Despite the decrease in loans, the reserve account of the member banks increased $235,542. Total deposits increased $13,243,129, government deposits increasing $8,811,898. Note circulation decreased $2,052,395.

The ratio of reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined declined to 40.1 from 40.54 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, fell to 42.17 from 43 per cent in the preceding week.

Associated Banks Bear Brunt.

The brunt of the week's heavy demand for money was met in the east by the New York clearing house banks. For the first time since March 20, reserves fell below legal requirements, showing a deficit of $3,847,970, compared with an excess of $38,028,810 in the preceding week. There was a similar deficit in the second week of June last year, followed by three other deficit statements in August, September, and December.

The current decline of $41,946,880 in reserves resulted from increases in loans and deposits and a decrease in reserves maintained by the member banks at the federal reserve bank.

Loans increased $48,409,000. The members' reserve account at the federal reserve bank declined $39,720,000. Net demand deposits increased $11,294,000, and time deposits increased $7,084,000. United States deposits declined $11,438,000. Cash declined $1,647,000. Note circulation remained about stationary.

Here and Now

Here and now are two things well worth considering, inasmuch as they represent all one can ever have. A future good, when one stops to think of it, is really no good at all; while now is ever present and continuous.

The time between the present date and the November election might therefore better be utilized for business activity than for a policy of "waiting to see who's elected."

There is plenty of business here to be done, and it can be done to the mutual advantage of everyone now. A general drop in prices is decidedly unlikely. Why wait?

Although a Chicago firm, organized by Chicago men, and developed in Chicago, eastern manufacturers appreciate our service, as evidenced by the fact that we are now designing plants for 10 firms east of the Alleghenies.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Bond transactions again were the feature of trading on the Chicago stock market yesterday. Chicago City and Connecting Railways 5s totaling $20,000 sold between 39¾ and 40, a fractional advance. Swift & Co. 5s also were firmer, and Commonwealth Edison 5s were steady. Trading in stocks was of fair proportions for the week-end session and prices were irregular. Lindsay Light showed some activity and was higher on dividend rumors. The packing house issues were weak. Chicago Pneumatic Tool was 5 points up from the previous sale. American Shipbuilding was up 2, and Shaw and Hartman gained a point each. Temtor "A" lost a point.

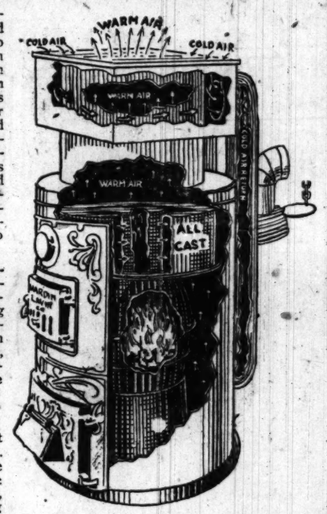
The Hardin-Lavin Pipeless Furnace Cuts Installation Costs and Fuel Bills



THE Hardin-Lavin all-cast Pipeless Heating Plant is adapted for the bungalow or home. The two large galvanized cold air return pipes in back take the cold air from the outside of floor register, down to bottom of system. It then passes through our improved humidifier and around the outer corrugated firepot. Then through the oversize, large cast radiator, being humidified and heated throughout its course of travel. It is then forced to all parts of the home, compelling the cold air to return and keeping a constant stream of fresh humidified warm air in circulation to all parts of the home.

Note—On ordinary pipeless furnaces the cold air is taken down inside of the outer casing. This, being separated from the heating chamber by a thin sheet iron partition, which is constantly hot on one side and cold on the other, eventually will warp and crack, permitting smoke and gas to enter the home and hindering circulation.

Cut to Fit—Easy to Install

OUR patented adjustable throat will fit any height basement. Specifications: Base plate is one piece cast. Ash pit is all cast, large and deep. Grates are extra heavy, air distributing, cradle-hung rocking and dumping type and will burn any kind of hard or soft coal efficiently. Firepot is heavy, cast in two sections, corrugated in and out. The upper fire section is heavy cast, corrugated in and out, and made with deep cut joints. The over-size all-cast two-piece dome has the longest fire travel possible, with clean-out front and rear. Casing is double constructed. This heavy ornamental front and machine fitted door add grace and durability. Cement, humidifier, poker, shaker, controlling dial complete, so that drafts and heat can be controlled from the home without going to basement. We have hundreds of satisfied users all over the country. We guarantee that this new heating system will give entire satisfaction.

Hope was afraid she was not helping the young man much. She was also suddenly conscious of a surprising desire to help him.

Gage's Office Mackintosh

by Elizabeth Jordan

Concerning a Young Man Who Made the Mistake of Hiding His Light Under a Bushel

IT was Henry Haskins, better known to the employés of Haskins & Thorne as "the boss," who uttered the verdict. He uttered it so distinctly that G. Montgomery Gage, looking up some records in the file room, heard every word through the thin partition between this quiet retreat and Haskins' private office.

The bending figure of G. Montgomery Gage stood upright with a jerk. He was no eavesdropper. Indeed, he had a rather nice sense of honor. But the words he had caught included his own name; and they were so few and so warmly delivered that his mind had registered each of them before his ethical sense awakened. He had caught first, almost without realizing it and certainly without interest, a sentence from the lips of Bradley, the office manager, uttered in the gentle, persuasive tones Bradley reserved for Haskins alone.

"But what's the matter with him? I think he'd develop into the best possible man for the place."

Haskins ignored Bradley's opinion, as he had a way of doing in Bradley's presence, though he occasionally quoted it afterward; but he answered Bradley's question.

"The matter with G. Montgomery Gage," he irritably announced, "is that he's wholly colorless. The fellow hasn't any personality."

The body of G. Montgomery Gage, twenty feet away in the file room, sank limply into the nearest chair. So that was what "the boss" thought of him. The fact that even yet he had not taken in the full force of the criticism did not prevent him from fiercely resenting it. For an instant he gave himself up to a scorching humiliation, shot through with anger. Then the next words of the dialogue fell upon his heat like an autumnal rain.

"But I think——" This was Bradley.

"No, you don't. If you were doing any thinking you'd catch my point. This young Gage——"

Young Gage realized that the time had come to take himself away from their proximity. He rose and dazedly made his way out of the file room and along a corridor to a remote little office assigned to Yawley, a salesman he knew now was out of town. He hoped he might find this office empty. His own desk was in the firm's crowded counting room, back to back with Bradley's. It was augustly fenced off by a low mahogany railing, but the office boys stepped over this with care free abandon, and associates cheerfully addressed both men across it. The spot did not offer that privacy Gage's suffering soul now demanded.

Yawley's little room was empty. With an ejaculation of relief that was half a groan Gage bolted into it, locked the door, and, sitting down before its undusted desk, rested his elbows on the cluttered top, took his head between his hands, and called upon his will to steady his reeling faculties.

His will, which was a fairly well trained one, presently obeyed. Slowly the situation grew clear in his mind. In his first daze he had actually imagined himself "in for the blue envelope"—though, considering his excellent record, it seemed incredible that he should be discharged. It was incredible, he reasoned with reviving poise. Why, he was Bradley's right hand man. Only last week Bradley had told him so and had buoyantly hinted at something pleasant to be discussed later.

Gage knew what that something pleasant was. It was the possible promotion of G. Montgomery Gage to the job of city salesman, made vacant by the untimely death of Bob Walton, who had successfully filled it for three years. Gage's mind, quite clear now, worked with gratifying alertness. It grasped the crux of the situation, which was very simple. Bradley had suggested him for the vacant post and Haskins had turned him down.

The rest was not so easy to follow, but with a new look in his steady eyes and a jaw line suddenly tightened young Gage set himself to the task of getting at the bottom of it. He had been turned down because Haskins did not approve of him—because Haskins considered him "colorless," whatever the deuce that meant, and lacking in "personality."

The charge of colorlessness left G. Montgomery Gage flat. He was at sea as to just what it meant and how to remedy it. The matter of personality was clearer. He understood it in a general way, but this was no time for generalities. He must get down to rockbottom. To the subconscious mind of G. Montgomery Gage a man with "personality" was the loud, hearty, breezy, self-assertive, rather vulgar sort—in short, the type he himself abysmally disliked and had gone to extremes to avoid becoming. Now he had discovered that the boss liked that type—or did he? He, Haskins, was loud and self-assertive, but he was neither breezy nor hearty. Instead he seemed the willing victim of a perpetual grouch. Also he remembered that Haskins openly disliked a fat employé named Walker, who represented breeziness and heartiness in their fullest flowering. Walker was a valuable man, but Haskins had no personal intercourse with him, and every one except Walker knew why. So perhaps Haskins didn't like breeziness and heartiness after all.

And what was "personality" anyway? To Gage, in this serious hour, its meaning was less clear than ever before. It was merely a word and a hazy impression. He decided to learn its exact meaning. Returning to the counting room with brisk steps, he dropped into his desk chair and the next moment was turning the leaves of a dictionary with fingers that still felt slightly unsteady.

Here it was. His eyes ran past the meaningless lines with which Mr. Webster sought to evade giving a direct reply to the eager seeker for knowledge: "Personality: quality or state of being personal, or of being a person." Humph! Much good that sort of definition did a chap! "Personal existence or identity." No one could say he didn't exist, anyway. "That which constitutes distinction of person"—perhaps he was getting at it now. "Individuality; as, a striking personality."

The muscles in the back of Gage's neck began to ache. Also his ire rose. He was getting nowhere. "Striking personality." Just how much did that mean? Or did it mean very much anyway? He decided that it didn't, and his spirits sank still further over the next definition. "A personal being: a person." If old Haskins thought he, G. Montgomery, wasn't a person—his breath caught sharply. Here it was. He had been right after all: "Quality of relating to a particular person especially disparagingly or hostilely." Ah, ha! He was getting at it now. There was no question that in discussing him Haskins had been both "disparaging" and "hostile." And, yes, here was the rest of it: "as, vulgar personality."

Young Gage closed the dictionary with a deep sigh. He decided that his hazy impression had been correct, but the reflection brought him no comfort. It was impossible to settle down to work. As a cover for his continued abstraction he seized a pad and pencil, wrote down some figures, and apparently pored over them absorbedly. It was not his habit to do this sort of thing. He could not remember ever having done it before. But he had had an awful jolt—that was the cold truth of it. How the deuce could a fellow get to work right after hearing the boss say he was colorless and lacked personality?

The hand of G. Montgomery Gage crept toward the dictionary and found the word "colorless." Perhaps that would help him with some example of its application to human beings. With absorbed interest his gray eyes followed the brief definition;

"Colorless: without color."

Under his breath, but with deep feeling, G. Montgomery Gage uttered a rude word. A lot of help that sort of thing gave a man. Well, he'd see what color was. His brain reeled as he wrestled mentally with the information Mr. Webster handed out to him: "A property of visible phenomena. . . . Strictly excluding black and white . . . a paint . . . a pigment . . . a national flag, ensign . . . outward semblance, especially such as hides the real character. . . . "

Young Gage groaned and hurriedly turned the groan into a cough. Did the boss want him to hide his real character? "Tone scheme or harmony of color in a painting: the free use of words. . . . " Gage breathed a little better. He was using words very freely by this time, though with the caution necessitated by his environment. Perhaps, after all, there was more color in him than he had realized. But the final definition sent him to the mat:

"Acoustics; timbre; clang."

He sighed again, closed the dictionary with a gesture of finality, and, sitting back in his chair, looked around the big counting room. Was there any one there who could help him—any one, to put it briefly, who knew more than the dictionary? Certainly there was more in the words of the boss than Mr. Webster had given him. His eyes fell on Bradley, whose usually smooth brow was knit into an intricate pattern of cross stitching as he bent over his work. Clearly Bradley was annoyed. Gage wondered if Bradley had known what the boss meant. Probably not, but he had undoubtedly beaten Gage to the decision that lay coiled in their meaning—Haskins' decision that Gage was not up to the new job because he lacked "color" and "personality."

G. Montgomery's roving eyes fell on a smooth, brown head bent over a desk across the room. Resting there, they brightened. Hope Strong was a mighty intelligent girl. She was confidential secretary to young Thorne, the junior member of the firm. It was believed in the office that she did all Thorne's work and most of his thinking—young Thorne himself being addicted to golf. It was rumored that she read much and that, as she belonged to a prominent but financially reduced family, she moved in superior social circles. Gage rose, crossed the room to Miss Strong's desk, and, helping himself to a chair, dropped into it with an effect of decision.

"Can you spare a moment?" he asked rather formally. He was always a trifle formal. Miss Strong, who was rarely formal, nodded absently. She was just signing a letter with the firm's name and her own initials and she finished her task and added the letter to a waiting pile at her right before she spoke. Then she faced the newcomer with a smile.

"Miss Strong," began Gage. "I'm going to ask you a question that's a little outside the usual run of business."

"Yes?" Miss Strong was not especially interested.

"If you heard that a man was colorless and without personality what impression of him would that convey to your mind—if you knew it didn't apply to his work?" he added hastily.

The girl did not reply at once. The question was unexpected and she gave her mind to it. As she reflected she looked at the quiet, well dressed, steady eyed, smooth faced young man before her. Under her gaze he flushed very slightly, but she did not need that signal of distress to read his secret. She knew exactly what man had been described as "colorless and without personality." She decided to help G. Montgomery Gage if she could.

"Why," she said at last, "I think I should get the impression that he was just an average man—that there was nothing about him unusual or arresting—that he wasn't the kind to make me notice him or think of him in one way or another.

"O!" For a moment young Gage digested this in silence.

"Is that against a fellow?" he asked at last. "To give one that impression, I mean, if he is admittedly doing his job up to the notch?"

"Why, no one wants to seem ordinary, you know," Hope suggested. "I suppose that's what it amounts to—that the man without color or personality seems an ordinary, everyday, uninteresting, untemperamental chap. Of course he may not be," she added, rather underlining the words. "He may just convey that impression to certain minds. Underneath he may be very unusual, you see—very clever and all that sort of thing; but—well, I suppose we can say he doesn't carry his stock in his show windows."

Hope was afraid she was not helping the young man much. She was also suddenly conscious of a surprising desire to help him—a desire caused by a look in his steady eyes which she had never seen there before. Now these eyes brightened suddenly.

"Then a man with personality is one who does carry his stock in the show window, isn't he?" he asked eagerly. "He's the assertive, pushing, cocksure type, isn't he? That's what I've always thought."

"No, indeed; not necessarily that at all." Hope was getting interested. "A man of that kind certainly has color and personality—but it's the unpleasant sort. One sees it, feels it, but one doesn't admire it."

"Isn't it always unpleasant?" Gage's mind was returning to Mr. Webster.

"Good gracious, no. Why, a man may have a charming personality. He may be like—well, like Bob Walton. You know how altogether delightful Bob was. He had a very strong personality and everything about it was manly and fine."

With this obvious illustration of her point in mind Hope began to see her way clear. And Gage, recalling Haskins' words and Walton's job, experienced an illumination.

"If a stranger came into this office," continued Hope, warming to her subject, "and met twenty men, including Bob Walton, which man do you think he'd like best and remember longest?"

Gage nodded.

"Walton, of course."

"Of course. And why? Bob wasn't as clever as lots of the men. He wasn't as clever as you are," she added so simply that the words seemed commonplace, "or at least he wasn't as quick and efficient. He wasn't at all good looking either, bless him! But he had a delicious sense of humor, the most contagious laugh in the world, and a big, understanding, sympathetic heart. In other words, he had an unusually lovable personality."

"I see." Young Gage was with her now, following each point she made, leaping ahead to illustrations of his own. "But where did his color come in?"

Hope laughed.

"Color? Well, 'color' is a little hard to define. The person who is always the same might be said to have one color. It may be a strong color—an exuberant, flashy red such as some vulgar person suggests, or a nice, dependable gray such as you suggest."

Every word was a friendly little poultice on Gage's sore heart. "Bob was a kaleidoscope," she went on cheerfully. "His color was changing all the time. Sometimes he was blue," she joked, "notwithstanding his sunny nature; you know how strong his reactions were. Often he was the most sunshiny gold. O," she broke off, "I'm getting beyond my depth—but you see what I mean."

"Yes." G. Montgomery Gage stood up. He felt as if she had opened the windows of his soul and sent in a spring breeze. His bad quarter of an hour was over. He knew, too, that he was under very real obligations to this quiet, brown eyed, brown haired girl with whom heretofore his intercourse had been so purely formal and businesslike. He smiled at her and the smile was like an illumination from within. It so transformed his dark, rather serious young face that the well poised Miss Strong almost thrilled under it.

"I'm going to tell you something," he began. And because he felt suddenly shy he was suddenly very boyish. "You've helped me a lot—much more than you realize. You see——" he hesitated, then brought out his confession—"I'm the chap that some one said was without color and personality."

"I knew that." Hope spoke so casually that his self-consciousness disappeared.

"You did?" his voice flattened. "But of course you did. You recognized the description."

"No." She shook her dark head at him. The little gesture was so intimate that he had a momentary sense of being alone in the world with her. "I merely realized that you might give that impression to others."

G. Montgomery looked straight down into her brown eyes. What he saw there, though it was merely a golden friendliness, made him feel slightly dizzy. This was his first experience in the greatest talking game in the world—the universal "You are—am I" interchange of interested young humans. With sudden resolution he sat down again.

"Not to you?" he asked quietly.

"No—not to me."

"Why not?"

If Hope had been a self-analyst she might have paused at this moment long enough to realize that as a matter of fact she had given rather less thought to Bradley's young assistant than she was leading him to suppose. She had admired him in an impersonal way, had respected his ability, had enjoyed the few brief and matter of fact encounters each working day had brought to them. But strangely, in this moment, it seemed to her that they had known each other very well and for a long time, and that now suddenly she was seeing a new and stirring phase of an intimately familiar personality. The sensation made her self-conscious. So did the new, arrested look of Gage's steady eyes. She began to flounder a little.

"No, I—I—why, it's always hard to put these things into words. But I had an idea that you really had an unusually vivid personality and that you were—well, wearing a business mackintosh over it."

G. Montgomery Gage drew a deep breath. It was a great moment in life. At last, in a lonely world, he had found the one who understood him and who had discovered his carefully guarded secret.

"That's exactly what I've been doing," he confessed. "I've been modeling myself on a man I admired in my home town—the quiet, reserved, self-contained type. It seemed to me that he had just the right business manner—I've been imitating it for two years and hiding my real self—and now," he finished bitterly, "look at me!"

Hope's low laugh was like the gurgle of a hidden brook.

"Who is it that has found you lacking in color and personality?" she asked lightly. "Or may one ask,"

"One may, if you're the one." The youth in front of her was changing into another man before her eyes. The office mackintosh was opened, was thrown back. "It was Haskins."

"O! Mr. Haskins——"

Haskins, if he had heard those simple words, would have been pained by the modulations of Hope's voice. He admired and respected Miss Strong.

"But it's important," explained Gage, looking at her with that new expression in his steady eyes. "It's a question . . ." he hesitated, then plunged ahead. One didn't make half way confidences to a girl like this. "It's a question of promotion. He thinks I'm not up to specifications in color and personality."

She nodded. "You've been playing the rôle of a man twenty years older than you are."

The young man sobered. "And the time has come to drop it?"

She shook her dark head.

"No," she said positively. "Don't drop it. Vary it. Keep it, but let your own personality show through it. For instance," she put her head on one side and glanced at him mischievously, "smile oftener. You do it so well!"

Both young things laughed outright. At the sound every head near them turned in their direction as if moved by a common spring. Neither observed the phenomenon. Gage rose again.

"I'll never forget this," he said. "Whether I reach the job or not, you've put me on the right track for future sprinting, and I know it."

She stopped him as he was turning away.

"There's one thing more," she said. "I know from observation that you're a very fast worker. But—" she hesitated—"you work so quietly and with so little fuss that undiscriminating persons——"

"Such as the boss?"

"Such as the boss," she agreed coolly, "might think you were—well, almost slow."

That took him on the raw and she saw it. But she had heard him criticized as deliberate and unconsciously she was now supplying him with Haskins' final criticism, which he had left the file room without hearing. "The fellow's work's all right, I suppose, if you say so"—this grudgingly, to Bradley—"but he doesn't put any snap or pep into it!"

Still looking at him with the golden friendliness that was so soothing, she wiped out the memory of the tacit criticism with her next words:

"The next time you do a great big job in a few minutes make a little fuss about it. Let them see your wheels go round. Not often, of course, but just often enough to make them realize what is happening."

Gage nodded. "I get you. It's what I've always wanted to do. My impulse has been to cackle like a hen! You'll hear me doing it some day!"

He went back to his desk and plunged into his work with characteristic absorption. Further problems connected with his personality and color could wait till after business hours, and they did.

Until late that night, however, G. Montgomery Gage sat in a haze of tobacco smoke in the small living room of his bachelor apartment and made an inventory of himself as he was and might be. Thanks to the momentum supplied by Hope Strong, he had soon arrived at conclusions that were few but definite.

Obviously he had overdone the stern captain of industry attitude which he had so admired in his model. The model could carry it, being older and having, as it were, "arrived." On Gage it had settled like steel armor, stiffening him into what might easily have seemed confirmed priggishness. The thing to do, of course, was to follow Miss Strong's advice—keep enough of the old attitude to retain confidence in his stability, and loosen some of the youthful enthusiasm he had held so sternly in leash. By temperament he was overoptimistic, and he knew it. It would be a pretty job, well worth putting over, to merge those two personalities into one as steady and reliable as Gage had been, yet as human and—no, not as likable as Bob—he could never be that, he admitted—but as approachable and as companionable as Bob. Perhaps he could put that much over. And that effect, he knew now, would incidentally supply the color for which the boss seemed yearning.

At this point Gage should have concentrated on Haskins and the new job, but he did nothing of the kind. He concentrated on Hope Strong, recalling all she had said and all he had said, wishing he had said more and better things, planning future talks in which he could say better things. Without realizing why he was in a state of extraordinary mental and physical well being. He could not remember having felt since boyhood such a vivid sense of being joyously alive. Perhaps it was the jolt he had received, or the talk with Hope, or both. One thing was certain, he'd give those fellows in the office so much color and personality from now on that they'd think they were watching a rainbow.

During the next few days the members of the office staff of Haskins & Thorne were privileged to observe a surprising transformation in the personality of the quiet and reserved young man they had known as G. Montgomery Gage. For one thing, he had become George Gage.

"Great," applauded Bradley when his assistant asked to have the name changed in the office records. "I hate these initialed double barreled names. Suits you better, too. Why didn't you do it long ago?"

"No time to think of it," George Gage affably explained. "You've kept me too darned busy."

Bradley looked at him with sudden interest.

"What's happened to you lately?" he demanded. "Fallen in love?"

George sighed. "A fat chance I'd have if I did," he reminded his chief. "You've kept me here every evening this week. When I fall in love I'll ask for a vacation."

"You'll get it," promised Bradley. He had got into a way of watching his young assistant with a puzzled expression. The general office theory that the change in Gage's manner and spirits was due to a large increase in salary was not shared by Bradley, who knew better. George kept them all guessing. He was not overdoing his new rôle. He

THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE LITTLE FOLKS GO CAMPING.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"WHEE!" shouted the Dunce and, tossing his hat in the air, he turned six handsprings, three somersaults, and finished by standing on his Teenie Weenie head.

"Hi say," cried Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, who flew down to the ground in front of the shoe house to see what the excitement was all about. "What's all the gymnastics for, Dunce?"

"We're goin' c-c-c-campin'!" answered the Dunce as he danced a jig.

"'Ow very interesting!" said Tilly. "Tell me all about it."

"Well, you see," said the General, who could hardly talk from laughing at the silly Dunce, "we were all out of leather and so we thought it would be a good thing to go over to the big swamp where we could get some frog skins for shoes. Everybody wanted to go, so I decided to make it an outing as well as a business trip."

"Are you going to camp near the swamp?" asked the sparrow.

"Yes; we'll take along the tents and camp out for a few weeks," answered the General.

"Well, I'll try and fly over and see you while you're there," said the bird, and, spreading her wings, she flew away.

THE DOCTOR

TEENIE WEENIE DOLL.

The Teenie Weenie shoes were made out of frog skins, which the little folks tanned. The kind of leather we use in our shoes would be quite too stiff and heavy for the Teenie Weenies, so the little people used frog skin, which was most soft and at the same time very tough.

For several days the Teenie Weenies were quite busy, for everything under the rose bush had to be put in good shape before they left. The tiny tents had to be mended, the wagons greased, and the mouse harness had to be put in good condition. Six mice were hired to pull the three army wagons and so many things were loaded into each wagon it was about all two strong mice could do to pull it.

One of the wagons was entirely filled with food, which the Cook said would feed the Teenie Weenies for six or seven weeks, providing they could get some berries and vegetables to help out. The little folks loaded the wagon with twenty-six lima beans, thirty navy beans, one thimbleful of cocoa, three thimblefuls of sugar, four dried prunes, and many other things, such as flour and the like. The other two wagons were filled with bedding, tools, tents, dishes and all the pans and kettles which the Cook would need.

Grandpa, Mr. and Mrs. Lover, the Twins and the Scotchman were left at home to look after the Teenie Weenie garden and houses.

The Teenie Weenies set out one fine morning and they traveled quite a long ways the first day, considering the fact that they were forced to climb several high hills. One hill was so very steep that several of the Teenie Weenie men had to help push the wagons in order to get them over. Paddy Pinn, the Indian, and the Cowboy carried guns and walked beside the wagons, carefully watching for bugs, toads, and other dangerous things.

Late in the afternoon the General ordered the Teenie Weenies to stop for the day and the little men made camp under a big green fern for the night. The tiny tents were put up, the beds made and a table was soon put up for the Cook.

Soon a huge fire was built and in a short time the Cook had several tiny kettles boiling merrily over the flame.

My, how the Teenie Weenies did eat! They were mighty hungry after their long tramp and the Dunce ate until he could hardly stand up.

After their supper had been eaten and the dishes washed the Teenie Weenies sat around the camp fire and told stories.

The little folks might have sat up and talked for a long time if the Dunce hadn't fallen asleep and almost rolled into the fire.

"Well, it looks to me as though it was about time to go to bed," said the General as he pulled the Dunce away from the fire, and presently the Teenie Weenies rolled themselves up in their Teenie Weenie blankets and fell fast asleep.

was very artistic. On the job he was almost as serious and reserved as ever. But among his associates he was rapidly becoming what he had not been up till now, "a good mixer." They had all liked him, but in an unenthusiastic way. He was on the square. Now, they sought him out, "jollied" him, and were casually "jollied" by him, and talked about him excessively among themselves.

One day he pleasantly but flatly disagreed with Bradley on a matter of office policy. He had often done this, and Bradley was big enough to take it good humoredly. This day Bradley turned on him with quick decision.

"Go and tell the boss that," he ordered. "Get him to decide it."

Gage stared at him. "Great Scott, I don't want to do that," he began. "You know I follow your orders. I merely told you what I think because you've encouraged me to."

"That's all right." Bradley's words came crisply. "Now I want to know what Haskins thinks. Go and ask him."

"Why don't you——"

Bradley looked straight at him.

"Go and ask him," he repeated, and this time he spoke in a tone of curt command.

Gage went rather dazedly. He wasn't at all nervous. He had never been afraid to talk to Haskins. But he was afraid that Bradley was annoyed. Then the solution of the situation flashed upon him. Bradley, good old Bradley, was giving him his chance—his chance to show Haskins his new color and personality! The revelation was alarming. What if the new color and personality didn't come up to the scratch? His heart dropped a beat. Then with set teeth he strode to the door of the private office, knocked once, and entered without waiting for permission.

Haskins, bent over his desk in august isolation, raised his head and grunted. Young Gage took the chair beside the boss' desk and plunged at once into the subject of his mission. But even as he spoke he realized that he was reverting to the manner he had always worn with Haskins—a manner self-contained, cool, and, yes, colorless.

"Mr. Haskins," he said, "Mr. Bradley and I differ about that Wetmore matter." Haskins grunted again. Leaning back in his chair, he stared at the caller. Haskins was in an ugly mood, and in such moods it was his pleasant habit to charge at any one who approached him. He charged at Gage now, head down.

"O, you differ, do you?" he asked ironically. "How do you differ?"

The office mackintosh of which Hope had spoken was well in place again and buttoned tight."

"Well, sir, I think——"

"Guess we'll hear what Bradley thinks first," mumbled Haskins. "We can wait a bit for the rest."

The snub was so unexpected that Gage crimsoned and his spirit rallied. A few buttons burst from the office mackintosh.

"You know exactly what Bradley thinks, sir," he reminded his employer. "He told you yesterday. I was trying to save your time. But if you have forgotten—" he added, with a sudden grin.

The grin was an illuminating one. It was based on the fact that Gage had scored twice and that he knew it. Haskins boasted of the fact that he never forgot anything. The boss saw the grin, but ignored it.

"I inferred that some new development had come up," he snapped. "Otherwise I don't see why I'm bothered with the thing again."

Under his bushy eyebrows he stared with hot eyes at the youngster who had had the impertinence to take a "rise" out of him. That remark would hold him a minute, he thought. But it didn't. Young Gage grinned again.

"A new development has come up," he said cheerfully. "I don't agree with Mr. Bradley's handling of the matter."

"O, you don't!" The boss was now enraged and pawing. "I guess we'll let Bradley settle it," he announced. "What Bradley says here goes," he added. "Is that clear?"

"Yes, sir, it is." Gage was on his feet now. He was mad clear through and he showed it. He reached the door in four long strides. Then, stopping with his hand on the knob, he said conversationally, "I'll say good-by, Mr. Haskins. I'm leaving Saturday."

Haskins took the remark in silence, though it startled him. The boy was valuable to the firm and he knew it. He had not meant the interview to end in such a manner.

"That's the first I've heard of it," he snapped as Gage opened the door. "When did you resign?"

"This very minute." Young Gage sent back the reply from the door sill. As he shut the door he was recalled by a bellow from within.

"Come back here!"

George went back. He was still very angry and the steady eyes he fixed on his employer betrayed it. His smile had wholly disappeared.

"What does this nonsense mean? Are you ass enough to think that you know more than Bradley?"

Haskins was sparring for time. In his heart he was afraid. Bradley would be furious, and Bradley was one of the few indispensable men he had. Also, he now realized, he himself had not shown up very well in the little engagement just ended. Gage was speaking.

"It means just this, Mr. Haskins," he said formally, "I don't think I know better than Mr. Bradley, but he has always been kind enough to listen to me on the few occasions when we have differed."

He did not add, as he might have done, that very often Bradley had come round to his, Gage's, point of view and had been glad of it, as he would probably do in the present instance. Bradley, he knew, would not have sent him to Haskins unless Gage had a good case.

"Today Mr. Bradley himself sent me to you," he ended. Haskins thought he saw an outlet.

"Why the devil didn't you tell me that in the beginning?" he demanded.

Gage's nerves snapped. Tearing off his office mackintosh, he hurled it at his employer's feet. The week had been a hard one and this episode was the climax.

"Why the devil didn't you know it," he retorted fiercely. "Do you think I'm the kind of hound that would come sneaking in to you behind Bradley's back?"

Haskins wheeled in his chair and stared at him.

"I don't know anything about the kind you are," he snapped, but his voice and manner had undergone a change.

"Then it's high time I resigned. Good day, sir." Gage was again on his way to the door.

"Hold on a minute." Haskins had done some quick thinking in the last minute and a half. Now he made one of the snapshot decisions for which he was famous.

"I was wrong, my boy," he said, frankly. "I haven't a leg to stand on. You must lay it to the—O well, to the heat or something."

The austere features of George Gage relaxed. Almost unwillingly, he grinned.

"If that's an apology, sir," he said, "I accept it—and we'll consider the incident closed."

"No, we won't. There's something else."

Haskins was interested in this fellow who had beaten him at every point of the little verbal battle just ended. He admired the boy—and when the youngster grinned like that there was something very likable about him. Also, Haskins was greatly surprised and intrigued. He could not reconcile this young volcano with the quiet youth who had heretofore made an interview so colorless. Jove, it held plenty of color now!

"Sit down," he said thoughtfully. "Bradley was speaking to me a few days ago about Walton's job. We haven't filled it yet, you know. Been looking around. Do you think——"

A little later young Gage dropped into the chair beside Hope Strong and mopped his moist forehead with an immaculate handkerchief.

"I've had a rather strenuous time with the boss," he confessed. "I was insulted, I insulted him. I resigned, was reinstated and promoted; and it all happened in six minutes. Some speed, eh, for a slow one? Now," his voice grew serious, "will you dine with me tonight and go to the theater to celebrate? There are a million things I want to ask you about."

"Of course I'll go, and I congratulate you on your promotion. It's just too wonderful to have it come so soon." Hope was radiant. "But I don't have to answer all the million questions tonight, do I?"

George Gage's answer was prompt.

"Hardly. We've got all the rest of our lives together to talk things over in," he assured the lady, with his illuminating boyish grin.

INTO the DITCH By Oney Fred Sweet

How It Feels to Be In An Automobile Accident

I KNOW now how it feels to be in an automobile that leaves the edge of the road, turns over, and goes skidding down a twelve foot embankment, while traveling at the rate of twenty miles an hour. I know what you think of when she starts to turn over, when she lands with a crash, and when you pick yourself out of the debris.

This may lack some of the qualifications of a fiction story, but if it is devoid of plot it cannot be said to be without a banging climax, inasmuch as we landed at the bottom of a ditch with the car crashing about us.

To a certain extent I blame my son for the experience. I have said that I would never write of the things he says and does, but—well, all his life he has had the automobile craze. In vain, I have tried to divert his attention to intellectual pursuits on Sunday afternoons, but on Sunday afternoons all the cars are abroad and he cannot resist the sight of the gliding wheels and the sound of the honking horns. He is "going on 3" now, and I have felt that he ought to begin to show signs of settling down, but no, he belongs to the modern age that is not satisfied unless it can see the landscape whiz past.

When my son came pulling and tugging at me and pointing to a car out in front, I lifted my spectacles just long enough from an article I was reading regarding a plan to relieve the world utterly and for all time of its problems, and replied in a deep and even tone of voice, "Thou shalt not covet, my son. The automobile on the highway is neither mine nor thine."

But my namesake was not to be so easily squelched, and the good man on the highway, who seemed to be having some trouble with his machine for the nonce, overhearing, bade us enter the car, which he hoped, by further persuasion, to influence in continuing on a journey which apparently had no destination in particular.

And so with the good man at the wheel and Oney Fred in my lap we fared forth, joining that vast Sabbath afternoon procession which follows road maps, the finger of roadside pedestrians, and the signs that flaunt the virtues of various tire makes as well as point directions. When my son chortled with glee at every hard bump we struck, I realized more fully than ever the vast difference in our outlooks on life.

We rode and we rode, and everybody else seemed to be riding. We glided through Evanston and the north shore suburbs. We caught glimpses of the lake with the sun upon it. We coasted down asphalted hills, rumbled over bridged ravines, came upon watchful men with stars on their coats. There is nothing like a car.

"Keep your hands off that steering wheel," I cautioned my son.

He whimpered a little, but I was stern.

We stopped at Highland Park, got out of the car a few minutes, and went to the edge of the cliff to watch the waves break on the beach far below. It was a wonderful view, but my son became impatient to get back to the car again. Somehow, he managed to get back into the machine first and for a brief instant he clutched the steering wheel undisturbed, but Mr. Rheins brushed him over into my lap and we were on our way.

We reached the open country. We lost our way. We came to a hilltop and in the distance we discovered a string of cars, all of them city bound. The day was drawing to a close. The cars were going home. They spread out as far as the eye could reach in either direction. We speeded up to join the procession.

We passed a car that had dropped out of the procession. The struggle of its recent occupants to fix up a rear tire for some reason or other presented a comedy situation. Nothing was wrong with our tires. We heard the honk of a horn behind us and immediately a car, hitting it up faster than our own, whizzed past us. Something in the expression on Mr. Rheins' face just then told me that the passing of the other car had not pleased him.

Alas, we were riding along merrily enough. Why should we care? No matter how fast you go through life, there will probably always somebody going a little faster. Why not enjoy the scenery along the way? But I saw Mr. Rheins was displeased.

Thinking it over, I realize now that the dark cloud of disaster began to cross our path the the moment when the passing of a faster car displeased Mr. Rheins who was sitting at the steering wheel by my side. The driver of the car that passed us but added to Mr. Rheins' displeasure in turning and waving his hand back and forth as a signal of derision and contempt. We increased our speed and the car ahead increased its speed. Both cars began to weave along a road that was none too smooth. My son waved his arms and yelled.

"Let him go," I cautioned Mr. Rheins. "What do we care? We've got plenty of time."

Instead of soothing Mr. Rheins, my remark seemed to work an opposite effect. I presume a man who is driving his own car does not relish suggestions from one who is aboard only through his hospitality and who, through conversation, has easily revealed a lack of knowledge about cars and driving in general.

I made no further remark. I satisfied myself with bracing my feet and gritting my teeth. After all, I had every confidence in the Good Samaritan who was taking us for a drive. What right had I to criticize a gift excursion? Was not my son enjoying it all immensely? For his especial benefit we struck a series of ruts that furnished all that could be asked for in the way of thrilling bounces to the car's roof and back.

I am unable to describe the landscape encountered during the Ben Hur performance that developed. I only remember that the side of the car on which my son and I were sitting began to list and I leaned the other way in the hope of reviving its equilibrium. For a distance we sped on, the car absolutely refusing to right itself, and then——

Down,
down,
down.

Bumpity, bump, bump, bump!

Crash, bang! The sound of broken glass!

To those contemplating a similar adventure there is no particular advice I can give on what to do in such an emergency. I have had but the one experience. All I can say is that what happens happens so quickly that you have neither time to pray nor time to make arrangements for landing advantageously. You are landed before you have a chance to do much thinking in any channel.

You hear shouts high on the top of the embankment above you, for on a main traveled road on a Sunday afternoon the spectators of your stunt are certain to gather in large numbers long before you have extricated yourself from the junk heap.

There is a possibility, of course, that you will land with such a thump and in such a position that the comment of the reviewers of the wreck will be unable to reach your ears. In this case you will never have opportunity to learn that you were "going too fast," that you'd "ought to have put on the brakes," that you'd ought "to have known that it was a bad stretch of road."

But in this instance I could hear the comment above distinctly. I raised myself on an elbow, tried to collect my thoughts, picked my spectacles out of the stirred dust and crushed weeds, and in shaken fashion peered about for my son.

It is when this is all over, you will find, that you really start to think about what might have resulted. Suppose your arm had been dangling over the side of the car—it would have been crushed. Suppose you had gone head first—you would have been hurled through the windshield.

Hands, whose owners you see not, help you out of the wreckage. You are given a glass of water to drink. The crowd that has gathered is kind. Strong arms lend themselves to the task of attempting to patch the car together again. The machine's bruises are thoroughly examined and the extent of harm that has come to it is the subject of much speculation.

Mr. Rheins, himself, did not seem deeply interested in the car's fate. Maybe he was thinking about the man who had been ahead of us, I don't know. He was rather white about the lips. He seemed to be living again through that hasty period between the time when he had breathed "O Lord" and then "Thank God."

My son—I observed him while I was raising myself on my elbow and trying to collect my thoughts. I observed him clutching the steering wheel all to himself at last, and the pride of ultimate possession was causing a smile on his face that extended from ear to ear.

The ANSWER by E. Charles Vivian

UNTIL the railway was projected Tramp's Landing was, in the words of those who knew it, no place at all; but somebody marked off a line on a map, with due regard to the way in which deep water came close in to the coast, and shortly after there were two or three wooden shanties at Tramp's Landing in addition to sundry tents. This period, which was one of theodolites, levels, and much bad language on the part of the surveyors, was followed by the period of many shanties instead of few and a certain flimsy structure which called itself a hotel but was really a boarding house where one might calculate with reasonable certainty that hash would be the plat du jour.

Squat steamers vomited cranes, steam navvies, trucks, rails, and a medley of other things on the flimsy looking temporary quay, went away, and came back bringing more stuff for the railway line. Tramp's Landing, with the snobbishness that comes of sudden prosperity, thought of changing its name to something more euphonious—and meanwhile the line went on until the cutting through the coastal hills five miles back was nearly completed.

By that time Margetson and Angie Margetson, his daughter, had come to stay at the Grand hotel, which was really a hash slinging boarding house; Frank Hastings, more commonly known as "Bruin," from his size and quietness, had come out as paymaster for one of the contractors; and Olaf Hendrikson, the Swede—just as big but not quite as quiet as Hastings—had landed to take charge of a steam navvy.

They were drops in a big stream, these four. Margetson, who would never make good because he drank, fraternized to a certain extent with Hastings, while Olaf tried to make love to Angie, who, in the opinion of practically every man at Tramp's Landing, ought never to have come out with her father. For the life was rough, as it is always in a construction camp or town, and women are few; certain of the men had brought their wives, but neither the wives nor their husbands were of Angie's type. She was, as Hastings summed her up, "fine gold all through." Most of the others were alloy of a moderate grade.

Margetson, in charge of a gang in the cutting, risked the loss of his job with a drinking bout that lasted two days—for that period he did not come near the hotel, and Hastings, each time that he came in for meals, pitied Angie, who sat by one of the flimsy windows looking out in case her father should return. The second night when Hastings came in for dinner Hendrikson was with her, smiling at her in a way that Hastings disliked. But, as he knew, it was none of his business. After dinner, having one or two affairs to settle outside, he went out to find the men whom the affairs concerned.

Three-quarters of a moon rode in the clear sky, and, having settled the business that brought him out, Hastings walked up beside what would some day be a railway line, toward the cutting. Semi-tropical foliage had been bruised and spoiled on either side of the new way—Hastings caught at one point a scent that was not unlike a Niel rose, and the fragrance brought back Angie Margetson to his mind.

"Bruin," he told himself, "you're a fool," and with that went on.

A bundle of some sort lay half in shadow, among the trampled and broken down greenery beside the way. Hastings moved over to inspect, and Margetson's face showed white and puffy in the moonlight. Hastings bent down to shake him, and, grasping his shoulder, found it moveless—the man was stiff.

"O, child," said Hastings to himself "who'll care for you now?"

Yet in his heart he knew that Angie had done most of the caring. He lifted the body to get some inkling of the cause of death, and down by the right ear found a tiny puncture that accounted for the puffiness of the face—there went about the bush snake, generally less than a foot in length, of which the bite was certain and quick death; but what had brought Margetson out here, within range of the snake and its bite, would have been hard to say. Hastings would have reckoned on finding him in one of the drinking shacks that were inevitable in such a place as Tramp's Landing.

He laid the body out in the moonlight and set off back rapidly. Arrived at the hotel, he found that Hendrikson was still smiling at Angie, and he beckoned to the Swede. Hendrikson left Angie without a word of apology and came over.

"I want you to leave that girl to me for a few minutes," Hastings said. "I have some bad news for her."

Judging by appearances, Hendrikson had been drinking. He thrust his face forward and stared hard at Hastings.

"Why, you herrin' gutted interloper," he said, "I'm talkin' to little Angie. You get for tonight."

Unmindful of all who might be in the room to witness, Hastings clutched the Swede by the throat, getting him off his balance sufficiently to run him out of the room. Outside the door he gave a final push that sent Hendrikson clattering to the ground, quite undamaged, and then he waited. Hendrikson got up, got his breath, and rushed. Hastings' fist caught him on the point of the chin, lifting him clear off his feet, and he went to the floor again and stayed there.

Hastings bent over him. "Don't come back yet, Hendrikson," he asked, quite placidly. "I'll come and settle with you after, if you like, but first of all I have to break it to Miss Margetson that her father is dead. You get me?"

She struck the box from his hand with all her force.

"I will get you, you blasted meddler!" said Olaf from the floor.

Certain men who had come out at the sound of a fall stayed out in the hallway of the hotel with Hendrikson. Hastings went back to the room he had left and over to Angie, who smiled up at him.

"I'm so glad you've come back," she said. "I think Mr. Hendrikson must have been drinking or something. He was very nearly offensive once or twice, and I couldn't get rid of him."

"I'm afraid you haven't much cause to be glad," Hastings answered. "I've come to bring you bad news of your father."

"He has these fits sometimes," she said nervously, "but he's a dear, all the same. It's a weakness."

"But this," Hastings said, "is really bad news."

She stared at him in silence, and he longed to take her in his arms and tell her that, so far as a man might, he would compensate for the great loss that had come to her. While she stared, and he saw fear growing in her eyes, he reached out and grasped both her hands.

"Miss Margetson," he said, "I don't quite know how to tell you——"

"He is"—she made a long pause—"dead." She did not ask, but stated it, and Hastings could only bow his head in response.

She stood up, not attempting to draw away her hands, and breathed heavily, and Hastings stood up beside her.

"There's not a man or woman in Tramp's Landing but would wish to help you to bear it," he said.

"I know" she answered. "Tell me—what you know."

He told, as briefly and gently as he could, how he had found Margetson's body with the mark of snake bite in the neck. Whether she listened or no he could not know, but at the end she sat very still for a minute, and then:

"O, daddy—my daddy!"

Hastings bent over her, took her up in his arms, and carried her out and up to her room. There he laid her on the bed and left her, shaking with sobs. Down in the corridor he met the hotel proprietor's wife, fat and placid.

"I want you to go up to Miss Margetson's room," he said. "I've just told her of her father's death, and she ought to have a woman with her."

With that he went out to see about bringing Margetson's body in for burial. Outside the hotel Hendrikson paced up and down.

"Ah!" said Hendrikson. "Time we finished it."

"Not yet," Hastings answered. "I've got to go and bring Margetson's body back from the bush—he's been killed by snake bite."

"Hell!" was Hendrikson's comment.

"I'll do my best to make it for you if I find you fooling round Miss Margetson again," Hastings assured him, and then he went to his task.

. . . . . .

"In two days' time," Angie Margetson told Hastings a month after her father's death. She sat with him in the hotel dining room, where he had told her of the tragedy. The cutting was finished and a construction camp beyond it had taken off some of the population of Tramp's Landing, quieting the place. Hastings still stayed at the hotel, though, as did Hendrikson and some others.

"I shall miss you rather badly," Hastings said. "This sort of life has a hardening influence, and a woman can counteract that."

"I'm going back—back to a man I practically promised to marry. He's a cousin"—she spoke rather nervously—"and I'm not quite sure if I shall keep the promise when I get there."

"No?" Hastings asked.

"One grows," you see," she said, "and it seems to me now that his interests are rather small."

"We shall all miss you badly here," Hastings assured her.

"It's best to go—I can't forget—daddy easily. And"—she laid her hand on his—"I shall never forget your kindness—your great kindness. I'd like to write to you——"

With an effort Hastings refrained from begging her not to go. "I was glad to serve you," he answered.

By one of the dining tables sat Hendrikson, glowering moodily at them both and whittling at a forked stick with a clasp knife. He seemed to get the fork of the stick to his liking at last, and jabbed it down on the table, trapping the handle of a spoon. The action was so suggestive of catching a snake by the neck that Hastings could not stand it, with Angie there. He went over to the Swede.

"Hendrikson," he said, "don't do that in here, or I shall have to thrash you again."

Hendrikson glowered up at him. "You wait," he said, and put the forked stick down on the floor beside his chair.

Hastings came back to Angie, who had heard the brief conversation. "I should advise you to watch Mr. Hendrikson," she said. "He looks murderous when he looks at you."

"Fortunately looks don't hurt," said Hastings.

Since Hendrikson's steam navvy was away beyond the cutting now, he usually went out from the hotel in the morning and stayed away till night, but on the day following that evening he came in at lunch time and smiled across the room at Angie.

"Mornin', Miss Angie," he said. "Hastings about anywhere?"

"I don't know," she answered coldly.

Olaf went out, toward the bedrooms of the hotel. As he left the dining room he took from his pocket a little oblong parcel—it looked like a box carefully wrapped and tied, and Angie just caught sight of it in his hand. She heard the Swede trampling along the bare boards of the corridor—his room was at the far end. But absently she seemed to realize that his steps did not go on to the end of the corridor. She pulled a chair back from one of the tables and sat down for lunch.

Hendrikson, returning very quickly, said no more to her, nor did he attempt to go near her table. After lunch he went out, presumably back to his work, and Angie went to her room to get a hat in order to go out to her father's grave—it was her last day before leaving Tramp's Landing. She passed what she knew was Hastings' room and saw that the door was just ajar—that door had been closed when she came down to lunch, but still she thought nothing of it. Somebody might have been in the room cleaning up.

At nightfall she watched when the residents came in. Hastings was late, far beyond his usual time, and there was no sign at all of Olaf Hendrikson. This latter was strange, for Hendrikson was usually well on time for the evening meal. Angie beckoned to Hastings as he passed the dining room door.

"I waited till you came," she said when he came over to her. "I want you to have dinner with me for the last evening. Will you?"

Hastings looked at her hungrily. "I'm—it's very good of you," he stammered. "I'll be very glad if you'll wait just a minute while I go and scrub myself."

He went out and along the corridor toward his room, while Angie sat down to wait. She faced the table at which the Swede had whittled at his stick the preceding evening and remembered how he had glared at Hastings. She remembered the little oblong parcel he had taken from his pocket at noon.

And the door of Hastings' room had been partly opened!

These three things came together in her mind with a faint shock. As she got their import she sprang up and crossed the room so hastily that she hurt her wrist in knocking a chair over. She ran along the corridor and burst into Hastings' room without knocking. He stood with a little oblong parcel in his hand, from which he had cut the string and torn away the paper, and, still holding the box that had been within the wrapping, he stared at her blankly.

"Eh?" he asked.

She struck the box from his hand with all her force, and its impact on the floor burst the lid open. Something small and black came out and writhed its way swiftly under the bed.

"O, thank God! Thank God!" Angie uttered, half hysterically.

Hastings stood staring—and then he, too, remembered the forked stick that Hendrikson had prepared so carefully. He moved a step forward and grasped Angie's hands.

"Why?" he asked, and again, "Why?"

"It was to have been his revenge, don't you see?" she said. "The way my father died gave him the idea—that stick he had last night was to catch a snake with, and he packed it so for you to open. O, it's too horrible to think of!"

"Yes," said Hastings very quietly. "I know all that now, just as I know my life belongs to you. But why—you——?"

"I—I——" she said, and nothing more.

"Angie," Hastings said—he had never called her by that name before—"my life belongs to you now—you saved it. I want to give it all to you. I don't want you to go away tomorrow. I want to live to serve you and go on loving you."

She looked up at him, smiling, making no answer.

"Angie," he asked again. "You must have seen—you must know—haven't you any word for me?"

Still she looked up at him, smiling, and said no word.

"Angie," he pleaded again, bending toward her till his face was very near hers, "won't you stay for me to care for you?"

But still she smiled and said no word.

"Answer me, Angie—won't you stay?"

She spoke with a little catch in her voice that thrilled him:

"Bruin," she half whispered it, "won't you take your answer? It's waiting for you."

Blue Ribbon Fiction

MICE AND MEN

THE STORY THUS FAR—Merrial Houlton's normally sunny outlook on life is clouded by two regrets. First, the estrangement between her dead mother's English family and her father, with whom Merrial's relatives have had nothing to do since her mother was married and went to live on a western ranch. And, second, the hurt she has inflicted on Tripp Hart, an old time playmate from the west, whom she has sorrowfully rejected as a suitor. When her father tells her he has failed in business Merrial announces that she is going to England to visit her mother's people while he is getting on his feet again, and to carry out certain plans about which she will tell no one. The family in England—Alice and Winifred Beaufort, their mother, and Hubert, an invalid brother—receive her with mixed emotions, but she proceeds blithely to make friends in her own way. Things, she finds, are rather at sixes and sevens. Her own brother, Dick, who has been in England at school, turns out to be a hopeless expatriate, ashamed of his American origin, which he has kept a secret. Alice Beaufort has met him, without knowing that he is her first cousin, and has fallen in love with him. Winifred is unhappy over an affair with Kenneth Stanton, a young man who appears to be neglecting her. The pitiful plight of Hubert, the invalid, arouses Merrial to prompt action, and she enlists her father's aid in sending over an American specialist to examine the boy. Then she astonishes the Beauforts by moving, bag and baggage, over to the home of Aunt Jane Coke, another of the English relatives, poor, but proud as Lucifer, and, to Miss Coke's consternation, calmly makes her kitchen the center of a flourishing neighborhood trade in quince preserve, cabling Tripp Hart meanwhile to find a purchaser for the recipe. While this venture is under way Dick Houlton announbes that he is coming to visit the Rivingtons, near by. Dismayed at the prospect of the Beauforts' discovering his silly masquerade as an Englishman, Merrial tries to scare him away by sending him a copy of her quince preserve advertisement in a local paper. Kenneth Stanton's neglect of Winifred has been explained by a letter from Gertrude Hart, Tripp's sister and a notorious flirt, telling of her engagement to Kenneth, whom she has met in Paris. So, when Stanton comes to take Merrial for a ride, she understands that he is seeking consolation and advice.

NINTH INSTALLMENT.

Dick Holton, "Englishman."

STANTON flushed scarlet and helped her to mount in silence. The harassed lines in the fine square face were more noticeable than Merrial remembered.

"Where do you wish to go?" he asked her when he, too, was in the saddle.

"Towards Rivington House," was Merrial's prompt answer, and Stanton turned away from the village out to the green hedged country lanes.

"No one could get lost in England, could he?" said Merrial, almost wistfully. "It's a very interrupted country."

"Interrupted?"

She waved her crop over its tidy reaches.

"Cut up and trimmed and cultivated America, in comparison, is a mess."

"But what a mess!" she sighed presently, and all at once her "eyes were wild," and seemed to open on unlimited spaces where winds walked to and fro like gods.

"I'd like the open, myself," and Stanton's eyes, too, began to hunger wretchedly for liberty.

"You are still in the hole?" questioned Merrial.

He turned sideways in his saddle and faced her with almost a reckless air.

"You offered me your help once," he said gruffly. "I ought to have seen the value of such an offer from a girl like you, but it's hard to talk sometimes."

Merrial remained discreetly quiet, but her eyes ralned influence.

"You probably," Kenneth gulped, "know the whole thing already. You know, at any rate, Gertrude Hart; I expect she told you about—us?"

"Yes, I know," murmured Merrial.

"And of course you must understand what she might do to a fellow like me."

"I understand. You proposed to her?"

"I—I—well, the long and short of it is, I am engaged to her."

He blurted it out with scarlet cheeks and shamed eyes.

"Yes," said Merrial. "Well?"

"Don't make me say it," groaned the man, "it's such a horrible situation. And I feel like a cad. On my word I do."

"Poor Win!"

Kenneth turned his eyes away. Hope began to die from his heart.

"Have you told Winifred?"

"How could I?" He groaned it out, still with averted eyes.

"Have you, perhaps, told Gertrude?"

This jerked him round.

"Told her what, Miss Houlton?"

"That your heart is not exactly in the business."

Stanton had stiffened.

"What do you think I am?" he demanded sternly. "A man does not get engaged to marry a girl and then turn round and strike her in the face."

"No," drawled Merrial, "an honorable man marries her instead, and strikes at her heart, day by day and hour by hour, for years."

There was a long silence, through which the horses trotted carelessly, enjoying, no doubt, their slack reins and untickled flanks.

At last Kenneth shook his head.

"I can't do it," said he hoarsely.

"You asked her to marry you?" murmured Merrial, persistently.

"Probably—since we are engaged."

"We-ell, it does not necessarily follow. Those things happen sometimes almost wordlessly. Walking on the edge of Proposal pool is slippery treading, Mr. Stanton."

"You know an awful lot about it," said he, half in resentment, half in admiration. "You might be a fellow's aunt, you know."

"I've been many a fellow's aunt," said she. "It's the best thing I do."

"But you've given me no advice, Aunt Merrial. None that I can follow, that is."

"Yes, I have. I've given you advice that you must follow. Do you mean to tell me, Mr. Stanton"—she drew herself up and swept her eyes over him—"that you are going to play traitor to the girl you don't love, and also to the girl you love? Do you mean to say you can look into Winifred's eyes, see what you have started to life there, and then go and marry Gertrude? Why, it's impossible."

"It's got to be," muttered Stanton, and his face was no longer flushed. Even his lips were white.

Then he turned eyes of prayer upon her.

"Unless——" he stopped.

"Unless what?"

"Unless—you can help me."

"How can I help you, please?"

"You look as if you could. You looked as if you could that first day at Pearly Pool when——"

"When I was so—odd?"

"When you were so odd, exactly."

"If you can't help me, Miss Houlton," he added a few minutes later, "you are rather cruel."

"May I be very odd?" she asked him.

"As odd as you like, if it helps."

"What—how does Gertrude treat this engagement?"

"Treat it?" he stammered.

"Has she announced it, I mean?"

"Not yet. She hasn't spoken of announcing it."

"Ah!"

There was a pause.

"And—this is going to be very odd, I am afraid—what sort of letter does she write to you? Sign herself—how?"

This really did require a certain amount of swallowing.

"I'd rather not quote her letters," said he.

Merrial flushed, and Kenneth felt like a brute.

"O, I beg your pardon, Miss Houlton," he stammered. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. She—signs herself 'Yours almost always—Gertrude.'"

"Yours almost always," Merrial repeated, smiling. "And how long do you feel yourself in honor bound to abide by this engagement, under all the circumstances, Mr. Stanton?"

"Until Miss Hart releases me, of course," he rejoined warmly.

"But does it seem to you that Gertrude is taking it quite seriously? In America some people are apt to look upon an unannounced engagement as, frankly, an interim experimental process—giving people a chance to get to know each other, before positively deciding to marry. At least that's a point of view frequently taken of it."

"I didn't understand that Miss Hart looked upon it as experimental; but in any case, she is the only one who can put an end to the engagement," he replied stiffly.

"This doesn't seem to get us much further, does it? I want to help you, for Win's sake. I'm going to be odder than ever, and I'm not going to ask your leave. I shall have to go about it in my own way. But whether I can be of any help or not, in the end, I don't know. Time will tell; and you can put all the blame for failure on me—if nothing comes of it."

"You know I shouldn't blame you; you've been awfully good to me, Miss Houlton. Gertrude hints at coming over before long. Did you know that?"

"No. But I think I can find out. I wonder——" and Merrial's eyes half closed in shrewd speculation. The silence was punctuated by the rhythmical beat of their horses' hoofs.

"That's Rivington House," said Stanton presently, pointing with his crop towards a beautiful old park surrounded mansion, approached by an avenue of great oaks. "Haven't your cousins, the Beauforts, taken you to call there?"

"No; the Rivingtons were away from home while I was at the Grange."

"Shall we ride across the park? I know them quite well, and they're all there now."

"Not this morning, thank you," she said. "It's a wonderful entrance, and there are such nice trees. English trees are such solid fellows, aren't they?"

"Hearts of Oak," he smiled.

And then, in rather a hurry, Merrial suggested returning home. She had caught sight of a rider slowly coming down the long drive—and the figure took on the familiar lines of Dick Houlton, in fine equestrian array, on his way to lunch at the Beauforts, doubtless. He must have received her letter, though!

There was not another word about Gertrude.

Only at Miss Coke's door, Merrial gave Stanton a tremulous smile.

"It was kind of you, Mr. Stanton, to take your odd little friend for such a nice ride. Her oddity will do its very oddest best."

* * * * * * *

As for Dick Houlton, if Merrial had designed to plant a bomb under his supercilious nose, and explode it right there, she had unquestionably succeeded to that extent. Soon after breakfast, a footman had brought in Merrial's note, left discreetly at the great front door of Rivington House by Dr. Unwin, as Dick stood in the hall dangling his eyeglass and gazing idly out across the park through one of the long mullioned windows.

Carelessly he opened the envelope, without glancing at the writing. He came first upon the page of the local newspaper. He was turning it carelessly aside when, halfway down an advertising column, his eye was caught by an announcement solidly marked with blue pencil.

"Miss Merrial Houlton announces that she is open to receive orders for the famous quince preserve during the next two weeks only. Thereafter notice will be duly given in these columns as to future arrangements for its supply."

Dick read this twice, put on his eyeglass, and read it again.

Merrial Houlton is not exactly a usual name. He stared and flushed, turning from red to white, so that Henry Rivington, sauntering through the hall, came over to him.

"What have you got there, Houlton?" said he.

"Nothing-er-nothing," stammered the unlucky Houlton, crumpled the paper into the pocket of his shooting jacket, and strolled away.

"Queer chap!" commented his lordship. "Where did he copy his get-up, I wonder. Ouida, maybe. I can quite fancy his saying 'We don't do it in the guards.' Amazingly noveletty youngster!"

But Dick Houlton, unaware of criticism of a nature that would have cut him to the quick, and from a quarter that would have made the cut peculiarly mortifying, hurried to his room to peruse the letter inclosed with the newspaper. He must find out the meaning of this harrowing advertisement. If Merrial had really been up to one of her absurd tricks, he would not have his own name involved in it. No. Quince preserve should first be suppressed, and Merrial cleared from the odium of sale and self-advertisement, before he risked her introduction amongst his English friends.

But the letter itself, with all its significance glaring out at him from between the lines, added fuel to the flame of his wrath. Merrial was in this very neighborhood. Selling jam at Lady Rivington's very door, as it were!

Of course, he thought bitterly, this meant in any case that he would never be taken for an Englishman again. He wondered blindly if he might still, with seemliness, retain the light moustache and the eyeglass. After all, he was half English by birth; wholly English in his ideas and sympathies. Alice—the thought of her at that moment made him wince! Alice, who had told him that an American, to her, was always "farcical," how would she endure it when he stood before her a Yankee confessed?

He tried to remember if he had ever actually pronounced himself an Englishman. That, of course, would make him a thorough ass. But no, he had merely let himself be carried on the easy current of their belief. Of course, he had unmercifully heaped ridicule on his tourist compatriots, but no sensible Englishwoman would think the less of him for that. Certainly not Lady Rivington's niece, who pronounced the American girls singing "Under the Bamboo Tree" in St. Peter's dome, "too horrible."

And he was to lunch at the Beauforts this very day! Well, what of it? He would ride on after lunch—Merrial was only a few miles off, she said—and put things to rights. The first necessity was to stop Merrial making a fool of herself and him and the name of Houlton. The next—well, he must see about that later. He could let it come out gradually that he was partly American; had spent a few years there. Alice would understand; of course she would!

Bother Merrial; she had no sense! He more than half believed she was doing it all to plague him, anyhow! But he'd soon show her that he'd stand no nonsense.

Thus his agitated mind worked as he rode toward the home of "Lady Rivington's niece"—and he had got but little further with his plans when he found himself, after lunch, receiving a cup of coffee from Alice Beaufort herself, on the veranda. While he drank the stimulating beverage, Alice absorbed his rather languid talk.

Dick Houlton looked a type of scholarly, blasé, young Englishman. He was slender, with long hands, rather delicate features, a pale skin, and stooping shoulders. He wore his light brown hair brushed back, which made him look older as well as wiser, probably, than he really was. He had an air at once distinguished and affected, a rather hesitating, gentle voice, and he seemed modest, with an assured sort of modesty.

All this attracted Alice, and yet it was not this that kept her sometimes awake at night busy with the memory of his companionship. Sometimes, when Dick Houlton looked up, especially in rare moments of enthusiasm, his eye cleared shrewdly, and behind its boyish long lashed beauty, something flashed that was new and powerful and very much alive. This look always astonished Alice. It seemed to contradict everything else that Mr. Houlton stood for. It suggested capacities for action rather than for thought. It suggested crude energy rather than cultivated languor. It suggested an untamed, gifted, clever creature, whose powers were not yet truly guessed at, even by himself.

The look was certainly not present now as he sipped his coffee. He seemed rather more than usually languid, and his absurd, unscholarly, curled eyelashes were bent to the examination of his cup. Alice thought they must interfere with the comfort of an eyeglass.

"I've found you out, Mr. Houlton," she said abruptly.

Now there was really no reason why such a statement addressed to an innocent young man should upset a coffee cup. And yet Mr. Houlton's cup made a leap into the air and crashed down on the floor, scattering hot coffee and china fragments. Also, Mr. Houlton lost his eyeglass and developed a furious flush.

Alice laughed triumphantly.

"Never mind the old cup," said she boyishly. "I was just going to remark that I had detected by analysis of your subconscious mind—I've been reading Samuel Butler lately—that you're really a man of action rather than a student. And look how clearly you've proved it"—and she pointed laughingly at the broken cup.

"O!" said Mr. Houlton with a forced smile, and resumed his seat and his usual pallor. "Awfully sorry! Shouldn't mind if I really were one, you know," he drawled in his most Dundreary accent. "It's true I was once rather interested in railroads, don't you know. I started out to be an—er—a mechanical engineer."

"You did! How strange!"

"O no, I assure you. Far from it. Actually I drove an engine myself. My father, you know, believed in a fellah's working his way up, knowing it all by hand—er—from the—er—start, don't you know. So he put me on one of his roads."

"His roads! Does your father own railroads, Mr. Houlton?"

(Now, Dick Houlton, here's your chance; be a man, and take it!)

"O, well, no. Hardly. It was a tuppeny line; shouldn't have mentioned it, only I wanted to explain how I came to take to engineering. But I don't want you to go on thinking me one of those deadly practical people, you know, Miss Beaufort. That would never do—really!"

And then Mrs. Beaufort and Winifred appeared upon the scene, and Dick Houlton's chance was gone!

"We shall see you tomorrow afternoon for tennis, then, Mr. Houlton," his hostess said, as he rose to go.

By Katherine Newlin Burt

"Delighted," he drawled.

Alice, watching his leisurely walk, as he started towards the stables, noticed the sudden quickening of his pace, and the squaring of his shoulders and outward thrust of his chin after he had gone but a few yards. The "man of action" in Dick Houlton was asserting itself to cope with a certain "plain American, out after the dollars."

He rode off, his pride on the rack. With his abnormal sensitiveness to ridicule, he was stung with a thousand whips. Merrial had made a laughing-stock of him! In London she had frankly ridiculed his English getup. Probably she had told every one here that she was his sister, and they were laughing at him up their sleeves. Probably she had imitated his accent to the Beauforts, and had strutted with an imaginary eyeglass. O, he could see her doing it. And, last and worst, she had embarked upon this quince preserve scheme, just to show how free and democratic an American girl can be.

Then, with an extra twinge, he remembered that he had eaten a queer sort of jam at the Beauforts' at lunch. Alice had offered it to him with an air of amusement and had asked him pointedly whether he did not think it "nasty stuff." And he, poor fool, had raved over it. O, it was not to be endured. He would punish Merrial. He would send her home. She should not stay in England another hour. If it must be, he would go with her.

. . . . . .

Meanwhile, during the intervals of Aunt Jane's cursory conversation at lunch, Merrial pondered at the interpretation of Dick's persistence in risking a visit to the Beauforts. He must certainly have got her note—and yet how could he feel sure that he would not meet Merrial, by chance, at the Grange, and be compelled to disclose the absurdity of his conduct? He could scarcely relish the prospect of such an exposé. Or, perhaps, he had decided to try to right himself by assuming innocence of having ever given the impression that he was an Englishman.

"O, Dick, you're enough to break the patience of Job," Merrial fumed as she sat in the little sitting room watching the front gate, Aunt Jane having retired for a siesta, after telling Merrial that she would later be going out to preside over a meeting of the Sewing guild.

But Miss Coke had left the house, and Merrial had almost concluded that Dick was going to ignore her as well as the danger of his situation, when the clinking of the latch on the little front gate roused Merrial from a reverie, to observe the austere and grim countenance of the "English Mr. Houlton" advancing with assumed coolness and nonchalance.

She ran to open the door.

"Hello, Dick," she called to him. "How nice of you to come over to see me so soon!" Her eyes took him in with wistful affection.

But his face was set, the arm she had locked her hand about was rigid, and the eye, back of its eyeglass, glared. She guessed that the worst must have happened; his silly little comedy had ended in a real tragedy. She was horrified and tears stood in her eyes.

Dick removed her hands from his arm, and for a moment stood silently beside her. He was too excited to speak. Then he drew out the crumpled newspaper, smoothed it, folded the advertisement into prominence, and held it, with shaking fingers, before Merrial's eyes.

"Explain that to me," said he sternly.

But Merrial's eyes, when they looked up, were laughing with relief.

"You brute! To give me such a glare for nothing! Why, it's only quince preserve."

"Then your letter was not just a joke! You are really advertising yourself through the country," he said, made even angrier by her tone and laugh.

"Worse than that," she admitted airily, "I began by peddling jam from door to door," and, picking up her basket which they had reached, she swung it to and fro, chanting, "Quince preserve! Who'll buy?"

Dick was pale.

"You have gone begging," said he. "You have lost every atom of pride, and good taste, and breeding that you ever had. You behaved like a noisy, vulgar little mountebank!"

"Dick! Don't say such things to me!" she cried, taking his arm, "you'll make me angry in a minute."

"I'll make you ashamed, I hope, you miserable girl!"

"Dick, it's all your own fault. To begin with, why didn't you tell me who 'Lady Rivington's nieces' were, instead of making all that mystery about them?"

"Why didn't you tell me you knew them?"

"But I didn't know the least who Lady Rivington was, when you spoke of her in London. How could I know that she was Aunt Margaret's sister-in-law? You never even told me where they lived."

"I don't know who Aunt Margaret is, as you call her. You were so busy making yourself ridiculous, trying to ridicule me, that you never even told me you were coming to stay with Aunt Jane Coke!"

"You didn't so much as ask where I was going to stay. There was no mystery about it. I went straight to the Grange to stay with the Beauforts."

"With the Beauforts!" he echoed.

"Yes—with the Beauforts! And the very first day I was there Alice told me she had met a Mr. Houlton who had been staying at the Rivingtons—that he didn't know of any American relatives, couldn't bear Americans,

There was really no reason why such a statement should upset a coffee cup.

and was 'English right enough.' I soon found out it was you, masquerading as an Englishman. What could I do? I kept quiet; I wasn't going to give you away."

"O, most considerate of you," he drawled sarcastically. "And, if it's not impertinent, may I ask how you came to be visiting the Beauforts?"

"Yes, I'll tell you—but if you hadn't been play-acting and masquerading you wouldn't have to ask. If you'd told them when you first met them that you were American, they'd have informed you that they were your own cousins. Don't you see, you foolish boy, that Aunt Margaret Beaufort is Aunt Jane Coke's sister! Alice, and Win, and Hubert are our cousins!"

Houlton's veneer of English nonchalance dropped from him completely.

"Good heavens!" he ejaculated, and turned his face away, flushing scarlet.

Merrial pitied him, from the bottom of her heart. But soon he turned upon her again.

"What an ass you've made of me, Merrial!" said he bitterly.

"You made an ass of yourself first," returned Merrial coolly. "If you hadn't worn an eyeglass this never would have happened. An eyeglass is never safe for an American. It distorts his naturally shrewd eyesight and gives him a silly view of life altogether. I warned you that I couldn't swallow the eyeglass. I might have stood the tweeds alone, or the moustache alone, or possibly the tweeds and the moustache together. But the tweeds, and the moustache, and the eyeglass—for the American humor of me—not!"

This was not a conciliatory speech, nor did Merrial pronounce it with a conciliatory air. His rage flamed again.

"Very well, Merrial," said he, "you choose to make fun of the situation you've created with this jam making business. I don't ask you to assist me out of my—er—embarrassment, though it's largely your fault. You choose to be indifferent to your own brother's opinion. You prefer I should think you both vulgar and deceitful!"

"But you don't think anything of the sort, Dick!" cried Merrial, beginning to blink again.

"I think that you are the laughing stock of the place. I think that the Beauforts have been forced to blush for you. I think that if any one but me dared to express an honest opinion of your conduct he would describe it rather more forcibly than I have. He would say you——"

"Hush, Dick! You'll be sorry!" said Merrial, breathlessly. Her pupils were wide and black as coals.

Dick went on, blindly grasping Merrial's arms with both hands as he fairly hissed his displeasure at her.

"I defy you to say that you have not received a hint or two. Has Miss Coke made no protest? Have you never been told that you were, for example, odd?"

Merrial started and whirled round at him.

"They mean impertinent when they say odd," she cried.

"So you have, at least, been called 'impertinent.'"

"But I don't mind that at all. I have always been impertinent. It's the only way to get on. It's the only way to help."

"Merrial, I can't believe it's you! I'm sick with mortification for you."

Dick really looked sick as he spoke, and Merrial was trembling. They had moved towards the front door, which stood open.

"Er-er, may I speak to you one moment?" broke in a pleasant, deprecatory voice.

Dick wheeled about with a muttered exclamation, and Merrial bravely smiled.

"It's Dr. Unwin. May I——"

But Dick's sullen face really frightened her, and she turned helplessly to her friend.

"You are busy, I see," stammered the doctor nervously, "but I was passing by, and I thought I'd just give you the money now, for my six dozen jars, you know. I've been an unconscionable long time in paying up."

And, smiling affectionately at Merrial, he extended to her the money.

Dick looked as if he were about to snatch it from Dr. Unwin's fingers, but, instead, he only turned a shade whiter.

He had caught sight of a tall, smartly dressed man walking towards them along the street, one with the unmistakable carriage of Lord Rivington, and, in a sort of numb, fascinated silence, watched him drawing near.

"Lord Rivington!" gasped Merrial, taking his hand (with the money still in her own) as though it had been stretched to a drowning girl. And, as Dr. Unwin swiftly effaced himself, she turned with a quick dignity to Dick.

"This is——" she began, and simultaneously Lord Rivington spoke himself.

"Why, of course," said he, in his easy, well bred fashion, "the same name! I might have known that you were relations. Why didn't you tell me, Houlton, eh?"

But Dick's delicate face was hard as stone. Now was his opportunity to punish the contemptuous little mountebank who had laughed at his brotherly reproofs.

"I had no idea that Miss Houlton was in the neighborhood," he drawled; "she is merely—a connection. She is, you know, just over from the other side," and, lifting his hat to Merrial, with a cool and formal courtesy that expressed a bridgeless chasm between the Houlton of Oxford and the Houlton from the "other side," he sauntered to his horse, mounted, and rode slowly off.

But Merrial turned back into the house to entertain Lord Rivington. She sparkled and smiled for him. She was more a witch than ever. He had no opportunity, even if his tact had allowed him one, for questions, hardly even for surmises. Certainly the pity he had begun to feel for her white, stricken look under Dick's speech vanished like mist. Even his indignation against Dick cooled. The offense of such a manner to such a laughing fairy seemed a trivial thing to be brushed lightly aside. Lord Rivington's second call was even longer than his first, and he left Merrial with a promise of a ride with her.

Merrial watched his departure from the porch, and not till his footsteps were faint and far away did her slim, tight held figure lose its jauntiness. Then she groped her way upstairs like a wounded thing and lay shaking and sobbing on her bed.

But at last anger dried up her tears and she got up and bathed her face. It suddenly seemed to her that such childishness as Dick's was not worth crying for.

But something grew hotter and hotter in her breast, and her eyes smarted with anger against Dick.

She sat on the little front doorstep in the evening, hoping for comfort from the cool, indifferent stars; but what she wanted was a comforting touch. The gate clicked. The long expected orange colored envelope was thrust towards her by the little telegraph messenger. She opened it and read:

> This company has sold out. Report on your quince recipe handed to new management. Am instructed to say they will take it under consideration in due course.
> HEARTOFRUIT PRESERVES CO.

Merrial read it over twice. Were they passing the buck? They wouldn't buy? Then, pulling herself together with an effort, she looked out into the night, smiling bravely.

"Dad, old boy, your castles have toppled about your ears more than once, and you've kept on smiling. I think I can be as good an American, thanks to you. Tomorrow I'll begin to build mine up again. I'm not beaten yet!"

WHAT IS MILTON

Does 101 Things and really does them

The Whole of England Knows and Uses It

MILTON is just "MILTON." No other word describes it. MILTON is a clear, water-white fluid, put up in a brown bottle with a rubber cork. It has a slight antiseptic odor, which vanishes quickly when MILTON is used.

MILTON is an English war-time discovery. When its makers advertised that it "Does 101 Things," the English public smiled—tried it—and woke up. They found that the claims made for it were true—that MILTON does do scores of things; that it really helps cuts and abrasions heal promptly; that it is remarkably efficient as a mouthwash and gargle for the prevention and relief of colds in the head, sore throat, sore and bleeding gums, and many other infected conditions of the teeth, gums, mouth, throat and nose; that it is soothing for tired feet, insect bites and stings, and various congested conditions of the skin; that it destroys bad smells—its own odor vanishing almost immediately; removes stains from white linen and cotton (even the flimsiest) without the slightest injury to the fabric; that it is efficacious in cleaning tiles, paint, woodwork, and equally valuable for dozens of other purposes.

MILTON is one of the most powerful agents known to science for the destruction of disease germs—yet is harmless to human and animal life. It is non-poisonous; it cannot take fire or explode—it will not burn or corrode the skin. The bottle can be left about without danger to children or family pets.

MILTON achieved an enormous success in England as soon as the people realized that it is a preparation marvelously effective for a hundred and one different purposes, and at the same time perfectly safe to use for each and any one of them.

Today there is hardly a home throughout all England without its MILTON.

Perfectly Safe

for all of its many uses

Remember, MILTON is not poisonous, not corrosive, not inflammable. Yet it is an invaluable protection against infection and a wonderful household help. MILTON will perform all of its many functions quickly, efficiently and economically. The limit of its usefulness has not yet been reached; new uses for it crop up every day. MILTON IS JUST "MILTON."

ALEX D SHAW & CO

For Personal Hygiene

MILTON is a refreshing and wonderfully effective mouthwash and excellent means of protection against coughs and colds; it affords comfort and prompt relief in hay fever when used as a nasal spray; it is particularly effective with cuts, scratches and abrasions of the skin, being destructive of germs—cleans them antiseptically and promotes rapid healing; it takes the soreness out of sunburn, the sting out of insect bites and removes stains from the skin.

For the Sickroom

MILTON affords a simple, safe and effective means of disinfecting sickroom articles, eliminating offensive odors and freshening the air. It has been found particularly valuable in the treatment of local infected conditions of the mouth, nose, throat and skin. MILTON is replacing Dakin's Fluid for sickroom use because, while Dakin's Fluid must be freshly made to be effective, MILTON holds its strength indefinitely.

For Household Uses

MILTON is useful from garret to cellar. It makes milk bottles, other food receptacles and cooking utensils safe as well as clean; it sweetens stuffy storerooms, toilets, sinks and drains, and quickly removes bad smells without leaving another odor in their place. One of its most important summer uses is that of an effective germicide with which to destroy the disease germs deposited by flies.

For Removing Stains and Bleaching

MILTON removes stains magically from white linen and cotton (not silk, wool or dyed goods) without harm to the most delicate material. It bleaches undyed fabrics a lustrous white, with a delicate finish far superior to that obtained from blueing.

MILTON makes bathtubs and other porcelain or enamel fixtures clean and white, removing all stains without injury to their protecting glaze.

2 Sizes—50c and $1.00

Each makes Gallons. Get the Booklet with each bottle. One bottle of MILTON will replace dozens of different preparations.

New Uses for War Invention

The new antiseptic which healed wounds so rapidly, now used for infected gums, skin eruptions, dandruff, itching, etc.

America contributed much to Allied victory when her scientists invented the new chlorine antiseptic. It succeeded where all other antiseptics had failed—controlled blood poison and lockjaw, due to infected wounds, saving thousands of lives. Wounds often healed in one-fourth the usual time.

This same wonderful healing agent may now be had in the form of Kloria Tablets, used by dissolving in ordinary water, and very inexpensive.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, harmless and not poisonous. Yet it destroys all germs on contact and heals more rapidly than was ever known before.

In tender, bleeding, shrinking gums, Kloria attacks the germ cause, with amazing results. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear in one week. It also makes the most effective mouth-wash for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections, tonsilitis and contagious diseases.

Kloria takes the place of all old-time healing salves and antiseptics. Cuts, sores, boils and burns often heal in one-fourth the usual time. Skin eruption and itching, eczema, dandruff, ivy poison, etc., promptly fade away. Kloria also destroys all offensive body odors instantly.

Sold by druggists or mailed prepaid for 50 cents. Money refunded if not entirely satisfied.

Package gives directions for making proper strength solutions for all uses. The liquid keeps perfectly in a bottle, ready for use.

WE have fashioned Zeppelin and bayonets and cannon,
Launched our dreadnoughts on the sea, a terror to the deep;
Yet be God our witness, we have also builded houses—
Little peaceful houses where the little children sleep.
Some are set in gardens, lawns and trees about them,
Some are crowded wall to wall, along the city street;
But in town and country God has blessed the little houses
With the laughing eyes of women and with children's romping feet.

—Victor Starbuck

Linked close to these good things

THE very nicest part of going away, I feel, is the coming home again.

What fun we had on our trip. And how the children enjoyed it! Yet, I believe even the baby knew and was glad she was in her own nest again when I put her to bed just now.

From the moment I stepped inside the door I began seeing—seeing with new eyes! All the things that are mine! Being in other houses—seeing other people—makes you appreciate home possessions so much more. For, no matter how simple they are, they have been chosen with loving care by you and the one you love best. At least, that is how I feel.

And linked close to these good things are those little helps which add so much to a woman's life. Inexpressably valuable joys like books and flowers, plenty of play and plenty to do—and Pears' for sweet cleanness all the time. And when I think of Pears' fragrant cakes, it's not as if it were just a soap at all. Somehow, it seems to belong with the other good things that make life livable!

If it were like the other casual, superficial things which have to be used with a bit of caution, it couldn't take its place with the better, higher things of life. For Pears' goes beyond and above other soaps. I have read somewhere how it is toned by heat which makes it agree with the tender skins of our children, as well as cleansing the skins, and keeping us grown-ups soft and beautiful.

And so the world goes on—and only the worth while things endure. Fads have their tremendous vogue, and pass. Only the refined, good things of life can stand the test of time—like the little houses, the children—and Pears'.

A Great WOMAN EDITOR—

who receives thousands of letters from women asking how to improve their Complexions and their Hands, gives this simple prescription as the "great secret"—

"Find the soap that agrees with your skin"

*Why "HEAT-TONING" makes soap agree with most skins*

Up to a certain point Pears' is much the same as any other pure, carefully made soap—the same up to the point where others are ready to tint, scent and wrap for sale.

At this stage the makers of Pears' consider all soaps as still "green" or raw. To make it absolutely in agreement with the texture of the most delicate skins, Pears' is then Heat-Toned by the process worked out by Mr. Pears, 131 years ago.

Pears' Heat-Toning Process

In the Heat-Toning retorts, Pears' mellows from its first creamy color to a dusky topaz and then to wine color. There is not a bit of artificial coloring in Pears'; its coloring is as natural as the beautiful bloom is to the rose.

Just so, Heat-Toning is a natural, scientific process which refines soap, taking away the harshness and leaving it a beneficial cleansing agent which soothes the skin while it cleans the pores. It is this toning process which makes Pears' different from all other soaps which brings this one soap into harmony with the inner life of the skin

What Pears' Does For You

"Raw" soaps are not good for the skin. The reason is that they are entirely too strong, go too deeply into the millions of tiny pores, and take away much of the natural oils which help to keep the skin young looking and fresh.

Pears', through its Heat-Toning process, is mellowed to agree with the skin. This toning, together with fine ingredients, produces the soap which looks after your skin health and, at the same time, gives you a grateful smoothness and a delicate, elusive fragrance.

Beauty comes from within, out. No face, no matter how beautiful the features may be, is really lovely if it is dry, cloudy, dull looking—lacking the glow of clear health which radiates through the skin. Use Pears' and let your skin live!

SIGNS of SUMMER in LINCOLN PARK

CINNAMON (OR BROWN) BEAR comfortably situated and on the lookout for peanut donations. All species of the bear family, including the large grizzly, are "dainty" eaters. In their wild state they will overturn surprisingly large rocks in quest of a luscious but luckless bug. A wild berry patch is a veritable happy hunting ground for them.
(TRIBUNE photo.)

THE PEACOCK in all his glory—the proverbial personification of pride from King Solomon's time to the present. His brilliant plumage is a favorite subject for artists. In ancient times the peacock was not only considered a table delicacy but was highly honored by the classic authors.
(TRIBUNE photo.)

THE NOBLE BISON (miscalled buffalo in America), which roamed over our western prairies in countless thousands not so many years ago, would undoubtedly have been extinct ere this at the hand of the big game hunters were it not for the national forest preserves and the various public and private zoos. There are eighteen bison in the Lincoln park herd. The little calf made his appearance a few weeks ago.

G. Lorsi Clarke
After studying the Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing he sold his first story for $3,000.
Mr. Clarke was formerly a minister.

Dorothea Nourse
Attributes her success as a motion picture writer to the Palmer Plan. She quickly sold "Daffodils and Diamonds" after enrolling.

Paul Schofield
A year ago he was a rank outsider. He studied the Palmer Plan. Today he is under a 2-year contract as staff writer with Thos. H. Ince Studios.

Mrs. Caroline Sayre wrote the photoplay "Live Sparks" for J. Warren Kerrigan, one of scores of new writers we are developing by correspondence instruction.

5,000 New Story-Ideas
Wanted for Motion Pictures

(The above figure does not include material needed for religious, commercial and educational films.)

The motion picture industry is confronted with a grave dearth of story-plots. Producers will pay you well for any workable story-ideas. 95% of book material is unsuited to their needs. And as yet not enough people are writing for the screen to supply the demand. Somewhere in America, this year, scores of new photoplay writers will be developed. Many of them have never written a line for publication. Literary genius is not a prime factor to success in motion picture story writing. If you have a story-idea as good as some you have seen produced—this opportunity is wide open to you.

$250 to $2,000 for Workable Motion Picture Story Plots

People with merely good ideas for stories, who are willing during spare hours to learn how motion picture directors want their plots constructed, can succeed.

Producers will pay $100 to $500 for comedies; $250 to $2,000 for five-reel dramatic scripts. People who never saw a motion picture studio have succeeded.

Learn how you, too, can master this high-paid art in spare time.

The famine in story-plots first became acute about two years ago. Public taste changed. Play-goers began to demand real stories. Plenty of manuscripts were submitted, but most were unsuitable.

For writers didn't know how to adapt their stories for the screen. Few people could come to Los Angeles to learn. A plan for home study had to be devised.

Frederick Palmer (formerly staff writer of Keystone, Fox, Triangle and Universal) finally assembled a corps of experts who built a plan of study which new writers could master through correspondence. It is called the Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing. It is endorsed by every big producer and star. We have developed scores of new writers. Many have taken staff positions in studios. One of our members was paid $3,000 for his first story. James Kendrick of Texas has sold 6 stories since enrolling a year ago.

Special Contributors

Twelve leading figures in the motion picture industry have contributed special printed lectures covering every phase of photoplay plot construction. These special contributors include Frank Lloyd and Clarence Badger, Goldwyn directors; Jeanie MacPherson, noted Lasky scenario writer; Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, of Metro's scenario staff; Denison Clift, Fox scenario editor; George Beban, celebrated actor and producer; Al E. Christie, president Christie Film Co.; Hugh McClung, expert cinematographer, etc., etc.

Advisory Council

The educational policy of The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is directed by the biggest figures in the industry. They include Cecil B. De Mille, Director-General of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Thomas H. Ince, head of Thomas H. Ince Studios; Lois Weber, America's greatest woman producer and director; Rob Wagner, motion picture writer for the Saturday Evening Post.

The Re-Covering For Fine Cars

Weather—heat, cold, rain, wind, snow—affects the top first. The constant, unceasing beating of the elements, driving against top fabrics, destroys their lustre. You can repaint the body, but you can't refinish the top. When its lustre is gone the simplest way to restore the appearance of your car and assure yourself of perfect protection and satisfaction is to have your garage man, automobile or accessory dealer rip off the old top and put on a Badger Slip Roof.

The Logical Re-Covering for Particular Motorists

Made of the finest fabrics obtainable—you have your choice of "Neverleek," "Drednaut," etc.—patterned from the car manufacturer's original models, the Badger Slip Roof is handsome and enduring.

You do not disturb the frame of your old top. All you do is rip off the old covering and tack on the Badger—a complete new roof and back curtain. Sewed with waterproof seams, and ready to put on.

Go to your local dealer or garageman today. He'll show you materials and styles. Made with or without bevel plate glass windows. You'll be surprised at the remarkably low cost. For all models and makes of cars. Thousands already in use. Satisfaction assured.

At Night—
a thorough bath for your face

If you want a skin that is clear, brilliant with color, let it breathe at night

IS your skin continually disfigured by annoying little blemishes?

Authorities on the skin now agree that this condition generally comes—not from the blood—but from bacteria and parasites which are carried into the pores by dust and floating particles in the air.

You can free your skin from this trouble by using every night the special Woodbury treatment given here:

Just before retiring, wash your face thoroughly with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap and dry carefully. Now, dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy, cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes. Rinse very carefully, first with clear, hot water, then with cold.

Use this special treatment until the blemishes have disappeared, then continue to give your face, every night, a thorough bath in the regular Woodbury way, with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, ending with a dash of cold water. In this way you can guard against any reappearance of the blemishes.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is on sale at all drug stores and toilet goods counters in the United States and Canada. In the booklet wrapped around each cake you will find treatments for all the commoner skin troubles. Get a cake today—begin using your treatment tonight. A 25 cent cake lasts for a month or six weeks of any treatment, or for general cleansing use.

Conspicuous nose pores —how to reduce them

Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Use this treatment regularly and before long you will notice how this gradually reduces the enlarged pores until they become inconspicuous.

Would you like a trial size cake?

For 6 cents we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap (enough for a week or ten days of any treatment), together with the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch." Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. CLEARING WISCONSIN'S BAD LANDS

AIDING FOOD PRODUCTION by clearing land in northern Wisconsin is one aim of the University of Wisconsin in holding two-day short courses in stump pulling. The student is shown using a puller to extract the stump.

FIVE MINUTES LATER the stump looks like this.

A HOME MADE PILER, similar to the one shown here, is used to throw the stumps into a pile for burning.

IF DYNAMITE IS USED the remnants may be dragged off to the stump pile by team.

A THIRTY FOOT PILE, ready for burning.

THE PILE ON FIRE, with the surrounding ground cleared for action. Hundreds of families are going into these newly cleared lands and the farmers taking the short course in removing stumps return to their own farms to increase their acreage for cultivation.

PIMBLEY'S AUTO-NEWER

THE manufacturer of your car has used endless time and skilled labor at a large cost to produce its beautiful finish. Many so-called polishes containing oil, wax and destructive acids will permanently ruin this delicate surface. PIMBLEY'S AUTO-NEWER is a cleaner and a newer of the finish, while an ordinary polish coats over and cannot be rubbed dry, gathers dust and thereby destroys finish.

You can keep your car new looking. Directions on every package. Price 50c and $1. (The $1 size contains enough for ten applications.)

The Proper Way to Wash Your Car

Place your car where the sun does not shine on it. Use hose with very slow running stream of water of same temperature as weather. Let water run slowly over surface and follow stream with a wet chamois, rubbing very gently. This removes fine particles of grit without scratching finish. Never rub vigorously. When surface is thoroughly washed, wipe with a clean damp chamois. Long swinging strokes give best results. When surface is completely dry, shake bottle and put a few drops of PIMBLEY'S AUTO-NEWER on a cheese cloth and apply over surface of about two square feet. Then take a soft flannel cloth and rub until finish is DRY and HARD. Repeat this performance until completed. PIMBLEY'S AUTO-NEWER removes grease and oil spots that are not affected by plain water. When surface has been covered the finish will be restored to its original beauty.

Pimbley's Auto-Top-Newer

If your top is dingy and faded—get a can of PIMBLEY'S AUTO-TOP-NEWER and a small paint brush. Apply as per directions on can and the result is astonishing. PIMBLEY'S AUTO-TOP-NEWER is ideal for pantasote, mohair and leather. It dries in ten minutes and never rubs off. It is absolutely waterproof. Price, half pints, 60c; pints, $1.00; quarts, $1.70.

P. S.—PIMBLEY'S AUTO-TOP-NEWER is fine for suit cases, grips, leather cushions, trunks, tire cases, etc. Just the thing for brake drums, rods, axles, under part of engine or any part of car not exposed to extreme heat.

Pimbley's Auto Black Enamel

You can enamel your car today and drive it tomorrow. PIMBLEY'S AUTO BLACK ENAMEL is easy to apply, free flowing, and will not show brush marks like ordinary paint. The finish is a beautiful, glossy black that withstands heat. Complete directions on every can. Price, half pints, 60c; pints, $1; quarts, $1.70.

How to have a brilliant lasting polish

Well polished nails add charm to any hand

THE perfect fingernail is rosy, lustrous and delicately polished. This soft, gleaming polish is the final touch that perfects the beauty of your hands.

No matter how much you may use your hands you can keep your nails always well polished with just a few minutes' care every day.

How to have a perfect manicure

Soften and remove all surplus cuticle with Cutex. For snowy nail tips apply a little Cutex Nail White underneath the nails.

Now your nails are ready for that final touch—the polish. Rub a little Cutex Cake Polish on the palm of the hand. Then pass the palm quickly over the nails until a lustrous shine appears. Cutex Cake Polish gives a quick, soft gloss to the nails.

For a more brilliant polish use the Cutex Paste Polish first, then the Cutex Cake Polish. After washing you can heighten your polish by rubbing the nails lightly over the palm of your hand.

For an unusually quick, brilliant lustre, use Cutex Liquid Polish—which tints and polishes instantly.

Get your Cutex Nail Polish in any form you prefer

The popular Cutex Cake Polish does not crumble or break and will not scratch the nail surface.

For a brilliant shine, waterproof and lasting, Cutex Paste Polish is used in connection with the Cake Polish. These two polishes, used in combination, have become part of a standard manicure.

For an extremely brilliant lustre, with no effort, there is the Liquid Polish. It requires no buffing and dries instantly.

Then there are two polishes put up in especially convenient containers, to carry in the purse—the Powder Polish and the Stick Polish.

Cutex Nail Polish, Cuticle Remover, Nail White and Cold Cream are each 35 cents. The Cuticle Remover comes also in 65 cent bottles.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

In the offices of the world's most productive workers—

Learn one secret of their untiring power

AT the lower end of Broadway, New York, in one of the great buildings that look out over New York harbor, there is a simply furnished office, the walls of which are lined with a great number of personal photographs. This office belongs to Charles M. Schwab. The pictures of his friends, with which he has surrounded himself, represent one of the ways in which this great industrial genius and tireless worker manages, even while he is at work, to snatch a few moments' relaxation and refreshment of mind.

Nearly every big creative worker recognizes today the value of momentary relaxation—of alternating hard work with brief but frequent snatches of rest.

Ordinary fatigue is harmless; you can overcome its effects in a few minutes. But fatigue carried to excess works like an actual poison on the human system.

Just as an airplane engine wears out after a few months because it is continuously driven at maximum speed, while an automobile engine will last for years—so human beings last longer and work better if they can momentarily relieve the exhausting effect of constant driving.

Try stopping and relaxing for a few moments before you reach the danger point—see how much fresher you will feel at the end of the day—how much more work you can actually accomplish.

There are a dozen simple ways of securing this momentary relaxation.

One simple method of securing momentary relaxation

Most of us have noticed, for instance, that just washing the hands is often wonderfully restful—soap and water in themselves have a tonic effect on the human system. The next time you wash, use Jergens Violet Soap—and see what an instant, delightful sense of refreshment and relief you can get from this simple act.

Jergens Violet Soap is especially made to refresh as well as cleanse. It contains an ingredient so cooling, so refreshing, that physicians often recommend this ingredient for its effect on the skin. The moment you use Jergens Violet you will feel the refreshing effect of this tonic ingredient. Your skin will feel smooth, clean and cool. Your whole system will experience a sense of refreshment and relief.

The delicious fragrance of Jergens Violet Soap, like the dewy odor of fresh violets—its cool transparence—its visible purity—increase this wonderful quality of refreshment.

Use Jergens Violet Soap in moments of fatigue all through the day—make it your means of securing momentary relaxation. The same qualities that refresh you when you are tired make it delightful for general use.

Jergens Violet Soap is sold wherever soap is sold—15 cents a cake.

Send 6 cents and learn the surprise of its refreshment

For 6 cents we will mail you at once a refreshing little cake of Jergens Violet Soap. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., 6533 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, 6533 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

Twink

Twink is made by the makers of Lux

For your faded georgette, your yellowed crepe-de-Chine

Clearer, lovelier colors than you could ever get before

THERE is a new way to make your yellowed georgette just the radiant coral you have wanted; to make your faded crepe-de-Chine as delicate a lavender as the day you bought it.

You can get these lovelier, truer colors with Twink, the new colored flakes.

Twink is made by a wonderful new method for producing colors that makes it possible to get more exquisite shades than have ever before been obtained.

When it was found that in this product any fashionable shade could be produced, the highest authorities on fabric colors were asked to select this season's smartest shades. Twink was then made to match these colors.

The thin, glistening flakes dissolve instantly in boiling or very hot water and whip up into a rich lather. You put in your blouse, work the suds through the fabric and rinse in cold waters. In a twinkling your faded georgette is a soft yellow or a delicate pink.

The Twink colors are always clear and even, and so fast you can wash your blouse several times before you need Twink it again.

Get today several packages of Twink in the newest blouse shades. Twink will not injure any fabric that water alone will not injure.

Your druggist, the department stores, and the 5 and 10 cent stores have Twink. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

For restoring color and for giving these new exquisite colors Twink is as perfect as Lux is for fine laundering.

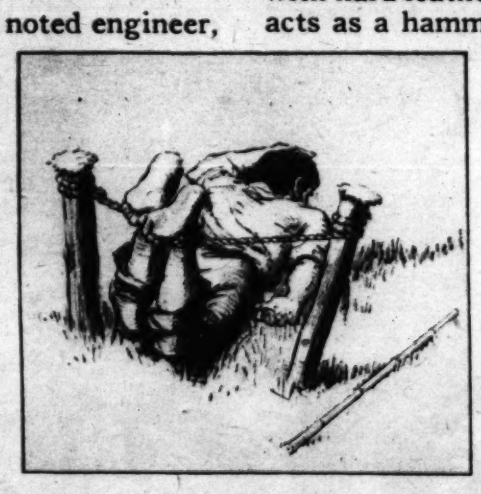
Fatigue – the greatest enemy you have in your work today

EVERY year 800,000 serious industrial accidents occur in the United States. Authorities who have investigated these accidents claim that 83% of them would have been prevented had the worker not been fatigued.

Throughout the world tremendous efforts are being made to prevent the man who works with hand or brain from becoming over-fatigued.

The late F. W. Taylor, the noted engineer, spent years in planning work for the prevention of unnecessary fatigue. Frank B. Gilbreth, whose books, "Fatigue Study" and "Motion Study," are landmarks, is constantly studying new ways to eliminate fatigue. The Society of Industrial Engineers has recently appointed a committee of noted men to study the same important problem.

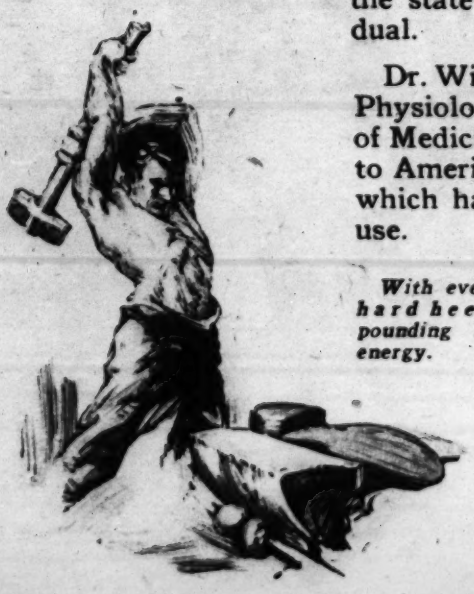


In early China there was a form of punishment known as the Bastinado, which consisted of light taps on the feet with a small stick of bamboo. The constant repetition of the tapping reduced the strongest man to nervous exhaustion.

New machine in England to test fatigue

To aid in the study of the problem an ingenious machine has been devised in England. This machine makes it possible by repeated and comparative tests to determine the state of fatigue of the individual.

Dr. Winifred Cullis, Professor of Physiology at the London School of Medicine, during her recent visit to America, announced the results which had been obtained with its use.



With every step on hard heels you are pounding away your energy.

One of the most important results established is that men and women in various ways waste their precious energy.

It is because of this waste that they become fatigued and are listless in their daily tasks. This is why so many fail and meet defeat.

One of the greatest of these wastes comes from pounding away your energy on hard, modern pavements. Every step you take with hard leather heels or "dead" rubber heels acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system. If you are a person of average activity you take 8,000 steps a day. The constant repetition of these jolts tends to exhaust your energy—to produce that tired-out feeling you so often experience.

Remove this cause of fatigue

You can do much to prevent this condition. You can eliminate the shocks of pounding hard heels on still harder pavements. O'Sullivan's Heels absorb these jolts and jars.

To secure the resiliency, the springiness of O'Sullivan's Heels, the highest grades of rubber are blended by a special formula. With this blend of live, springy rubber are "compounded" the best toughening agents known. The compound is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

This is why O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking. The same process that makes O'Sullivan's Heels resilient gives them their great durability. O'Sullivan's Heels outlast three pairs of leather heels—they often outlast two pairs of ordinary rubber heels.

Stop pounding away your energy. Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes.

O'Sullivan's Heels

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
PART SIX JUNE 20, 1920.

STRAIGHT the LINE and LONG the WAIST of MANY NEW MODELS by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In spite of all rhapsodies, June is a month of various afflictions. To the school boy and girl it means final examinations. To the merchant, marking down his stocks. To Mrs. Caddington Kip Band of New York and Newport, putting in time at her country place between these two vital residences. And even the poet—he has to boo at the landscape and write down his various boos.

With most of us women all over the country this idyllic month is a season of getting ready for the real hot weather. Somehow we always put off our summer dressmaking until summer is upon us, and consequently our little homes and apartments are now inundated with the organdies and dotted swisses and taffetas and shantungs which we don't know exactly how to have made. And, really, this year it is puzzling. There are so many styles to choose from that it would take a Napoleon to make the quick decision.

Putting off has, however, its advantages with those who want their clothes to last another summer. For already a few of the earliest autumn things have found their way over from Paris, and those women who observe the trend of style will avoid making up deceased modes.

I visited the other day one of these exhibitions of advance Paris modes. From them it seemed plain to me—first, that the dear old pannier had been more or less panned; second, that the long, straight line with the lowered waist was imminent; third, that there was a decided directoire note in suits and dresses; and, fourth, that the moyen age long waist was much in favor.

Of course fluffs are the second nature of organdies and other thin materials. These, as well as the little dance frocks of taffeta and satin, will be worn all this summer with the prevailing quaint, tight basque and overflowing hips. But, aside from these, it is well to remember the handwriting on the wall. The silk suit, the tricotine or poiret twill which most women now keep on hand all through the summer, the practical taffeta for street wear—all these may now be made up according to next season's, rather than last season's, modes.

As an example of what we mean, we point to the frock second from the left. This is a copy of a frock from Madeleine & Madeleine, the famous French designers. It is made of fine French blue serge and is trimmed with that favorite of the exclusive designer, steel beads. The back is as heavily embroidered as is the front, and there, instead of hanging loose, it is confined with the inevitable string sash. In the dip of the waist line and in the absence of landscape gardening over the hips, in the rather straight line of the whole frock you get the mode as it is interpreted by some prominent French designers in their early autumn models. As to the short sleeves—well, we are still to enjoy every breeze that wanders below the elbow. For the newest models still have 'em.

AT the right a frock of black and white taffeta shows an ingenious spiral draping of skirt which follows out the slender silhouette. Next, a smart taffeta cape of changeable tint, which will fill in many a gap of the summer wardrobe. The third is a fine serge in navy blue, embroidered in steel beads, designed by Madeleine & Madeleine, and the last a costume composed of gray faille coat adorned with gray lace and a draped black satin skirt.

A frock like this is worn for the cool days that are scattered through every summer. In the mountains it is of course almost a necessity. And, speaking of serge, it is quite evident that poiret twill will be the favored "serge" for this fall. At least this is the material of which many of the new frocks are fashioned. Stitching in contrasting color is often applied in rows to both bodice and the hip section of the skirt. Thus, a certain foreign model of black poiret twill and black taffeta is plaided in red stitching and a navy twill from Lanvin has lines of ruby stitching. Heavy embroidery is also continued and Poiret fairly loads a chemise frock of blue poiret twill with oriental embroidery.

There are numerous chemise frocks built of this material—also of tricolette. It is interesting to know, too, that the waist is frequently bloused.

In the silk costume at the left of this page we find an answer to the questions, "What shall I wear to church? Or the afternoon reception? Or the races? Or the luncheon?" This costume, at Paris instigation, combines a gray faille coat with a black satin skirt. Exceedingly attractive is this coat with its high collar, jabot, and sleeve frills of gray lace bound in black satin. As for the skirt, this is draped—and really many of the best designers seem to prefer this form to the various torturings and maimings of fabric with which we are familiar.

A great many people have been asking whether tricolette frocks are still "good." They are not only good. They are persistent, and some of the smartest of summer silk models have elected this jersey weave. Of course, the French designers are somewhat embarrassed by the fact that there is so little tricolette available. Even so, Lanvin, for example, has sent over a model in this material. This is figured in bright tans and greens to represent the Garden of Eden and all its pet animals. It ought to keep any child away from its nursery indefinitely. This frock is made, by the way, in the style of which I have spoken. That is to say, it has a bloused waist, short kimono sleeves, a round neck, and the long line. This long line is unthwarted by the familiar string girdle.

Speaking of brown, it is really surprising how this favorite tone of last winter has kept up. We can't leave off the autumn leaf apparently and nothing can appease our appetite to be the original Nut Browne Maide. Even in cotton materials and thin blouses we find every shade from Havana to tete de negre. In the tricolette frocks Havana and golden browns are particularly smart.

To go back to Lanvin's Garden of Eden creation. This is only one of the various ways of making you wonder whether it is sofa or Sophia at whom we are looking this summer. Somehow or other the household decorator seems to have got mixed up with the clothes decorator. We are wearing queer materials for our summer frocks, such as loose, shaggily woven linens in bright oriental tints, and we are embroidering them in designs that never used to be seen off a cushion. Some of these blousehold decorations are immensely attractive for those who have the coloring in themselves to do it. Thus, the other day I found a suburbanite of brilliant blonde skin and blue eyes wearing a loose linen in Pompeian red, made chemise style, and embroidered in huge wool flowers of black, and green, and dull yellow. On her it was stunning, but I could fancy the disaster to the little brown bird of a woman.

Among the novelties of this summer are various sets of organdy and batiste. At one of the smartest places on Fifth avenue I found, for example, ruches of white organdy embroidered in colored silk and piped with taffeta to match the embroidery. Hats of the same fabric and embellishment came along with these. Then sometimes the hat and parasol are made to mate. Thus, a wide brimmed hat of embroidered batiste trimmed with long velvet ribbon streamers was chaperoned by a parasol of the batiste with quarter inch tuck following each rib.

For a Shiny Nose and Enlarged Pores

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Only hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

NEITHER is it a thing of beauty nor a joy forever—a nose with a shine or dotted with pores. Only is it a thing of adornment when the skin is clear and fine and of a dull finish. Like highly polished furniture, the highly polished nose is a thing of former popularity.

Everybody wants it dulled to an elegant turn. Some in their enthusiasm do it to a marshmallow turn, which is sinning in the other direction quite as grossly. You've seen the marshmallow noses that are being worn on some of our best boulevards, haven't you? Well, they're not in good style at all, at all! They make the face look all nose, which isn't fair to either face or proboscis. They bear the same relation to good style as a flaming hat on a red-headed girl—overdoing it.

Rinse in Cold Water.

Now, one may not think that the way one washes her face has anything to do with a shine, but it has. After soap is used, a rinsing in warm water is necessary, and then a cold water rinse. The warm water takes all the soap off, and the cold closes the pores. So that one is taking care of the enlarged pores as well with every proper washing.

The nose harbors most of them. A scrubbing brush of camels' hair is advisable to use, for the large pores are most susceptible to dust and grime, and result in blackheads if not scrubbed out immediately. The hot water scrub is best; then the hot water rinse, and then the cold. And, finally, the ice rub.

Diluted alcohol, rubbed over the face a couple of times a day, will serve to kill the shine on a nose, as well as act as an astringent. But ice is easily within most folks' reach in summer time, and after washing the face rub it with a little piece of ice wrapped in a clean handkerchief end or a bit of cotton, or, if you can hold it in your hands, never mind the cotton holder. Ice is a wonderful skin tonic.

Daily Bath Good for Skin.

Haven't you noticed yourself that people who make the daily bath a morning prayer have much finer grained skins than folk who are neglectful? Particularly is this true of those with the cold shower habit.

Witch hazel is another astringent with much value. It is more effective when warmed. It may be heated by immersing the bottle in hot water.

The following lotion will correct enlarged pores and is at the same time recommended for oiliness of the skin or shiny noses: Orange flower water, six ounces; tincture of benzoine, one-half ounce; witch hazel, two ounces. Mix the witch hazel and the orange flower water, shake lightly, and add to the tincture of benzoine. Apply night and morning with a piece of absorbent cotton.

Home Treatment Easy.

For mild cases of oiliness of the skin one dram of boracic acid mixed with four ounces of rosewater is helpful.

The egg astringent for closing the pores is used in many beauty parlors. But one may treat herself at home successfully. First cleanse the face with a good cleansing cream. Wipe off, and when the skin is thoroughly dry apply the white of the egg with a bristle brush. Let the white dry, and then apply yolk of egg coating. When dried thoroughly, rinse off with cold water.

Romantic Dreams.

I was a small girl of twelve summers. It was the day after the county fair, where I had met a handsome stranger who I was sure loved me and about whom I consequently wove romantic dreams. Well, on this day mother sent me down cellar to bring up a dozen eggs and a large piece of butter. Taking a plate for the butter and a bowl for the eggs, I started off. While getting these I told my imaginative lover that I would have to finish school before I could marry him. I started to the door, the butter and eggs in my hands. "No, dear," I whispered passionately, "I can't," when suddenly I went sprawling onto the floor. My butter was covered with sand and my eggs smashed. I looked around for some place to hide them. A barrel stood in the corner. In back of this I dumped my butter. A large jar stood on the shelf. In this I dumped my eggs. A few days later my father cleaned the cellar. He found the eggs and butter. Needless to say, I found it difficult to sit down for a few days after that. D. C.

A Wild Ride.

I was an only girl, with three elder brothers, and was inclined to be very much of a tomboy. We had to cross a railroad track on our way to school, and often climbed under freight trains, standing there, when we were in a hurry. One day there was a long freight, first moving one way, then another. The boys got tired waiting for it to pass, so started to climb over the top.

A small boy and I were slow, and just as we reached the top the train started to move. Faster and faster it went, and we were frightened. My roly-poly companion would say every once in a while, "O, we must be in New York now." After about five miles the train stopped suddenly, and the next thing I saw was a man taking long strides toward us along the top of the cars.

"Well," said he, "is this an elopement?" He got us safely down, telegraphed my father, and in silence he brought us home. But, O, what a whipping I got! LOTTIE.

He Finished the Job.

My parents were inclined to encourage my artistic ambitions until this particular day, when I displayed too great a talent for painting. Our house had just been painted a bright yellow. The painters' supplies were still in the basement. I selected a pail of black paint. In one hour the yellow house was decorated with fruits and animals that adorn every child's "First Painting Book." Father and mother were away for the day, so the house caused much amusement to the neighbors, but not any to father on his return. For a week after I ate my meals from that proverbial mantelpiece. R. Buttons Bring Memories.

My mother was a dressmaker, and her sewing machine held all sorts of treasures—especially for rainy days. Our chief joy was buttons, which we used to play a favorite game. One day I took a lot of gray ones and lost them all in the game to a friend of mine. When mother needed them they were nowhere to be found. But she suspected and finally got from me the truth. I remember still my childhood agony when I had to get the buttons from my friend, who, luckily, still had them. Even this did not help me, for I was severely punished, just the same. It is years, but only the other day the sight of a gray button brought back to me the memory of that sad experience. L. W. P.

His Own Chicken.

When I was small we were visiting a farmer, who was very stingy; so we were many times hungry. One day we suggested to him that we coon a chicken from a neighboring farmer. The farmer said, "That's fine," I must go to town you can have it all fried by the time I get back." So as soon as he was gone we got one of his own chickens and killed it and had it fried so when he got back he thought it was a great joke on the other farmer, not knowing it was his own chicken he was eating. HOSPITABLE AND HOMEY.

NATURE sends light from above, but man generally lets it into his home from the side. As a rule he cannot help this. The window must be on a level with his eyes to give him a view of the outside, but it is not wholly satisfactory. One reason why a Gothic cathedral is so pleasing to every one is that the light, filtering down from above, reminds us of one of nature's noblest works, the forest. We cannot live in Gothic cathedrals, of course, but whenever we get a chance we should take a cue from their lighting.

The architect of this wondrously homey brick house has done so. He has put his stairs in the living room, and then, a little more than half way up, has made a broad landing under a group of windows that pour down a flood of light on everything below. Of course, this is not the only light the living room gets, but it is a most pleasing addition.

The first thing that strikes one as he approaches this house is the hospitable entrance porch at the corner, with its sturdy piers and broad arched openings. The welcome thus promised is made good by the interior. There are really two living rooms. One is that already mentioned, containing the stairs and the great stair window. This room occupies the whole center of the house, is 15x25 feet in extreme dimensions, and as interesting as it is roomy. Before you, as you enter, are the stairs, and in the nook between them and the doorway are three casement windows. At the further end of the room is the ample fireplace, flanked by bookcases with windows above them—another bit of overhead lighting. On the farther side of the stairs, using the space under the upper part of them, is a large coat closet.

Most houses would be deemed fortunate if they contained one such room. This house really contains two. At your left, as you face the fireplace, French doors lead to the living porch, a glassed-in continuation of the entrance porch. This sun room is 9 by 18 feet, a sheltered bit of outdoors, large enough to accommodate the whole family.

Opposite the living porch is the dining room, 14 by 16 feet, with light coming from a group of windows in front and a single broad opening at the side. Back of the dining room is the kitchen, 10 feet 6 inches by 11 feet, and these dimensions do not include a recessed corner which is virtually a pantry and can be inclosed if desired. Back of this pantry space is a lavatory with toilet and washbowl. The main kitchen entrance is on the side, close to the dining room, and right next to it is another recess for the refrigerator. Another door leads from the kitchen to the garage, passing the basement stairs.

The upper floor contains three bedrooms, all large, and one 15 feet by 19 feet 6 inches. This room opens on a little balcony over the porch, and has besides a huge closet under the roof. Another bedroom opens on a sleeping porch built over the garage. The bathroom is unusually large.

The walls of this house are built of common brick throughout, asphalt shingles cover the roof, and the interior plaster is laid on metal lath. It is built to last and to protect, not to rot or to burn.

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

The father and a friend were enjoying a smoke on the porch and daddy threw the almost finished cigar on the lawn. Junior, picking it up, ran to his mother and exclaimed, "Look where daddy threw this, mother! Don't let him get away with that stuff just because he has company." A. G.

A neighbor had just moved into a new house, so quite naturally she took visitors all through the place. One day a little boy was in to play with her small son. When the child was about to leave, the young son said, "O, don't go yet. Wait, and mamma will show you the house." C. C.

A family with four lively little children moved into our neighborhood recently. The children were full of curiosity and asked many questions.

Starting from home one morning, I was greeted with the question, "Where are you going?" Just afterward I discovered that I had forgotten my pocketbook and went back after it. When passing the same group of children one tot said, "Why, you look as if you were running away and had to go home again. Are you?" J. A. L.

Friends of ours have a family of three children, Elizabeth and twins—James and Joseph. The twins resemble each other so much that it is hard to distinguish them. One day while the children were playing in the yard a neighbor lady asked Elizabeth which of the boys was James, and she very promptly received the reply that James was the one standing next to Joseph. A DRESSER PIN CUSHION.

THIS time of year most women are busy giving little finishing touches here and there about their homes. The decorating and cleaning has been finished and things generally are in order. But there are always new things to make or old ones to make over, and we all like to change things here and there.

If new pin cushions are among the things needed, maybe these suggestions will help.

Buy or make two round cushions, the one for the chiffonier a size smaller than the one for the bureau. They should be covered in satin in the desired color, and a covering for the top of each made of scraps of lace one may have. Valenciennes insertion in a half inch width will do, and the lace doesn't need to match. Just cut the pieces long enough to go well over the top and down to about half the depth and overhand them together. After the lace top is pressed, tack it firmly and smoothly on the cushion.

For the rest of the cover there is nothing so pretty as brocaded satin having a small all over sort of design. Out of this cut a circular piece about 9½ inches in diameter for the larger cushion and for the other cushion about 8½ inches in diameter. Turn a narrow hem all around and hem by hand. The hem should not be more than one-eighth inch in width.

A dozen or more small brass rings will be needed. These should be about one-half inch in diameter and these have to be covered with silk floss in the color of the cushion. They are covered with the buttonhole stitch. Use a crochet needle for this work. And at the end leave a length of silk sufficiently long to sew the rings on to the satin. These rings are sewed on the right side of the covering, two inches apart and one inch down from the hem.

Then set the cushion in this circular covering, holding it in place by sticking a pin straight through into the cushion directly in the center underneath. Run a half inch satin ribbon through the rings and draw tight around the cushion and tie in a pretty bow. Arrange the fullness evenly and have the hemmed edge stand up like a ruffle around the cushion. The lace should go down inside the cover so no edges show.

This is easy to keep fresh and clean and wonderfully attractive looking.

Another style is to have a small square cushion, make a filet coverlike the illustration, set it in place on the cushion, and just below this filet top have a full puffing of satin stand out all around. It might not be possible to buy just the shaped cushion you would like, but one can easily be made.

It is most convenient to have a small cushion in the work basket for needles, and a tiny, flat cushion with a ribbon loop sewed to it is good to pin on the waist for pins when sewing. It is not at all difficult to get into the habit of using the cushion, and is a much better way than having the pins scattered everywhere.

BIRD LORE by Doris Blake

LUCKY is the bride-to-be whose wedding morn sees a bird alight on her windowsill, and the more merrily it sings the happier the days to follow, so say the folklore gatherers.

When summer birds take their flight, they carry summer away on their wings.

If a bird flies three times against a window it is a sign of bad luck.

If a white breasted bird flies into a sickroom, it is a happy sign for the stricken.

To see a birdling fall from its nest is a sign of good luck.

To be awakened by a bird singing on the morning of a day planned for pleasure is a sign that all will be well and you will have happiness.

It is said that caged birds will sing and fly about the cage if any one is coming.

Whoever robs the nest of any bird brings bad luck upon his head.

It is bad luck to have a bird fly into a room through one window and out another.

If you see a bird cleaning itself it is a sign of company.

Another sign of company is to have a bird fall on the window ledge.

Two birds fighting near your house is a sign of the arrival of a friend from the distance.

The Romans believed that the sight of a hawk foretold victory to those going to war.

If a bird comes tapping at a closed window, it is a sign of news.

It is believed that handling any bird's egg in the nest will make the bird desert them.

To meet a flock of white birds is a sign of the coming of distant friends.

Small birds preen themselves just before rain.

A dry summer will follow when birds build their nests in exposed places.

Birds singing during rain indicates fair weather.

"If birds in the autumn grow tame
The winter will be too cold for game."

To find a bird's nest full of eggs in the autumn is very unusual and equally lucky.

If you find a bird's nest you will inherit something.

If a blackbird builds its nest in the garden, there will soon be an engagement in the house.

Blackbirds' notes are very shrill in advance of rain.

The tale is told that the blackbird was once white, but during three days of a very severe winter it took refuge in a chimney.

If you eat a bluebird's eggs you will be restless as long as you live.

If a strange cat should kill your canary, it is a sign of ill luck for two years.

A yellow canary brings good luck to the house.

To catch a humming bird is considered very lucky; something very fortunate will happen to the family. You will become wealthy and wear beautiful clothes like the bird.

If, when wandering among flowers, a humming bird darts past you and sips of a flower, it is sign of much good, and you will meet a stranger whom you will love.

Katydids bring bad luck to an orchard.

To stop a katydid's singing, touch the tree in which it is singing, and the vibration will stop it at once.

To catch a sparrow and keep it confined in a cage is an omen of death.

To see a sparrow walking by, putting one foot before the other like a duck, is an omen of great prosperity.

When a sparrow builds above your window it is sign you will have a journey.

The Coreans explain why sparrows hop on both feet and why flies rub their feet together when they alight, in the following way: The sparrow and flies had a quarrel and decided to ask the governor of the Corean provinces to arbitrate the matter. He found them both wrong, and ordered them both whipped, and it made the sparrows jump up and down with pain and the flies put their hands together and prayed to be forgiven. The governor forgave them both, but as a sign he decreed that sparrows should always hop and that flies should rub their feet together when they alighted.

Hot Weather Footwear

Cantilever Shoes are comfortable in all weathers; they are the shoes for warm days when the feet burn and perspire. Every Summer more people try Cantilevers for hot weather, and find them the shoes for comfort the year round.

Cantilever Shoes are so well proportioned that there is never any pressure at any point. No binding of the muscles by rigid metal supports; no cramping of the toes to turn them outward. In Cantilever Shoes the natural inner sole line follows the contour of the foot. There is ample toe room, and the toes point straight ahead in their rightful position.

The slightly tilted heel distributes the weight with proper balance so that the tendons of the foot are not strained. The shank of Cantilever Shoes is flexible; it allows the muscles of the arch to exercise and grow strong.

If your feet are swollen and sore from the restraint and discomfort of ordinary shoes, drop into the Cantilever shop and let one of the expert salesmen fit you with a pair of Cantilevers. They will make you feel as fit as a plunge in the ocean.

A graceful shoe, which we carry in dark brown kidskin, black kidskin, dark tan calfskin, and white reptile canvas. In all widths from AAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

The Great Gift of Science and the Cow

Thousands of housekeepers are delighted users of Danish Pride Evaporated Milk because it is superior in flavor, color, purity and nutrition. True to name, it is the "Pride" of America's most famous dairy folk of the "North Shore" country, a land that "flows with milk and honey." A rich, pure milk from hand-fed cows; treated in most modern condenseries by the well-known Enz Process, the standard of the world.

For Greater Economy and Better Health

"The most economical food one can buy for the family," say government agricultural authorities. "Children must eat food containing the body building protein. It builds new muscles and repairs the old." Danish Pride Milk is a body builder because it is not only rich in fat, but rich in protein. Positively pure, it is not only nutritious, but wholesome and healthful.

Danish Pride Milk of Highest Standard

It is well known to many Chicago women that at a recent public test, 93 of their number out of 106 chose Danish Pride from over a dozen different brands of evaporated milk, as the most satisfactory of the lot. Its purity, rich consistency and fine natural flavor appealed to them. It will please you. Try it.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

A KNOWLEDGE OF PSYCHOLOGY.

THIS is a story of how science aided Cupid to win his way and make two worthy people happy. The woman confided the facts to my wife, and she, having sworn secrecy, promptly told me everything.

Mary and Robert had grown up together. They had been playmates and school fellows in childhood and companions in the same social affairs throughout their university days. Mary loved Robert, but he looked upon her as a dear, good sister. Familiarity had not bred contempt, by any means, but it had not inspired love on Robert's part. Everybody knew Mary's feelings, for she was an unsophisticated woman, incapable of dissimulation—everybody except Robert, who seemed oblivious to her very evident though unaggressive devotion.

Years went by. Mary was 30. Robert at 33 remained a bachelor, apparently indifferent not only to Mary but to all the other women of his acquaintance. I had set him down as a confirmed bachelor—"not the marrying kind," I said to my wife.

Then, all at once, to the surprise of us all, the engagement of Robert and Mary was announced. The marriage soon followed. What was more astounding still, the formerly courteous but undemonstrative Robert turned into an ardent lover who fairly worshipped Mary. We were mystified. What had wrought this sudden change in Robert? What made him look upon Mary not as a good sister but as a passionately desired sweetheart?

Mary told my wife the secret. I promised her, as she had promised Mary, to keep the secret, and I am keeping it just as she did.

At college Mary had studied psychology. In the years since she had read all the new books on that subject with absorbed interest. The purport of one psychologist's theory impressed her. It is that the acts of our mature lives are governed by "child images," those deep seated impressions of our young years which have passed from our present consciousness, but still influence our daily conduct without our being aware of it.

Robert's mother had died when he was a boy of ten. He had loved her with all the devotion and abandon of his impulsive childish nature. He worshipped her memory. In his mind the image of his mother remained as she appeared in the evening, sitting by the fire, dressed invariably in a clinging gown of a rich, dark red. Around this image of his mother clustered in Robert's mind every desirable attribute of womanhood. This was his ideal woman.

Mary loved Robert—she wanted him. Robert called one evening, as was his occasional custom. Mary was seated before the fire dressed in a clinging gown of a rich, dark red. Robert fell upon his knees and asked Mary to be his wife. He professed what he actually felt, the most sincere and reverent adoration, and was accepted.

Robert and Mary are married and are happy. Laugh, if you like. Condemn Mary's method, if you will. For my part, I think "all is fair in love as in war," and that Mary was justified in making use of her knowledge of psychology to win her heart's desire. Besides, it's good luck for Robert, although he doesn't know how and why Mary suddenly became an object of worship in his eyes. That's the story. Now, keep the secret as my wife and I have. W. E. H.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Turn the Tables.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am going with a young gentleman who I care for very much. He gives me great attention, but at times talks about how swell the other girls are, which he knows makes me very jealous. Please tell me how I should find out if he cares for me as he should?

"JEANETTE."

Turn the trick on him, Jean, and entertain him with the charms of some of your boy friends. Either that, or join in his praises of the girls, going him one better on each girl. The latter plan would be the better. He might begin to wonder if they were such feminine marvels after all.

His First Letter.

"Dear Miss Blake: If a girl friend has recntly moved from town for a few months would it be proper for a boy, who had been acquainted and friendly with her, to write to her? If so, about what should he say in his first letter to her? D. C. A."

Quite proper, D. C. A. Tell her you were wondering how she was getting along in her new home town, and that you would like to hear from her some time. Tell her the news of her former friends and yours, and other things of mutual interest.

They Act Silly.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 14, and need advice very much. Now, to make the situation clear to you, I will tell you about myself. I am considered an attractive girl, because I am pretty and always nice to every one, and as good natured as I can be. Most of the boys like me, and I like them. They often invite me to go riding with them. But when I go they always act silly, and if I tell them to stop they say other girls like to be kissed, and are surprised that I don't. I don't want to stop going with them, but don't know what to do.

"JEANNETTE."

Just fancy, Jeanette, you going riding with boys alone at 14. Have you no mother, nor big sister, nor auntie? It is not right, dear, and especially with boys who are undeniably fresh and ungentlemanly as your escorts are. Please do not go on these rides any more.

Cleopatra Stuff.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in trouble and immediately turn to you for assistance. I am a girl of 16 who has tried every device for attracting youths. I have even followed the advice in a magazine story, which told of a girl in modern garment who gains her knowledge from Cleopatra—the world's most famous siren. Even this has not given me the popularity I crave.

What can I do?

"ROMANTIC ROSY."

Just what brand of popularity is your ambition, Rosy, of the romantics? Did you find Cleo a little bit old fashioned? Better be not too grownup, unaffected, and just nice? Try that. You will be popular with everybody in the shortest possible time with these charms. Leave the Cleopatra stuff for the magazines and movies. That's where it belongs.

When the Curtain Went Up.

While visiting some friends at a resort, I met and became quite attached to a young man. One night he was sitting with his arm around me on a large porch. There was a window behind us, but as the shade was down we thought no one would see us. We were talking of our future, of how happy we would be, when suddenly we heard a lot of children yelling, "Movies, five cents a look." We turned quickly and saw the shade up, and a crowd of people watching us. Fortunately it was dark on the porch because I don't think they saw how embarrassed we were. D. M.

Hat on Her Back.

I live in one of Chicago's intensified housekeeping rooms, and carrying the intensified idea still further, when I return from business in the evening I pin my business hat to the back of my coat, where it will be handy for my quick getaway in the morning.

One springlike morning I decided to wear my Sunday hat. After donning the fussy creation I primped longer than I should, then grabbed my coat and away I went, making my usual mad rush for the L. I had gone about two blocks when I was overtaken by a much amused looking, rather breathless young man, who finally made me understand that my business hat was occupying a most precarious position between my shoulders. There were "grinning" faces on all sides of me, and in my embarrassment I fled for the friendly shelter of my intensified room, neglecting to say "thank you" to a most courteous young man.

S. J. K.

Her Way.

I was teaching school and as I had the primary room on the lower floor was considerably annoyed by the boisterous way in which the high school pupils came downstairs. The teachers held a consultation and I was appointed to speak to the principal concerning the matter. As a result, I stopped him one day on the landing. Just when I had finished my speech I lost my balance and went rolling down the steps. When I arose the principal smilingly said, "Is that the style you desire the students to use?"

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Capo Suits of Blue Serge. Green Foulard Gown by Paquin. Plum Colored Silk Dress with Organdy Collar. Lemon Colored Tulle Evening Gown.

PARIS HAS RESUMED ITS PRE-WARTIME GAYETY.

By Mary Brush Williams.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—What a piece of work is the fashionable demi-mondaine! If I were going to continue the quotation this remark is based on, I should have to say something about the excellence of her form and faculty. I shall restrict myself to a comment on her form with a paragraph on her makeup. Both are beyond perfection, and they excite more of a stir and admiring comment than Gen. Foch and the president of the republic could provoke. She is one of the first visible signs of peace.

She comes out of her perfumer's on the Rue de la Paix, and traffic all but ceases. The liveried man in front of Paquin's, who always insists on being spoken to, sees you not as you pass. He has arrested himself in the very act of helping the elderly patron of the house into her limousine, to stare after madame the demi-mondaine, as she delicately steps into her long, low, basketlike limousine.

Her face is powdered so very evenly it is cera, or sun burn powder! How many hours did it take to accomplish the perfect smoothness of that coating? The rouge on her cheeks shades into the color of her washed hair. I don't know what it is washed in, but you would say, whatever the preparation, it must have been extracted from the sun's rays, so bright is the light that enhalos the deep brown of its depths.

She has been buying her perfumes, and she trails the scent of them.

Just as carefully as she buys her jewels at Cartier's, she selects her perfumes. She sits at a little table across which sits her perfumer. He whiffs a delicate scent into the air, waits for it to fade, and submits another. She chooses something, asks him please not to submit it to any one else for the present, has the label on the bottle destroyed, takes it to her limousine—but even then her quest is not always finished. She carries it to another shop, searches another delicate odor that blends with it, and from the two she makes her own delicate perfume.

But this article is only to say that she, elegant, low toned, sweet smelling, wealth displaying creature of art and not of nature—she and countless Americans are here on the boulevard again. For the first time since its beginning, it is as if the war had never been. Where the Americans disappeared to during the war we know; where she hid herself I have no idea. But the important thing is that she, definite harbinger of peace and spring, is back. Paris in springtime, with a promise of fast approaching summer! Surely it must be practically the same thing as spring in heaven.

For spring in paradise what is the proper costuming? A foulard, a tailleur, a suit consisting of a skirt and cape instead of a skirt and a jacket, and, when one dances, a crisp, full skirted costume, the color often of ripe fruit. Just the same type of creations that are now and forever chosen in America, just the same as are worn every spring and summer here. But this year they seem richer and lovelier than ever. Maybe because the Americans are back. And Paris does need her Americans.

The suit with the cape is one to which our country people have taken a fancy. It is of blue serge, and the cape is finely plaited round the high collar that circles the throat stiffly. It is lined with yellow chiffon. The skirt is perfectly plain. The blouse is as much a feature of the summer costuming as is the cape. Long blouses, gathered into a close fitting ceinture round the hips—no exiled Russian princess, no gay, smart American, no pace setter of a smart demi-mondaine is without one. It is as much a characterizing sign of the time as a railroad strike. It gives the long line bear to us and reluctantly taken up by our European fashion makers.

This one is of white satin blousing low over a wide ceinture of the material and it is embroidered in black cut beads. The hat is of old blue taffeta with a bunch of flowers exactly matching it on the brim. The milliner told me she dyed those flowers three times to get the exact tint. They have something sparkly on them that looks like the dew of morning.

The second offering is a gay foulard. This copy of the original model [by Paquin] is of a shade which used to be known out in Indiana during the remote period of my childhood there as stomach ache green. It is the bright, tender, unspoiled green of the countryside during the period after flowering time and before apples are ripe. This, by the way, is the favorite, I believe, of all the colors of the summer of 1920.

Emeralds go with it and diamonds sparkle brightly against the background that it makes. The flying spokes that constitute the principal feature of this costume are of a darker, unfigured green, and they are plaited. Plaited ruffles of the plain green make the cuffs. The neck descends into a small V shape in front, and on some wearers is kerchiefed in a fichu of handkerchief linen and lace.

The long, straight collar is one of the features of the summer costuming, and it is to show it that we are printing the third sketch. It assists even the roundest back to present the perfectly straight line demanded by fashion. The collar is of organdy and is therefore rather stiff, and it hangs without a curve from the back of the neck to a point only slightly above the waist. It can go straight across the front or it can descend in a V. The dress is of plum colored silk and is made into a full blouse that gathers at the waist. The sleeves and the front of the skirt are split and bound in glazed raffia. This material, by the way, has not exactly made good as a trimming. One does not see it so frequently as was threatened at the moment of the openings.

If one goes out much in the evening, one could put up a good appearance in this Cheruit evening robe of lemon colored tulle, which is drawn easily over the shoulders and billowed over the hips. It is attached to a coarse foundation of something that might almost be fish net. In its coarse mesh are woven daisies, great and small—the kind we used to trim our straw hats in for the picnic. Round the waist are other daisies made in shiny straw.

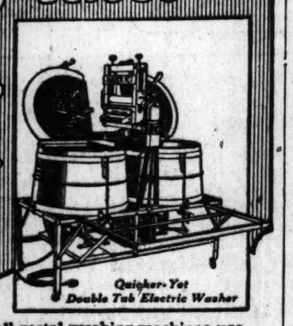
Don't Be Misled by These OLD, WORN-OUT Arguments!



Quicker-Yet Double Tub Electric Washer

The chief argument that dealers and manufacturers who sell metal washing machines use against the wooden machines, is that the wooden tubs will shrink and leak or fall apart.

But the wise housewife will not be misled by this untrue criticism. She will look back (like most of us can) to the days when our mothers used wooden tubs for washing. Mother used that same old pair of wooden wash tubs for years and years without having them shrink and fall apart. And those old wooden tubs lasted five times longer than our galvanized tubs of today, because they did not rust out.

Quicker-Yet WASHES CLEAN Electric Washers

are built with wooden tubs, simply and solely because wood prevents the water in the tub from cooling so quickly, and therefore, they wash your clothes cleaner in less time. Besides, they don't rust out.

Quicker-Yet tubs are made from kiln dried Louisiana cypress (the wood eternal) upon which water has no effect. The staves are tongued and grooved so that they fit together perfectly. Heavy steel bands at top and bottom, and a strong round hoop in the center, which can be tightened if necessary, hold the staves together solidly.

Ask your dealer for a demonstration of the Quicker-Yet Washers, and be sure and see the Quicker-Yet Double Tub Electric Washer pictured above. It gives you double the washing capacity, does your washing "quicker yet" and gets the clothes "cleaner yet." It costs no more and less than some. Sold for cash or easy payments. If you do not know the name of our dealer in your locality, write us.

PREPARING MEAT FOR COOKING.

ONE of the most economical ways of preparing meats has received little or no attention from the housewife, although the hotel chef has worked it up to a science. He has taken the least expensive pieces of meat, boned them, rolled and tied them into perfect cylinders or blocks, roasted or braised them, then carved them as unwastefully as the housewife would slice a meat loaf.

We have one well known but rather new illustration of what can be done in this way, in the picnic or California ham, which is a boned, rolled, and tied shoulder of pork. Neither this nor any other meat shoulder will roast well unless boned. And as to carving it with the bone in you cannot do it without getting a good many scraps. A shoulder of lamb roasted just in the shape it came from the butcher is hopelessly uncarvable and often distorted.

A professional says of this shoulder of lamb or mutton, after giving the direction to bone and tie so as to form an even roll: "Don't make the mistake of roasting the shoulders with the bone in. It is not only wasteful of the meat, but makes a scrappy piece of it when carved. Neither will it roast well."

This professional prepares meat shoulders in general by trimming the leg of meat so that it may serve as a handle, and then tying the shoulder part as you would tie a box so as to have the string cross the top in three places, or five if a large box, this being caught once through the string passing at right angles to it. But this involves using the trimmings for something, and I have tried some of the French methods by which you utilize every bit of the meat for the roasting or braising.

By taking out the shoulder bone and folding the boneless part around the leg of a shoulder of lamb, the whole may be tied up to form a block of meat almost as solid when cooked as a block cut from the loin. A particularly Frenchy way is to remove the bone from the leg, as well as from the shoulder, and then to roll and tie the whole into a ball of melon shape, the string dividing it into sections like those of a cantaloupe.

Perhaps it is not necessary to defend this fashion of boning and preparing meats for the open roasting pan, or the closed braising pan, yet it does seem as though something ought to be done to teach the housewife how much can be done in this way, and how great the waste may be even in the case of a rib roast of beef, if it is not tied up before it is roasted.

The directions given in cook books for the home for a roast usually read: Wipe meat, place in pan, dredge, etc. Of a piece of boned meat a direction found read: "Wipe, stuff, sew." Of a rolled and stuffed piece there is this direction: "Pin the meat together with skewers to keep stuffing from coming out." But what seems to me more important is to tie the meat firmly into a shapely, compact roll which can be sliced without the meat separating from the stuffing.

To the uninitiated a buffet of cold meats such as used to be prepared for the luncheons on the great ocean steamers, and perhaps is now, presented many a marvel. Some of these marvelously shaped meats, pierced with fancy silver skewers, represented the meat cook's way of utilizing every part of the meat creature. What are the less expensive parts, at a butcher's, when highly seasoned with spices or vegetables, are often preferred to a slice of cold roast loin.

Some of the pieces of meat that are tied up carefully for cooking are: The sirloin of beef, the short beef loin, brisket of beef, and other boiling pieces; the larded tenderloin of beef, the piece of beef [chuck is the best, which is used for pot roast or marinadedd and used for beef a la mode, it is tied before being put into the pickle as that may distort it], shoulder of veal, boned breast of veal, shoulder of lamb or mutton, boned neck of lamb, saddle of lamb or mutton, boned leg of lamb, fresh and cured and boned pork shoulder, fresh ham boned, the back part of a ham rolled for boiling, etc.

Of course trussed fowl is tied with a string. It goes without saying that the turkey must be trussed before it is roasted. Skewers may be entirely dispensed with and string alone used to bind it into something like a solid block. A hen or chicken to be roasted or boiled must be tied up as carefully as the turkey, and if the thighs are pushed into the body the tying is as easy as pie, after the wings are fastened back by pinioning the pinions.

The French and Italians could not think of putting even a solid piece of meat to boil without first tying it up. Perhaps it is partly because they can get such presentable slices from a rolled brisket of beef that they use it so extensively for the bouilli, which is in a sense a by-product of bouillon making, but in their management the more important of the two. We use the leg of beef in making bouillon and think the meat from it worthless.

The butcher will even bone a squab if you pay him for it, but home cooks, although they may get ragged raw meat from their attempts, say to bone a shoulder of lamb, will soon learn to do better, and the rags when well bound up inside the roll will be further bound by the cooking. Rolled meats may be roasted, but rolled lamb or mutton is best braised on a bed of vegetables. If roasted the regular rule for cooking lamb must be followed.

Roast Lamb.

Lamb must be roasted quickly in a brisk oven. Its shape as well as the degree of heat applied will determine how long per pound. Since it has no great amount of fat, the best way to seal the outside of the meat, if it is not rolled up in a fat cover, is to pour hot fat over it. A little butter, a little beef dripping from a seasoned roast, a little of its own fat, are good for this. To prepare the roast the outside skin or fell must be removed, whether the meat is boned and tied or not.

Pot Roasted Shoulder of Lamb.

Take off the skin of the shoulder of lamb and remove the shoulder bone, which may be cooked with other trimmings for a gravy. Watch the butcher bone one for you and then try it yourself. Chop off the unfresh knuckle of the leg part and fold the meat when you are ready to bind it with a string around the part remaining. This gives a firmness to the roll which the amateur in early efforts at tying up meats will appreciate. Use for the cooking the iron kettle called a Dutch oven. Fry out in a little salt pork. Roll your roll of meat in some seasoned flour, then sear it all around in the hot pork fat. Take out the meat and put into the fat in the kettle several carrots sliced, some chopped green peppers, two onions sliced, and as much celery as is reasonable, if you have it. Stir these around in the fat for about five minutes, adding any leftover flour of that used to roll the meat in, put the meat on this bed, rinse off the plate on which it has stood with two tablespoons of water, and close the kettle. More water can be added, but the meat will then be seethed in steam, whereas in the small amount it may be cooked brown, if basted every fifteen minutes with the fat in the kettle, mingled with fat which has cooked from it, and the juices from the vegetables. It is best to cook a piece of meat like this in a kettle just large enough, with no waste space. This meat should be even more palatable cold than hot. Do not cook with so much fire that the vegetables are ruined.

Braised Shoulder of Lamb.

The so-called roasting pans are more like braisings pans. In true roasting the vapors escape from the meat, leaving the surface crisp, while basting with fat keeps the inside soft. To prepare a boned shoulder of lamb for one of these pans it would be best to tie it up so as to make as long a roll of it as possible, perhaps leaving part of the leg bone for a handle. Skinned, boned, tied up, it may be treated like the leg of a lamb, boned or not. Even a leg of lamb can be more economically served if boned and tied in an even roll. Either the leg or the shoulder can be boned and tied so as to resemble a duck. Serve with peas, carrots, of a mixture of vegetables and mint sauce.

Mint Sauce.

Add a cup of cold water to a large tablespoon of cornstarch, put over fire and stir all the time until the mixture thickens. Have ready four tablespoons or more of chopped fresh mint to which a scant teaspoon of sugar has been added. Put this into the cooked part with a pinch of salt and two tablespoons of vinegar, more or less, according to taste, and let whole simmer for fifteen minutes. Strain and serve in mint pitcher.

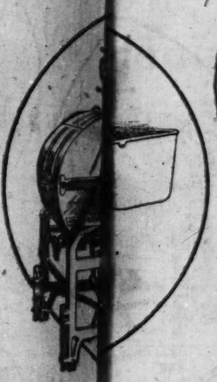
The Fair Now Has the Exclusive Sale of the Famous 1900 Electric Cataract Washer

See for yourself tomorrow how the Cataract turns out snowy white clothes—and even the finest of laces. We will have a machine with a glass window, so you can see just how it works—and our demonstrators will be ready to explain everything to you.

No Annoying Arguments With Servants

Your Linens Last Longer and They Are Clean



No Back-Breaking to Start

Demonstrated and Sold, Beginning Tomorrow

The 1900 Cataract Washer Saves Time, Labor, Clothes, Money

When we decided to place before Chicago women a complete washing service, we determined to investigate all the machines on the market. We invited and received co-operation from many manufacturers who explained them in detail to us. After much unbiased experimentation we came to the conclusion that the simplest was the best! We saw that the 1900 Cataract washes without—nothing inside the greatest saving of time—labor—clothes and expense.

So simple—a child can operate it—in cutting out this—it washes without contraptions—nothing but the tub.

Cataract Perfection Is the Result of Elimination

The Cataract is so simple that you may wonder that it does everything it should do so well. The explanation is simple also: Instead of threshing and dragging the clothes round and round in the water, the Cataract with its patented system forces the water at, through, in and under the clothes—cleans more thoroughly with less wear.

It operates on the principle of the human hand! Clothes are rubbed and re-entered the water 8—the clothes are not threshing, swashing around.

The Cataract Features Are Exclusive

Remember, you will not find these Cataract labor-saving features in any other machine. They are zealously protected by rigid patents. If you want the best it must be a Cataract you're seeking

You can wash a tub of clothes with electric current. Do not confuse the Cataract with imitations the trouble makers.

The Fair Backs Every Cataract

Our guarantee goes with every Cataract we sell. We're sure Cataract service will add to our prestige as the store that always makes good. We and our good name stand back of every Cataract.

You swing the handle without moving the machine.

The 1900 Cataract Washer Is Simplicity Itself

So simple—a child can operate it. Its makers spent many dollars and much ...e in cutting out nonessentials. The wonderful feature about the Cataract this—it washes only by passing water through the clothes. There are no in... ...e contraptions to wear and tear the garments. No heavy cylinders to lift ...nothing inside to get out of order—easy to clean. The tub is rust-proof. ...thing but the soap, clothes and water go into the tub.

How the Cataract Works

It operates on the principle that plenty of water and soap are the only cleansing agents ...ed! Clothes are not rubbed in this machine. The soapy, sudsy water is made to en... ...and re-enter the garments again and again. The water swirls about in the shape of a ...re 8—the clothes passing through this stream in a steady vertical motion. There's no ...shing, swashing and tear and strain in the Cataract.

What the Cataract Saves for You

You can wash a tubful of clothes in about ten minutes at a cost of less than a cent for ...tric current. Do away with the Blue Monday Drudgery. This swift, obedient servant ...inates the trouble of "help." Cuts your laundry bills way down. Saves steps, too.

You swing the wringer from the washer to rinse water, to bluing water, to clothes bas... without moving or shifting the washer an inch!

UNCLE JIM'S STORY

ALL ABOARD FOR TIMBUCTOARD.

THE first thing Kimbo thought of when he woke in the morning was that he was going to sail away on the water.

"Goodness, but I should have waked up early," he thought. "Maybe they have all gone and left me."

He looked around. He couldn't see a sign of any one about.

"Woof—woof!" barked Nig the cur.

He was standing in front of Kimbo's cage, barking his little scraggly head off.

"What do you think?" he yelped. "I'm going, too—I'm going, too."

"Honest?" squeaked Kimbo. He was very glad, deep in his monkey heart, for ever since Nig had saved him from those dreadful snakes he had felt much safer having Nig around. No telling what terrible things might happen out on the deep ocean—and with Nig to help him all would be well.

"Sure I'm going. Jerry told my master they'd take me for luck. Said nothing bad could happen with a cur on board. Say, are you ready? We start in an hour."

"I should say not. Watch me hustle," and Kimbo scrambled over to where his red coat, and green trousers, and cap lay, and picked them up, waving them in the air.

Just then Jerry came around the corner and in a jiffy Kimbo's hat and coat and trousers were all on and he was perched on Jerry's shoulder. His cage was loaded on a huge moving van along with the snake charmer's family, and Tom, the grizzly bear's, iron cage.

"I do hope Longa Trunka, the elephant, doesn't go along," squeaked Kimbo, half to himself, for he remember the time that he had scared the mouse into running up the elephant's leg and knew that Longa Trunka had never forgiven him.

The ride to the ship was not very long. Kimbo rode on Jerry's shoulder all the way and Nig trotted along at Jerry's heels.

"Don't go barking some other dog and get lost now," scolded Kimbo, and Nig started after a dog three times as big as himself.

"Say, I could find my way to this ship we are going on all by myself, and don't you worry," bragged Nig. But he kept closer to Jerry's heels after that. Wouldn't it be dreadful to get left on land after all and have the big ship sail off without him?

Just then the big ship hove in sight. Gracious, but it was huge!—high as a house and then higher than that, and with great big smoke stacks on top out of which long, curling whiffs of black smoke came.

"All aboard! All aboard!" called out a shrill voice.

And the long line of all the animals in the Greatest Street Fair Ever Seen started to cross the gang plank into the boat.

Such a crowd you never did see except at a circus parade.

First went the band—drums beating and horns tooting. Then went Longa Trunka leading the elephants, and then the horses, and after them the bears and the one raging lion, The King, whom I'll tell you about later. And after them of course all the smaller animals—the seals and the trained dogs and the rabbits—and a baby kangaroo!

And after all of them, prouder than ever in all his monkey life, came Kimbo. His cap was waving in one little black paw; with the other he held on to Jerry's shoulder. His red coat was flying open.

"Good-by, everybody—good-by!" he shrieked.

"Good-by, everybody!" barked Nig the cur, still close at Jerry's feet.

All aboard was right! With a screeching and a groaning the long ropes which tied the boat to the wharf gave way. Kimbo stood with Jerry at the deck as the boat pulled off.

On shore the crowds waved. Kimbo waved back.

"Do you think we will fall overboard?" he squeaked down at Nig.

"No, I should say not," woofed Nig. "Don't be so silly."

And after they were out of sight of land they all went down below and had a fine big supper.

It was good they had this supper, for it was the last supper that any of them were going to have for a long, long time. But of course they didn't know this and were all happy, for they had no idea of the terrible thing which was going to happen to them this very night, and which I'll tell you all about next week.

THE EASIEST MONEY YOU EVER EARNED ONE LINE—SEVEN WORDS OR LESS WINS THE CASH PRIZE

50c
Combination Vanity

THE Ideal Laboratories Company, creators of LURA Toilet Requisites, will give you $25.00 in cash for one line of seven words or less on the LURA Combination Vanity!

All you have to do is to write a "headline"—a phrase, sentence or a word that will attract attention and arouse interest when placed in large type at the head of an advertisement of this size.

You can't imagine anything more dainty and complete than this little Vanity. Besides compacts of powder and rouge, there are two round, soft puffs and a convenient mirror. The metal box, in orchid and black, is durable, light in weight and easy to open. The powder case slips out of the box, by gently pushing up on the mirror at bottom, so that you can put in a new powder compact any time. The rouge naturally lasts longer than the powder. A powder compact and fresh puff costs only 25c.

The winning headline—any number of words from one to seven—will appear at the top of this advertisement. It may be the line that you submit. Here's a big opportunity for you to win $25.00 and also to prove that you can write something to attract public attention. Duplicate prizes will be issued to those who submit winning headlines which happen to be exactly the same. Write a headline on the subject of Convenience and mail it at once. Replies must be in our office before noon, June 29th. Address: Advertising Dept., Ideal Laboratories Company, 533 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Remember these points about LURA Convenience

This is certainly an easy subject on which to write a headline. The convenience of the Combination Vanity is apparent to everyone. An ever ready supply of good powder and rouge! Two dainty soft puffs. A convenient mirror. A removable powder case (push up on the mirror in the bottom of the box) into which you can slip a new compact of powder any time. You don't have to purchase a Combination Vanity to enter this contest, but when you see the Vanity, you may discover many features not mentioned here. Hundreds of letters received last week in this great contest. Write your headline now.

Patterns by Clotilde

9099—Child's Dress. Sizes 2 to 10 years. Size 4 requires 1⅞ yards of 36 inch material, with ¼ yard of 36 inch contrasting material and ⅝ yard of 36 inch lining.

9692—Women's double-service dress. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 9¾ yards of 32 inch material or 7 yards of 36 inch material and 5 yards of binding.

9633—Women's dress. Sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

How to Use the Patterns

THE child's dress, No. 9099, is an especially good design for a challis, taffeta, serge, or other similar material, and there are always plenty of days during the summer months when something with a little warmth is necessary.

There is a straight, one piece gathered skirt sewed to a little underblouse, and the overblouse is separate.

If the sleeves are sewed into the armholes of the underblouse it will be pretty to finish the armholes of the overblouse with a bias piping. After this is basted in a seam around the armhole baste a shaped facing of the dress material about the armhole, and after the piping and facing are stitched to the armhole clip the edge of the seam all around the armhole. Then baste the facing down over the seam and hem in place invisibly.

The edges of the tabs around the bottom of the waist should be bound or finished the same as the armholes.

No. 9633 is a pattern equally adapted to ginghams, silks, or muslins. One of the stunning plaids shown in the ginghams would make an unusually attractive afternoon dress, with the front and sash of crisp white organdie. A pocket set in each side of the front is an added attraction, for there are so many times when a pocket is such a convenience.

A narrow, picot edged ruffle would make a pretty finish for the edges of the cuffs and collar, and the hem of the skirt could be turned up on the right side and the same narrow ruffling used there, setting it in between the edge of the hem and the skirt, so that it stands up.

No. 9692 is an ingenious design serving a double purpose, for it can be worn as an attractive morning dress, or it can be easily transformed into a garment suitable for working in, in the garden or in doing other hard work where a skirt gets in the way.

There are plaits in the skirt on each side, and tabs which button over and hold them in place. When the skirt is not desired it is turned up, and the tabs are utilized to hold it in place, back and front. The bloomers should be made of the dress material, and, of course, take the place of a petticoat.

Sometimes, no doubt, a pattern may seem rather puzzling at first glance, and when it does it is an excellent plan to lay it all out on a large table, look it over carefully, observing all notches and other marks. Then, using small, sharp pins that won't tear the paper, pin the entire pattern together and you can easily see just what it will look like and find out how it goes together, saving a lot of wear and tear on materials.

Use French seams on the garment and reinforce all places where buttons are used.

Thoroughly shrink the material before using it, and the strips for bands should be wet and dried several times, for it is exasperating to have snaps or hooks nicely sewed on and then find after it is laundered that it has shrunk.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

BOOSTS HER HOME TOWN.

ON the occasion of a recent visit to an interesting western city which bore all the earmarks of being in the midst of a boom I was greatly surprised on being presented to the secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce to find myself clasping the hand of a pretty young woman.

She excited my interest and curiosity, and I plied my friends with questions about her. The townspeople were only too eager to gratify my curiosity.

With a pride that I soon felt was entirely justified one of the leading business men of the town told me the story of the girl whose job is to make her home town the industrial center of the state and whose desire and ambition is to make its power felt throughout the country.

Mrs. R. had been a teacher in the public school. At the beginning of the war her fiancé, who was one of the rising young business men of the town, volunteered for active service. When he was ordered abroad they were married and, at her husband's request, she resigned from the school and took charge of his business.

Her husband was killed in action, and in settling up the estate his brother came into possession of the business. That left Mrs. R. [illegible] up. She didn't care to go back to school work, but she was restless and wanted an occupation.

About this time the city was brought into disrepute with the entire country through a series of crimes committed by an organized band. Although some of the members of the band were caught and convicted, the affair had a disturbing effect on the prosperity of the town.

Merchants, hotel proprietors, heads of the various industries, and amusement enterprises were alarmed, and while there was a great deal of talk about reorganizing the Chamber of Commerce and inaugurating "booster" clubs nothing definite was done toward counteracting the town's bad reputation.

Mrs. R. became intensely interested in the movement to boost the town, and presenting herself before a delegation of the leading citizens offered her services gratis for a period of six months. Her offer was accepted and she was appointed secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

During that six months she worked day and night, carrying out plans that brought visitors and an increased volume of business to the city. She organized separately all the different business interests and won their entire co-operation with her schemes.

At the end of six months she had stirred up so much enthusiasm among the citizens for the town's welfare that she was asked to remain in office and was voted a generous salary.

In two years of hard but pleasant work Mrs. R. helped the town to live down its unsavory reputation and now it is one of the booming cities in the state. Its schools and other public institutions are conducted on such a high plane of efficiency and economy that they are the envy of the neighboring cities, and the parks and driveways draw a stream of visitors from the entire countryside. Every celebrity, however great, who visits that section of the country stops at the town, and people from all over the state flock to any public demonstration given there.

Is it any wonder that her townspeople are proud of Mrs. R.? I am sure that her story will be a source of inspiration to any girl who works. It was to me.

Camera for Soldier.

"May I intrude in your corner for a fraction of space? I am a soldier down south where there is lovely scenery and I do not like to leave without some remembrance of it. Do you think some one among your readers has a small camera I could have? I would be most grateful. V. E. S."

Is there some one who can gratify the wish of this soldier?

Overalls Best Clothes.

"On account of illness and death in my family I am unable to provide much needed suits for my sons, who are same size, 10 years old. I would greatly appreciate a suit for each of them, which they don't possess. Overalls are their best clothes. I will gladly pay postage. I live in the country. B. S. S."

Would Like a Sweater.

"If you have any friend in your corner who can spare a sweater, I would be very thankful for it, as I am sick and can't afford to buy one, and I am a widow. I have been sick for a couple of weeks, and I have nothing to wear but a winter coat. I can wear a small size. MRS. M. P."

Unable to Work.

"I am a poor girl just out of the hospital from a very bad operation and am in need of clothes so bad. I wonder if some one has some clothes they can't wear they would give me. I won't be able to go to work for a long time. I am in need of some dresses, size 40, and some stockings. I live with my mother, but she can't buy me anything, as she is in need herself. MISS E. S."

IF WE COULDN'T TELL A LIE

How Miss Sterling became a better file clerk—

She was a bright, clever girl and she was ambitious. But she had really never had a chance to make good.

She had taken the place of the regular file clerk who had left to get married. She had taken it without any special training, or in fact without any training at all. It had been hard to keep things running smoothly. Too many letters were being lost or misl-id.

One day Miss Sterling sat down to think it over. Finally, she made a decision. She was going to study filing—she was going to know more about it than anybody else in the office.

She went about it in the right way. She took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. She learned the fundamental principles that underlie all filing systems.

How the skies brightened! Miss Sterling wasn't guessing any more. She knew! There were no more lost letters—no impatient executives.

Naturally, everybody noticed the improvement in the Filing Department. Miss Sterling noticed it, too, in her Friday pay envelope.

Today she is Filing Supervisor and earning more than $30 a week.

She puts it this way:

"Every file clerk and in fact every girl who wants to better her position ought to study filing—just as a physician studies medicine or a lawyer studies law. The work is pleasant and it holds a wonderful future for bright, ambitious girls and women.

"The Illinois School of Filing is owned and managed by Library Bureau. They teach you not only the theory of filing, but also give a lot of actual practice in all kinds of filing systems.

"This school is located at 116 S. Michigan Ave., and the principal is Miss Gladys C. Bridges. Drop in to see her some day."

The Best That's Said of Anything, Applies With Renewed Energy to the A-B-C

For several weeks our advertisements have good-naturedly "borrowed" the time-tried slogans of America's leading manufacturers of non-competitive products.

"ASK THE WOMAN WHO OWNS ONE"
"THE STEINWAY OF WASH DAY"
"LET THE A-B-C DO YOUR WORK"
"MY MOTHER USES AN A-B-C"; "I WISH MINE DID!"
"HAVE YOU AN A-B-C IN YOUR HOME?"
"TIME TO RE-TIRE"
"EVENTUALLY, WHY NOT NOW?"

Only because the A-B-C LEADS among washing machines do these nationally advertised slogans of America's leading products so aptly fit.

LET YOUR ELECTRIC WASHER be an A-B-C. Be satisfied with nothing less.

More than 60 electrical appliance dealers in and near Chicago are equipped to give you an A-B-C demonstration on your next wash day. We will send the name of the nearest one to you. Or call at our convenient loop store for a demonstration.

JUNE 20, 1920.

The Theaters

At the Parkway hotel the other day, Hale Hamilton sold his output of plays for the next five years to John Golden, producer of "Lightnin'," "3 Wise Fools," "Dear Me," etc. The first comedy, which is completed, has Viola Brothers Shore as collaborator, and is called "Her Father's House." Another in course of construction is entitled "Once Aboard the Lugger," though it is said it has nothing else to do with the W. W. Jacobs story.

Other new investments by Mr. Golden for next season are "Romeo and Jane," a fantasy by Edward Childs Carpenter; "Heaven," a comedy by Austin Strong; "The Wheel," by Winchell Smith; "Bumbo, the Clown," by Laurence Gibson, and a magic Western version of "The Henrietta," employing William H. Crane and "Buster" Keaton, a funny young acrobate from the varieties. Mr. Golden is said to be deferring his contemplated establishment of Chicago as a producing center.

In "Don't Be Afraid," Avery Hopwood's new comedy, Ernest Truex will appear first as a boy, of 14, later as one of 17, still later as a young man of 20, and finally as a middle-aged fellow of 25.

William Anthony McGuire, the Chicago dramatist and author of several plays dealing with political, sociological, and ethical problems, wrote much of the stage version of "The Story of fire in it; moving picture managers have offered $110,000 for the right to film it, and it has been played 300 times in New York.

"Richard Bruce" is said to be a pseudonym, hiding the identity of the author of "The Miracle Maid" from a more or less curious public. It takes a brave man to admit a libretto these days. Victor Herbert, the composer, is coming on within a week or two to help George Lederer stage the new piece at the Colonial.

"Aphrodite" is to shock us Sept. 1 at the Auditorium, and for ten weeks thereafter. "Mecca," the new Oscar Asche spectacle, will reach here Jan. 26, the day the Chicago Opera company leaves for New York. At least, such is the assurance given by Messrs. Comstock and Gest, the reliable impresarios.

G. P. Huntley, an English comedian popular in America, is to return to the United States next season under Charles Dillingham's direction in a new musical play called "Lord Willie."

Mrs. Shelley Hull has been engaged by the Messrs. Shubert to stage the new comedy "Crucible," of which her brother-in-law, Henry Hull, will be the star. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Hull has been notably successful in the stage direction of plays for amateur organizations.

"Heartbreak House," a recently published but as yet unacted play by Bernard Shaw, will be presented in New York by the Theater Guild, the producers of St. John Irvine's "John Ferguson" and "Jane Clegg." The Guild also considers a play by the English novelist, J. D. Beresford—his first.

Carlton Miles, dramatic critic of the Minneapolis Journal, laughs, in his column, at Chicago's enthusiasm over "The Sweetheart Shop." It is a typical "Chicago success," he says, "a sublimated burlesque," and "a triumph of conventionality." Mr. Miles doubts that it will be sent to New York City.

"Come Seven!" is the frolicsome title of Octavus Roy Cohen's dramatization of the Negro characters in his Saturday Evening Post stories. It is being performed in the New York suburbs by Arthur Aylesworth, Earle Fox, Gail Kane, Suzanne Willa, Lucille La Verne and others under George Broadhurst's management.

Mr. Ziegfeld advertises angrily in the New York newspapers that he "will sound the death knell" of all imitators of the Follies—meaning the various Whiris and Frolics in general, and George White's "Scandals" in particular. Mr. White's latest revue is a great success and is playing to $25,000 a week in a theater owned by Mr. Ziegfeld's partner, Mr. Dillingham. The titular price of the Follies this year is $4.40, by the way, not $5.50 as threatened.

A. H. Woods is about to produce "Ladies' Night" by Avery Hopwood and Charlton Andrews, the latter an interesting author of serious books about the drama. "Ladies' Night" illustrates a confusion of the genders in a Turkish bath instead of a bedroom.

Mr. Woods has twenty-one new plays in sight, ranging from poetic fantasy to bath-house farce. An interesting experiment will be a production of the late C. M. S. McLellan's play, "The Jury of Fate," which the late Sam S. Shubert was planning at the time of his death.

Curfew sounded last night for "Golden Days" at the Blackstone and "Hitchy-Koo" at the Colonial. The first will take Miss Patricia Collinge to New York next season; Mr. Hitchcock will soon have a new "Hitchy-Koo."

Jack Osterman, the precocious offspring of J. J. Rosenthal, manager of the Woods theater, moves tomorrow from the Majestic to the State-Lake for his final week in western vaudeville. Presently he will begin a tour of the east at Keith's Royal theater in New York.

ANTONIO SCOTTI AS "SCARPIA"

Mr. Scotti will begin the Ravinia season next Saturday night, singing the rôle of Baron Scarpia in "Tosca."

Susan Lennox." He is not, however, mentioned as collaborator with George V. Hobart on the playbill. The drama was treated by the New York critics with great disrespect.

David Belasco's first production next season will be made in August at the Empire theater in New York and will be a comedy named "Call the Doctor." The players will be Miss Fania Marinoff, Miss Janet Beecher, Miss Charlotte Walker, Miss Jane Houston, Mrs. Tom Wise, Phillip Merrivale, William Morris, and John Amory.

The reunion of Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper resulted last week in two new plays, "The Bat," by Mrs. Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, and Miss Margaret Mayo's "Seeing Things." "The Bat" was done in Washington by Miss May Vokes, Miss Effie Elsler, Miss Sue MacManany, Kenneth Hunter and Ernest Stallard.

"Poker Ranch" faltered last week, and was about to hit the cypress trail, when, suddenly, trade picked up so definitely that it changed its plans. A telephone conference on Friday between the managers and Mr. Erlanger in New York resulted in the withdrawal of the announcement of its ending, and it will stay, perhaps, until August, when "The Storm," with Miss Helen MacKellar, will come to the Olympic. "The Storm" has a forest fire in it; moving picture managers have offered $110,000 for the right to film it, and it has been played 300 times in New York.

Edith Mason

Miss Mason will return to Ravinia Sunday night, June 27, to sing the title rôle in "Manon."

MISS FLORENCE EASTON PHOTO © MISHKIN

Miss Easton will sing the title rôle in Puccini's "Tosca" at the opening of Ravinia's opera season next Saturday night. She is an English soprano who has made the greater part of her fame in America. With her husband, she escaped from Germany when war was declared by a series of romantic flights.

George White's Scandals' Chorus Dressed in Paint and Little Else

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—One of the minor scandals in "The Scandals of 1920," which is the second of the series of summer shows inaugurated a year ago by George White, is a song entitled "Swat the Profiteer." To illustrate the point of the song six of the more decorative members of the ensemble skip out near the footlights carrying six high chairs, with foot rests such as the bootblacks use. Mounting the chairs, they proceed to sing of the newer economies that are being practiced in their set, including the painting of socks upon the limbs of the new poor. While they sing a second sextet, with paint brushes and pots, decorate their ankles and calves with polka dot and lattice work designs in varied colors, and when the job is finished those who had appeared most naked at the start of the song romp away as completely clothed as need be for the rest of the evening.

Being a good idea, Mr. White tries it again. This time the song is called "On My Mind the Whole Night Long," and relates the troubles of a young somnambulist who just could not sleep after he had met and been charmed by a new sweetheart. Under canopies on the middle stage are posed four statuesque beauties in shining tights extending from their slippered feet to their waists, one in green, one in orange, one in black, and another in blue. With the spotlight turned on them, they appear to be encased in the brightest of patent leather. Then they step down, and just as they leave the stage each reaches down, draws her hand across her thigh, and turns it palm outward toward the audience. It is smeared with paint. A novelty in chorus lady decorations is thus achieved that is fraught with possibilities. If the girls escape lead poisoning and do not object to the smearing, the painted chorus will probably become a popular feature of most productions—until Dr. Straton and the vice squad get after them.

Otherwise Mr. White's "Scandals of 1920" are quite like those that he introduced in 1919. His burlesques are better and more timely, including more or less amusing travesties directed at the heads of the profiteering landlords, the politicians, and their foolish conventions, the Mexican bandits, the shortage of apartments, and the aerial café that rises three miles above the limit and then throws wide open the doors and takes the lock off the stock of case goods.

The principals include Ann Pennington, who dances a lot and sings a little; Lester Allen, an eccentric dancer of amazing agility; George Bickel and Mr. White himself. Having become the proprietor of the show, Mr. White does not work very hard, or very much, but enough to get his name in the program and keep faith with the advertisements.

"The Rise and Fall of Susan Lenox" is the first of the summer dramas, Susan, as those familiar with the posthumous novel of the late David Graham Phillips recall, is one of those heroines who proves that though a girl may be down she is never out. Being a child of sin, as the saying is, she is reared successfully by foster parents until she is 18. Then, believing in her great innocence that a promise of marriage is as binding in a summer house in Sutherland, Ind., as it could possibly be in a parlor with all the lights on, and the family just beyond the portieres to serve as witnesses, she realizes her mistake when it is too late. Her father, being a stickler for the conventions, insists that she shall marry a drunken farmer to save her honor, which she does, but that night she packs her trousseau and runs away.

After that Susan joins a theatrical troupe, and, when she is pursued by those who seek to take her back to Indiana escapes a second time and goes to Cincinnati. But the men she meets in Candidate Harding's state are just as wicked as those she left at home, and she is as hard put to it as a Mack Sennett comedienne to escape her pursuers. Fortunately, after she is engaged as a fashion model in a department store she meets an honest man in the youthful proprietor and achieves matrimony and financial independence in the last act.

It is a George V. Hobart drama and is described as a "pilgrimage," G. V. being strong for allegory since he wrote "Experience." It is a frank reminder of those good old melodramas in which Bertha, the beautiful sewing machine operator, and Nellie, who spent such time as she could command after escaping the villains of the cast in posing as a model for cloaks, had their own troubles with the cast, and will probably make a better movie than it does a play. Meantime it will serve to convince the summer tourists that these here city plays that are so much talked about are in effect no better than those they see in South Bend and St. Paul.

MONEY! MONEY! is the all important ? of the minute. What chance is there without it? It has often been said it is not everything. But nearly. Money and love are the leading factors in "TOMORROW'S PRICE" at the WOODS, CHICAGO'S UTMOST THEATRE. Do you know that the Government offers money for Prohibition infringements, thus making the country THE LAND OF THE FEE? When TAYLOR HOLMES, as Honest John Stetson in "TOMORROW'S PRICE," stands by his friends and bets his last dollar on Stetson Tire Stocks, he saves them from bankruptcy. Health is a wonderful asset, but what good is it without money? See "TOMORROW'S PRICE" and be convinced of the importance of the mighty dollar and a girl's love. WOODS CIVILIZED PRICES save you money. 50c to $2.50.

IF the honest working man doesn't soon awaken to the fact that the little bolshevik serpent he nourishes in his breast has pizen in its fangs, it won't be the fault of the fillums. Right conscientiously the movies are and have been endeavoring to point out the difference between a cause and a crank. "Unchartered Channels" is their latest object lesson.

It seems a terrible thing for a rich plumber to cut off his one and only son with a brief $100, doesn't it? This, however, is what happens to Timothy Webb, who, as impersonated by Mr. Warner doesn't mind it a bit. In fact, when further details of the will are read me becomes quite intrigued with the deceased's sense of humor, and laughs long and heartily.

Then just because he is really a worthy young man though born a rich man's son, he dons overalls and starts to work up from the bottom of the plumbing business. This is all quite sub rosa, of course, which enables him to get in with the bolsheviks who are trying to ruin the business.

After the amazing manner of all good movie heroes, he confounds the confoundest, rescues the philanthropic and orphaned heiress from their clutches and, by the end of the picture is able to wink merrily into dad's pictured eyes and tell the old chap that for once he'd been a lee-tle bit mistaken.

Not a bad picture by any means. There are some clever people in the cast. Some. And the photography is good. But Mr. Warner's sprightliness seems a trifle forced. You suspect him of yearning for the good old easy chair and slippers.

Remember little Virginia Lee Corbin and Ben Alexander? They're soon to appear in vaudeville, I'm told.

Louise Huff, whom you haven't seen for quite a while, is busily at work on "Dangerous Paradise" which she is making for Selznick. They do say she wears a bathing suit in it that was never surpassed in the Mack Sennett ranks. Does her conscience approve?

Charles Ray recently received a letter from George M. Cohan, in which the writer expressed great joy that the former was to appear in the picturization of the play "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway."

Eugene O'Brien wanted to be a doctor. Probably less lives are lost this way.

MISS BETH ELLIOTT in "THE PASSING SHOW" GARRICK

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

MISS MARY: Earle Williams is in California at the present time, I believe. Address him at Hollywood, in care of Vitagraph.

K. O. L.: I thought that "Twenty-Three and a Half Hours' Leave" was a mighty fetching little picture. The photographs of both Miss May and Mr. MacLean have appeared in the rotogravure section. What a shame you should have missed them! Thanks for your kindly letter.

A REGULAR: All right, I'll take your little hammer and do your knocking for you. There is absolutely no doubt but that a number of stars—not all of them, thank heavens!—do purposely stipulate that those supporting them shall be allowed no publicity. Of course, these people queer their own game, as time has proven in many cases. I'm not saying that the celebrities you mention belong to this class of screen hogs.

CHARLES W. W.: Little Clarine Seymour died recently, following an operation. She was a darling, wasn't she?

ADMIRER OF GOOD PICTURES: The book you mention has not to my knowledge been adapted for the screen.

BENNETT T.: Your criticism was a fair one. Thanks for your interest.

BRICK MOULDER: I've never been so flattered in my life. Please tell your friends—you say "superiors"—that to stand just "between the film and your emotions just like a teacher between intelligence" is an honor I had never hoped to attain. I wasn't crowded out of the paper—just took a leave of absence. It's grand to be missed! Marguerite Clark lives at 50 Central Park West, New York City. (I'm glad you sent me a letter instead of a brick.)

EVELYN C.: If only I could say that I know you would sell your story! That question, however, you will have to be content to allow to rest in the laps of the gods. I wish I knew some one who could tell me where I could sell a story I have written, but in my case nobody knows, and nobudda seems to care! Shake!

DIXIE W.: We used to be good friends"! Well, aren't we still good friends? It certainly seems natural to see your funny little signature again. I love the verse you sent me and am going to stick it in my column some day when I have space. If I may?

H. G. V. S.: I'm not vurr' good at guessing, but I think I know who you are. You should have told me before how Peter frightened you and I would have gone out of my way to have made you better acquainted with him. He's a darling when you know him. And he certainly takes to the country like some things take to him.

A. M. FAN: Why, you little artist, you. I bet it took you hours to make that frame. I certainly have the most merciful readers in the world. Thank you.

JAY DEE SEE: Am I sure I'm back? Well, I think I am. Awfully nice of you to write the letter you did. Your retreats are always graceful, but why beat such a hasty one?

Carlton and Belmont:

"They tell me your brother is in the hospital."

"Yes, he bet Maloney he could lean further out of a window—and he won."

"Do you ever play cards for money?"

"Yes, but I never get it."

"How's your mother-in-law?"

"She's improving, but very slowly."

"Well, I'm glad to hear that."

"Why is it that firemen seem to lack enthusiasm?"

"Because they're always throwing cold water on everything."

"Do you enjoy good health?"

"Sure; who doesn't?"

Frank Farron:

"To me a widow is just like a window."

"How so?"

"When I get near either I always look out."

"I'm trying to get a divorce."

"Why do you want to get a divorce?"

"Because I'm married."

"Women are certainly fond of clothes."

"Then why don't they wear more?"

"I got my wife through advertising."

"Then, you'll admit that advertising pays?"

"I'll admit that it brings results."

"Last night I wandered in my mind."

"Well, at least you couldn't stray far."

Exhibition of Art Students' League Shows Versatility

By Louise James Bargelt

LAST week at the Art institute the Art Students' league exhibition opened together with the collection of students' work from the Art institute school.

The exhibition of the Art Students' league is a much better and more representative collection of paintings and etchings than last year's. There is considerable variety in the exhibit and much that is very excellently rendered.

T. J. Keane, formerly head of the Art institute school, has two tigers' heads, unique bits of animal portrayal. Archie F. Hurford has a mural sketch which possesses a charm of harmony and poetic softness. Hurford also shows a picturesque glimpse of the dunes.

K. Irving Manoir has a number of pleasing landscapes, among which might be mentioned especially "The Golden Pool." Other agreeable landscapes are T. W. Cunningham's "March Day," Emile Walters' "Meadow," Robert Whitmore's "Licking Valley," Morris Topchevsky's "Gray Day," and Danny Webster's "Call of the Woods."

There are a number of etchings, Y. E. Soderber's "Bridge Over the Creek" and "The Dead Sentinel" among the best. Minnie Raines has a very summery piece of work in "My Summer Porch," while Mr. Ottmar G. Gaul has some fantastic and decorative pieces, including the "Carnival" and the "Poet's Dream."

Miriam Pendleton shows several portraits, one a miniature portrait of an old lady which is good, and another, a modern "Mona Lisa," which is a trifle too big an undertaking—to be undertaken really.

Henry A. Mackh has two batiks, unpretentious pieces with unusual designs; M. Gladys Rockmore a Chinese night which is bizarre and oddly done; Esther Roeth a portrait of herself which is admittedly very pretty, and Glen A. Mitchell a portrait of a girl in a dark coat and hat which is vividly strong.

At the present writing the students' exhibit is not hung sufficiently for any detailed review. There is work there from every one of the school departments. Portrait work, decorative work, oils, charcoal, water color, all are represented.

After much anticipation the Muchas finally arrived at the institute, and now the huge mural decorations which are to be presented to the city of Prague by Charles R. Crane and the artist are on the grand staircase.

These decorations will remain a month or more here and are really the most remarkable works of the kind which have ever been shown in the city.

There are five of them, though more have been finished. They portray scenes from the story of the Slav people. In them, reality symbolism and mythology mingle, sometimes a trifle bewildering to the unerudite onlooker. There is the Festival of Svantevitova, in which there is a glorious mixture of incident, much of it dramatic in the extreme—an instance of this, the sight of guests rising in the air.

Another decoration, colorful and taken from Slav history, is the picture of Korand, back in 1419, exhorting the peasants to give their assistance to the city of Prague.

Much effort has been spent on the costuming and figure painting in the picture, which shows John Huss preaching to a large congregation, the queen and the ladies of the court listening to the exhortations of the speaker.

Mr. Mucha has done a great deal of decorative work. He first won recognition through his posters in Paris. He has been in Chicago several times before and taught here for one year at the Art institute. These pictures should be seen. They are marvelous in their way.

The print room at the institute is an interesting place now. There are some prints by Sir Francis Seymour Haden—those unforgettable glimpses of the Thames banks. There are also a few etchings by Lepere and some Whistler etchings.

At the Arts club the paintings by Mondzain are still on exhibit and the water colors by Awa Tsireh. There are also water colors by Jan Matulka and line drawings by Coomaraswamy.

Exhibitions at the galleries:

Scotti, Easton in "Tosca" to Open Ravinia's Season

By Charles H. Gabriel, Jr.

RAVINIA will open its 1920 season of summer opera next Saturday night with the most notable roster of artists in its history. That Chicago will respond to the unflagging zeal and efforts of Mr. Louis Eckstein, president of the company, is evidenced by the advance sale of tickets which opened to the public yesterday, and which indicates a record breaking attendance.

For the two opening performances, Mr. Eckstein has scheduled a list of artists of world-wide fame. Puccini's "Tosca," given in its entirety, will be the initial attraction, with Antonio Scotti in his famous impersonation of the Baron Scarpia, Florence Easton in the title rôle and Morgan Kingston as Cavaradossi. Gennaro Papi will conduct.

"Manon" to Be Second.

The second opera, to be given next Sunday night will be Massenet's "Manon," with Edith Mason-Polacco and Charles Hackett in the roles of the two lovers, Leon Rothier as the elder des Grieux and Richard Hageman at the baton.

The complete casts of the first two performances are as follows:

Saturday night, June 26:

TOSCA.

Tosca	Florence Easton
Mario Cavaradossi	Morgan Kingston
Baron Scarpia	Antonio Scotti
Cesare Angelotti	Louis D'Angelo
A Sacristan	Paolo Ananian
Spoletta	Giordano Paltrinieri

Conductor, Gennaro Papi.

Sunday night, June 27:

MANON.

Chevalier des Grieux	Charles Hackett
Comte des Grieux	Leon Rothier
Lescaut	Graham Marr
Guillot	Paolo Ananian
De Bretigny	Louis D'Angelo
Manon	Edith Mason

Conductor, Richard Hageman.

Chicago Symphony Orchestra Engaged.

As in the past, the Chicago Symphony orchestra has been engaged for the entire season of operas and concerts. Operas will be given on Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights, and concerts on Monday nights and Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday afternoons.

Although not within the city limits, Ravinia's operatic and concert schedule will be operated in accordance with the daylight savings plan. Therefore, the opening of "Tosca" will be the more realistic since the setting sun will illumine the staged version of the tragedy, which, according to the story, begins during the day.

Orchestral Music Talks.

A new feature of the Ravinia programs this summer will be the educational and explanatory talks on orchestral music given just before the children's concert on Thursday afternoons, July 1 and 8, by Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer.

Mrs. Oberndorfer (Anne Shaw Faulkner) has for many years conducted such classes for both adults and children. Her talks will be illustrated at the piano. The classes will begin at 2:40 o'clock with a short community "sing," directed by Miss Florence Crane, and will close in time to attend the Chicago Symphony concerts which will be conducted by Richard Hageman.

A cable was received yesterday announcing that Juan Manen, the noted Spanish violinist, will arrive in New York early next fall, for his first American tour. He is considered the greatest violinist of Spain and has had success in both Europe and South America.

Life of Maud Powell.

A book of Maud Powell's life and work is being prepared by her husband, H. Godfrey Turner, 1400 Broadway, New York. He is appealing to musicians to send an account of any incident or permit the examination of letters of other memoranda throwing light on her career.

Negotiations in progress for the last six months have been consummated with Arturo Toscanini, Italy's great conductor, and with La Scala orchestra of Milan for an American tour of ten weeks, beginning in January, 1921. It is estimated that the tour will cost approximately $250,000 and a group of underwriters, including prominent easterners, has been obtained. Toscanini last came to America in 1908 as the conductor of the Metropolitan Opera house and remained until 1915, when he returned to Italy.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Echoes of Our Roman Holiday; Now Comes Opera

By Mme. X.

LOW on the sands and loud on the stones the last wheel echoes away and the big function that nominated Senator Harding as Republican presidential candidate passes into history. If this serious looking son of Ohio wins in next November's election I think that it will be the first time in our history that a United States senator has become a president of this pretty, sizable democracy.

That the convention was regarded by many of those who came to look on as a great show, a Roman holiday, was evident. In the early, dull days of the gathering, when proceedings dragged, complaints were loud and long.

"To think," one fashionably dressed New York woman was overheard exclaiming in a hot, outpouring crowd, "to think that I'm paying $40 a day in hotel bills just to be bored like this!"

Ye gods and little fishes! Those New Yorkers have money to burn. Said one of our richest citizens in idle converse with a bunch of Gothamites:

"I give my secretary a leeway of twenty-five thousand a year. Up to that figure I don't ask any accounting."

"Really?" politely responded a Wall street king. "I give mine a hundred thousand."

A collapsed balloon would be a plump corporosity compared to the mental state of that aforesaid Chicagoite. When will the enormously rich learn that it is old fashioned, out of date, and quaint to boast of wealth? Get it, by all means; keep it, by all means; spend it, by all means; but don't prate about it—at least, not just now. The only folk who have a right to such boasting are the garbage collectors, sewer diggers, and general housework girls whose daily or weekly stipend has increased to really fabulous riches compared to their pay ten years ago.

More Were Expected.

Although the city seemed full enough the week of the Republican powwow, it is rumored that the attendant throng lacked a hundred thousand of coming up to what was expected of it. Many of the outlying hotels, whose managers, expecting a big influx of strangers, had turned out old customers, were left half empty, and of the thousands of houses and apartments offered at high prices to the agencies looking after the accommodation of conventionites, only a very few were taken.

The coming Democratic convention, which convenes next week at San Francisco, will probably not be so distinctly social and fashionable an affair as was the Republican gatherings.

The only personal friend of this col., who, as far as we know, is going to attend the Democratic gathering is Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank. She is going in a double capacity; to report its doings for a Chicago evening paper and to work for the nomination of William G. McAdoo, who, however, has just announced again and more emphatically that he will not be a candidate. Reporting convention proceedings isn't all beer and skittles for a tyro. "Getting your stuff through," as the phrase goes, requires much mental and bodily agility, as there are never enough wires to accommodate the special reporters of a big affair, whether it be war or politics.

Our Invigorating Climate.

Chicago climate was at its best last week: cordial, violent, anxious to please everybody, and, therefore, alas! suiting none. So it is with small regret that that infinitessimally minute portion of the city's inhabitants known as "society" is preparing to disperse to seek other climates—and, between you and me, they'll look far before they strike an all round better one. Where else can you find such healthy hot weather so quickly changed to bracing cool breezes as here? It's as invigorating as a cold bath spray or shower after wallowing in a 100 degree hot bath.

Seeking summer coolth under ideal conditions, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Blair are moving their family and household to one of those luxurious so-called camps in the Adirondacks where gilt edged "roughing it" is practiced, and of all the ways of healing city worn nerves and restoring the balance of life, this seems to me the best—or, at least, next the best.

The best is a camping trip in the Rocky mountains, where you sleep night after night in the open, with the gorgeous stars blinking down at you through the softly swaying pine trees. Your days are spent in walking, climbing, fishing, during which you breathe in big, lungfuls of nose burning ozone, while your eyes drink in the repose taught by high, stark mountains, deep, dark valleys, and the shadows of floating clouds.

Arthur Meeker has leased his steam yacht Victoria to Sir Thomas Lipton for July. This well known Britisher is coming over for the international yacht races, to be sailed next month. This arrangement postpones until August the trip the Meekers planned to the upper St. Lawrence waters, to which they originally dedicated July. They will combine fishing and hunting with their yachting, and among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Morris Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gillette, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perkins. As Arthur Meeker is renowned as a royal host, those who compose the party are full of anticipations of cheerful and interesting experiences.

Ravinia to Open.

Meanwhile, for those who stay in or near Chicago there are many mitigations of their lot, not the least of which is the summer opera offered by the Ravinia company at Ravinia park. This is an enterprise unique of its kind in this country, an artistic treat which makes a summer within reach of it a pure delight to music lovers. To sit in that vast, open pavilion, with the moon shining on the trees in the park, bats swooping far overhead, a soft summer breeze lazily wafting the perfume of flowers hither and yon, while an excellent company and orchestra, both composed of well known artists, presents "Manon," "Tosca," "Thais," and other favorites, is an experience not to be had anywhere else in the world.

This summer's season opens next Saturday with "Manon," and as the management reports all the boxes taken it promises to be a successful one, though Dame Weather has a good deal to say about that.

A warm summer evening there is a great sight. From all the surrounding region motors stream toward Ravinia park. The grounds are alive with them. A big night finds them spilling over from the confines of the large parking space allowed them and hugging the borders of Sheridan road for a distance in either direction. The throngs of well dressed people that come by them and by the electric and steam cars that stop at the entrance to the park look like members of a country club at a social gathering; the women in soft, fluffy summer attire, the men in flannels or Palm Beach suits.

Not Self-Supporting.

Like all grand opera, this is not a self-supporting enterprise, but is partly sustained by generous, public spirited citizens of that region. Louis Eckstein, who is president of the company and chairman of the board, devotes a large part of his time to it, and pays for an office force in the interests of the Ravinia opera. Charles T. Boynton, James A. Patten, and Ward W. Willitts are vice presidents; George R. Jones is secretary; Percy B. Eckhart is treasurer; and Arthur M. Lowrie is manager, while among the directors are Charles G. Dawes, N. Landon Hoyt, Benjamin H. Marshall, Harold F. McCormick, John C. Shaffer, John R. Washburn, and C. P. Wheeler.

If grand opera doesn't become bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh it won't be for lack of a zealous attempt to make it so on the part of a group of well known citizens. For instance, in spite of the heat and thunder storms of last Wednesday afternoon fifty or more of the Friends of Opera responded to Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman's call for a meeting to discuss plans to make next winter's opera such a great success that those devoted supporters of it, who for ten years have made up the deficit, would be willing to continue their generosity. Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, whose annual contributions to it have run into the hundreds of thousands, are ready to continue their generosity if they become convinced that the Chicago public and lovers of music really want grand opera, but not otherwise. And other supporters are with them in this.

The Friends of Grand Opera.

The Friends of Grand Opera sprang into being to act as a sort of link between the board of directors of the opera and the great, dumb, slow, unseeing, unresponsive public, who nevertheless must be fed music, art, letters, and learning, or stalk into an apathy of materialism. At this meeting an informal advance report from Harold McCormick of what next winter's opera would be was given out and Mrs. Geo. A. McKinlock was made chairman of the box selling committee; Mrs. Scriven of the seat selling ditto, while Mrs. Hubert Burnham was put in charge of the publicity for the F. O. G. O.s.

A drive for new members for this organization is under way and, as it promises to become a very live factor in the community, with many interesting reunions, it is probable that its membership will increase many fold.

Among those at Wednesday's meeting, in spite of the lateness of the season, were Mrs. William Odell, Mrs. Heaton Owsley, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Peabody, Mrs. Edward Swift, Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. David Cook, Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, Mrs. Scriven, Miss Mary Waller, Miss Ethel Wrenn, Harold G. Howard, Arthur Bissell, and Herman Waldeck—the last named being treasurer of the society.

The East Indian Ball.

As great generals always plan their campaigns years ahead, so Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, in spite of political preoccupations, is already busy with projects for the big East Indian ball she is organizing for next winter to raise money for her especial charity, the Chicago Lying-In hospital. The date set is Dec. 10, the place is the Coliseum.

She is now shaping her committee, among whom will be the Mesdames Franklin Smith, Joseph G. Coleman, James Keeley, Arnold Chapman, and Miss Lolita Armour. A preliminary meeting was held Thursday morning in the rooms of the College club, 154 North Michigan avenue.

Lyman Gage Home Sold.

The purchase of the old Lyman J. Gage house on North State street by George F. Porter is a matter of interest to Chicago society. For several years Mr. Porter has wandered here and there and his friends have wondered whether he was going to select New York or Washington as an abiding place. To have him after all settle down where he was born and grew up is a matter of satisfaction in a community as full of change and movement as ours. He has chosen for his residence a fine old house of the vintage of the eighties, when they built large rooms with high ceilings and delighted in black walnut woodwork and conservatories. He is planning to remodel it sufficiently to bring it up to date, but not to destroy its characters, thereby observing the admonition which warns us not to put new wine in old bottles.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS.

MRS. LEONARD ELKINS

Mrs. Leonard Elkins of 436 East Fortieth street is secretary of the Protestant Women's National association, which will give the fourth annual "donation party" Tuesday afternoon at the Protestant Home for Children, 6323 Yale avenue. Visitors will thus have an opportunity to inspect the home and leave gifts for the storeroom as practical expressions of their interest.

MRS. WILLIAM MONROE WRIGHT PHOTO KOEHNE

Mrs. William Monroe Wright of Highland Park has given the use of her house and grounds for a garden party to be given Tuesday afternoon and evening by the Woman's club of Highland Park. An interesting program has been arranged by the committee in charge, and Mrs. William A. Alexander is managing the unique lighting effects. Mrs. Clarence N. Thayer is president of the club.

Oak Park Civic Club Ends Sixth Year of Activities

AMONG the leaders in civic work in Oak Park are members of the Neighborhood Civic club, which recently closed its sixth year of successful activity along several lines. A review of the work accomplished shows the results of consistent and enthusiastic effort.

Speakers of prominence appeared before the club, among them being Miss Jane Addams, George C. Sikes of the Chicago bureau of public efficiency, Mrs. Judith Lowenthal, second vice president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association; Mrs. Jessie K. White, president of the Sixth District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Kate Adams of the Woman's City club.

The national library bill, maternity bill No. 3258, and the recommendations made by the Teachers' federation all were indorsed by the members, and the club became a contributing member of the national child labor commission.

The work of the philanthropy committee included cooperative service with the local Red Cross visiting nurse, substantial gifts to the Associated Charities, the Park Ridge School for Girls, and the tornado sufferers of Melrose Park, as well as a contribution for the American memorial hospital in France. Committees of members made regular visits to the wounded men at Fort Sheridan and Drexel hospitals.

Under the direction of the literary auxiliary, study was made of American history, biographies of noted writers, dialect and book reviews.

The musical auxiliary program consisted of papers on the origin of music, evolution of the piano, history of the harp, biographies of American and European composers, vocal and instrumental music and interpretive dancing. A successful chorus of thirty voices was organized during the winter with Mrs. P. S. Hulbert as director. Upon reconvening in the autumn the roster of the chorus will be increased to fifty voices.

The club has a membership of 220 and lives up to its motto, "The Club That Does Things." The new officers are: President, Mrs. Richard C. Luepke; vice president, Mrs. Charles H. Harkins; recording secretary, Mrs. Frederick H. Bowen; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Wells F. Chamberlin; treasurer, Mrs. Charles A. Cohan.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Daily Religious Educational System Liked in Evanston

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

REV JOHN R. PICKELLS

EXPERIMENTS in week day religious education have been many during the last few years. Perhaps the most notable is that being carried on in Gary, Indiana, in connection with the Gary plan of public education. That, as well as the "Batavia Plan," was recently reviewed in the columns of THE TRIBUNE. New York, Toledo, Cleveland, and Grand Rapids are among the cities that are making experiments, or have adopted methods of carrying on religious training in closer connection with secular education, yet sufficiently separated to satisfy even the most ardent protagonist of "complete separation of church and state."

In Evanston there has been going on a similar experiment. Under the direction of the department of religious education of Northwestern university and the "Evanston Council of Religious Education," a system of education in religion on week days has been carried on during the spring term.

No denominational or sectarian teaching is attempted. The fundamentals of the Christian religion are taught to all alike. Attendance at the classes is entirely voluntary, and is permitted only upon written request of parents. The classes meet for a half hour daily before the regular school sessions in the school buildings. Teachers are drawn from church members who qualify, regular shcool teachers who volunteer, and who are paid for their services, and graduate students in Northwestern university. The expense is borne by citizens who are interetsed in the experiment.

The principes on which the lesson materials are chosen are given by the board as follows:

"1. That the material should acquaint the pupil with the Bible, and cultivate his interest in it.

"2. That it should lead the pupil to know and appreciate the life and personality of Jesus Christ.

"3. That it should instill in the mind and heart of the pupil the fundamental principles of religious life and conduct.

"4. That it should be free from sectarian interpretation."

Not only the Bible, but history, nature, biography, literature, art, and music are "source materials" for the lessons.

That the experiment is a success is shown by the fact that 1,000 pupils have enrolled and have attended regularly, although they have to be "at school" at 8:15 instead of 9 o'clock. This is about 75 per cent of the total enrollment of the grammar schools in the city. There are three classes in each of ten schools and two in another. There are thirty-two teachers enlisted in the work. These are prepared for their duties by weekly meetings at which materials and methods are discussed.

The Rev. Frank M. McKibben is executive secretary of the council and board. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, head of the department of religious education of N. U., is chairman of the board of religious education, and Dr. James F. Stifler, pastor of the First Baptist church of Evanston, is chairman of the executive board. Headquarters are at Hatfield hall, Northwestern university.

A number of towns along the north shore are considering plans for the adoption and adaptation of the week day religious education idea. Many other cities throughout the country are taking steps to have training in religion and morals receive greater emphasis through some such means.

St. Edmund's mission, Indiana avenue and Fifty-eighth street, celebrates today the fifteenth anniversary of its founding. Simultaneously the fifth anniversary of the priest in charge, the Rev. John R. Pickell, will be celebrated. A reception was given by the mission in the guild hall last Thursday, and special services will be held today to mark the anniversaries.

A feature of the Racine conference for church workers, to be held from July 6-16, will be a series of illustrated lectures on Anglican church history, to be delivered by the Rev. L. N. Caley of Philadelphia. The course will incude the American church. "The Church in Relation to Modern, Social, and Industrial Problems," will be the title of the lectures to be delivered by the Very Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, dean of All Saints' cathdral, Milwaukee, and secretary-elect of the department of social service of the Episcopal church.

"Echoes from the Cleveland Convention" will be the subject at a luncheon being given by the Chicago Church federation on Tuesday evening at the Stevens Grill. Dr. Herbert L. Willett, Thomas E. D. Bradley, the Rev. William E. Barton, the Rev. Thomas J. Bolger, and the Rev. R. Clarence Brown, who attended the convention of the federations of the churches, will speak.

The Rev. Harold L. Bowman has resigned the pastorate of the Woodlawn Park Presbyterian church to accept that of the First church, Portland, Ore.

Don't Let Rumors Keep You Away from Europe

Bad news travels fast and often gains something of badness in its travels. Much news has reached America about the unfavorable conditions for European travel and these accounts have, to put it mildly, done full justice to the situation. Strikes, revolutions, disordered train schedules, food shortages and high prices all have had due publicity.

There has been ample foundation for these stories. It is not to be supposed that the world can emerge from such an upheaval as the Great War and return at once to normal conditions. But—conditions are not so bad as they are supposed to be—surely not bad enough to warrant the postponement of a trip to Europe planned for this year, the most opportune time of all to see Europe.

Prices are higher, but this condition is not novel to Americans. Trains are not as regular as they were in 1914, but they are running. There are hotel rooms to be had, food in plenty, travel is comfortable and convenient, and there is much which Europe offers this year to make up for the occasional inconvenience.

The battlefields of France, Belgium and Italy are fast disappearing. Fields are being cultivated, trenches filled, ruins cleared away to make way for new buildings. Another year will have hidden the physical scars of the world's greatest struggle. Europe this year offers an opportunity to visitors which no one mindful of the greatest lesson in the world's history can afford to neglect.

The American Express Company's offices in Europe—thirty strong—are equipped and ready to assist you in every way on your trip to Europe this year.

A Typical Table for Industrial Lunchrooms

The Passing of the Dinner Pail

At a recent conference of manufacturers, held at Pittsburgh, executives agreed that employees did more and better work when a hot meal was obtainable at the company lunchrooms. The industrial lunch-room is here to stay. It is not a possibility—it is a necessity. Proprietors who have installed lunchrooms will tell you that their employees do more work and better work and that it reduces the labor turnover. We will show you how you can serve a good substantial meal for twenty or thirty cents. It will save your employees money at the present high cost of putting up lunches. Don't be the last in your community to install a Sani Lunchroom—be the first. It is a paying investment that will attract more help to your plant.

When You Buy Fixtures
Make a Permanent Investment

Don't buy old fashioned equipment that looks dilapidated in a short time. When you buy—buy for permanence. Certain types of equipment look all right for a few years and then detract from the appearance of store. Sani-Onyx Tops and Sani-Metal bases will stand the test of time in any climate. Even salt air, which rots most material, has no effect upon it. Don't wait until your competitor cuts in on your business. Beat him to it. Install Sani fixtures and you will soon notice an increased business. Call, phone, or write today.

Look For the Sani Metal Base

We advocate Sani-Metal on all bases for stools and tables because we have found after many years of experiments, that it will last a lifetime in any climate. The proper fusing of fine grained cast iron with a heavy coating of porcelain enamel produces a snow-white surface which is not only pleasing to the eye but is very easy to clean.

Old fashioned wooden bases no longer meet the requirements of the proprietor who wants modern equipment. Their greasy surfaces are a continual source of grief and annoyance. Dirt, dust, grease and other foreign substances cannot collect on Sani-Metal because there are no projections or crevices. Sani-Metal bases will look as well 10 years from now as the day they were installed. When you buy—buy for permanence.

Look For the Raised Rim

Sani-Onyx is a beautiful snow-white composition made by melting crushed onyx at a temperature of 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The process of manufacture renders the finished product absolutely impervious to water or other liquids or even the strongest acids.

The Raised Rim is an exclusive patented feature found only on Sani-Onyx tops. The nicely rounded edges make a perfectly finished table top—snow white, immaculately clean and sanitary. The extra thickness at the rim, imparts strength to the entire table and prevents spilled liquids from running off and soiling patrons' clothes. The Raised Rim also prevents chipping.

Boosters Unite to Link Paving Across Illinois

Roosevelt Road Work Is Pushed to Limit Near Wheaton

BY J. L. JENKINS.

THANKS to the uphill battle waged by determined highway boosters of Du Page and Kane counties, Chicago motorists may look forward to tooling merrily over continuous paved roads between Michigan avenue and the Mississippi river before the close of the fall season. Slowly, but surely, the unpaved stretches of Roosevelt road connecting the great western trunk line are disappearing under the drive of overtime construction work while both civic and industrial leaders all along the line wrestle with the problem of keeping material shipments moving.

Last week the Calumet Construction company began hauling material for work on the one mile Roosevelt road pavement link, beginning at the east bank of the Du Page river east of Wheaton. West of Wheaton grading has been finished to Geneva in the contract that will complete the state aid project and construction material is beginning to move toward the scene of early paving action. Officials of the Lincoln Highway association have joined the local forces in their effort to open the entire federal road for service this fall.

For the summer heavy Chicago travel to Wheaton and its neighboring golf clubs is being diverted over two detour options. The south detour leaves Roosevelt road to follow the Downers Grove road into the Starved Rock trail, thence west to the Joliet road and north to Twelfth street. On the north an excellent detour follows the Finley road to the Glen Oak Country club and turns west and south over the third rail tracks to Joliet street and thence south into Roosevelt road. From Wheaton West street has been put into good condition for travel to the Chicago Golf club.

Another national highway improvement directly benefiting Chicago motorists is the permanent marking of the Lincoln highway this summer. A fund of $20,000 has been raised by the highway association and the needed equipment, including enamel steel signs and hardwood posts, 3,000 of them, has been purchased. A marking crew will start working west from the Atlantic seaboard on July 1. Coast to coast markings will be completed before Oct. 1.

GASOLINE ALLEY—ACCURATE TO THE SECOND

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

His Price.

Five of us were mired on a clay road in Michigan when a resourceful young man in the party threw a cock of hay over a neighboring field fence to stuff under the wheels. It was no sooner in the road than a big farmer came charging out like a mad bull roaring threats to phone ahead and have us all arrested. He could have done it, too, for we could not have scattered immediately. I had visions of country justice and delays, so instead of letting some of the crowd go to the mat with him, I asked the farmer how much he wanted for his hay, expecting to pay my share to the last dollar. We nearly fainted when he cried in a voice that carried half a mile, "10 cents!" E. C. S.

No Questions Asked.

While driving along a narrow road near Cripple Creek, Colo., we were met by a big car with glaring headlights. Fearing a smash, I called to the driver to dim his lights. The next minute the big car was ditched and the two men riding in it had footed it away across fields. They had stolen the car and had mistaken us for officers. We were able to restore the car to its rightful owner, but as no one claimed its cargo of bottled goods and cigars, we took them feeling that sometimes virtue is its own reward. J. M. V.

The Way to His Heart.

Accompanying a bachelor friend on a Dixie highway trip, we stopped to take lunch at an inn kept by a widow who supported her four children by serving motorists. My friend often stopped there and declared he had never tasted such rolls, pies, and doughnuts as she served.

"The owner takes possession tomorrow," she told us, "so this will be the last meal I'll serve you."

"Not if I can help it," returned my friend. "I have a nice farm and no housekeeper. Let's get married, turn the kids loose on the farm, and watch them grow."

In less than an hour the car was loaded with the widow, four children, a dog, two cats, and a bird cage, with trunks and grips and what not. We drove to the county seat and I witnessed the marriage. E. H.

Now Is the Time.

This is the time of year when owners of new cars need to be reminded that more harm may result to the vehicle in the first 500 miles of running than in all the rest of its life. After the car has been run a couple of hundred miles the driver should go over it and take up slack in bolts and bearings. Pistons should have excessive lubrication during the early wearing in period. The universal joints must be kept fully lubricated during the early running of the car. A stitch at this time saves not nine but nineteen.

Here you can get genuine new Timken, Hyatt, and New Departure Bearings for any motor car, truck or tractor ever built. Our service is official.

THE PRESIDENT OF FRANCE RIDES IN A MARMON 34

In the inaugural parade held in Paris in February, M. Paul Deschanel, the newly elected president of France, rode in a Marmon 34, as did other dignitaries and high army officers.

President Deschanel's predecessor, former President Poincare, also chose the Marmon as his official car. The drawing above is from a photograph taken while former President Poincare was making a tour of inspection through the war-torn cities of Lens and St. Mihiel.

During the war the French High Commission visiting this country was much impressed with the remarkable showing made by the Marmon 34 in the U. S. Army Active Service Test in the Big Bend district of Mexico. So much so, in fact, that they placed orders for several hundred Marmon 34's for the use of the French General Staff.

Have you had a ride in the New Series Marmon 34? If not, a new motoring pleasure awaits you. We shall be pleased to give you a demonstration.

Gasoline Economy Purely a Matter of Readjustment

Expert Advises Cutting Mixture to Lean Firing Point

BY HIGH SPEED.

ALL motorists know that gasoline is higher in price than it ever has been before and that the limit may not have been reached. They also know that each time gasoline goes up in price a new fuel saving device comes on the market, and each one seems to do a little better than the one before. All sorts of figures are given to prove the claims of the device. In one case in upper New York state a car was said to have run ninety miles on one gallon of gasoline. Before purchasing a so-called economizer, the driver or owner should consider many things; he should not take the claims of the maker for granted; he should reason it out and see if the fundamentals of the device would produce the claimed results.

Ever since the beginning of the industry devices of this kind have been offered, but more particularly in the last few years have so-called air valves and air appliances been brought to the market in varying numbers. One concern introduced an ordinary air valve which was screwed into the intake manifold. The device cost about 10 cents to make and a little more to market. It was sold on money back guarantee at $5. They made over a million dollars on this device after paying back a few thousand dollars for returned devices. Owners didn't like to have the manifold drilled and tapped and the device put in place, only to remove it again and plug the hole. Rather keep the device, which they did.

The reason for air appliances is simple. They introduce air into the mixture, either above or below the throttle, and dilute the mixture in proportion to the air admitted. Sometimes hot air is introduced; again it is cold air, depending on the device.

If the carburetor is set to supply a fairly rich mixture, or if there is some derangement in the carburetor, a worn needle, or high float, to feed too much gasoline in proportion to air, then the car shows a high fuel consumption. Now under these conditions a device might show a gain which will startle the owner. For example, if the car now is giving ten miles on a gallon, and the extra air admitted will bring this to fifteen, you gain an additional five miles on every gallon, and you are satisfied.

Now, suppose that you yourself test the device on a nice level road where acceleration is not demanded, where hill climbing is not needed and where performance means mere running at twenty miles per hour or any other fixed speed. Naturally it will show low fuel consumption. So will the car without any device show a higher mileage. It will surprise you if you make a test of your car, as is, and adjust the carburetor for a very lean mixture. Running on an ordinary paved road you can cut the fuel down to a startling degree. Warm the engine first, then cut down on the fuel.

Our gasoline is not so bad as some would have motorists believe. It is bad to be sure, but modern carburetors handle it fairly well under the circumstances, and a thing to be remembered is that every carburetor supplies hot air. As a matter of fact if vaporization can be effected without hot air all the better, for then the volumetric efficiency of the engine is not affected and you get more power out of the engine.

Wider Roads Get General Support in Lincoln Plan

THE best thought of the highway engineers of America is being given to the drafting of specifications for the "ideal section" to be built somewhere along the Lincoln highway with funds provided by the United States Rubber company.

The Lincoln Highway association in Detroit is receiving hundreds of suggestions from engineers in every part of the United States, indicating a deep interest in the project.

In asking for opinions from America's highway engineering profession, the Lincoln Highway association pointed out that it realized that no set of specifications could be determined upon which would adequately serve all sections of the country or even all main highways in every part of the union. It took pains to make clear that the specifications desired were those for a main traveled highway, carrying not less than 10,000 vehicles a day at present and destined to carry a still heavier volume of travel during the life of the improvement.

The majority of the engineers who have replied feel that a right of way wider than those now being provided is desirable, if the future increase of highway transportation is to be anticipated and provided for. Permanent monolithic pavement is the almost unanimous verdict of those so far heard from.

That the importance and educational benefit of the "ideal section" has a much broader appeal than among those actually engaged in highway construction, is indicated by the hundreds of letters the association is receiving from motorists and the public generally making suggestions and commending the idea.

Handy Mixture.

Two parts of iron or steel that have become rusted firmly together may be separated by soaking them for several hours in a mixture of one-third lubricating oil and two-thirds kerosene.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

THREE fully equipped service trucks will be put into gener operation July 1 by the Chicago Motor club, subject to the call at any hour of the day or night of club members who have come to grief on the road. According to club announcement the trucks will be ready to serve stalled motorists anywhere in Cook county and no charge of any kind will be made to members receiving the service. Tipping, too, is prohibited. It is estimated that the cost for the service, including equipment for the first year, will be $25,000.

S. V. Norton, for fifteen years in charge of the truck tire sales division of the Goodrich Rubber company, has been appointed service manager of the General Motors Truck company to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of H. L. Beckwith.

A. A. A. announcement of results in the Stockton to Yosemite valley reliability run over mountain roads gave the Jordan car a record of 28.85 ton miles per gallon of gasoline and 274.56 ton miles to the pint of lubricating oil.

The Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck company has taken a twenty-five year lease on the four story building at Michigan avenue and Twenty-fifth street, formerly occupied by the Winton company. The new Kelly home will be used exclusively by the truck organization, whose sales department is under command of Hoover Holton. The building has been thoroughly renovated and redecorated.

Fifty automobile bodies a day will be the output of the new body plant to be constructed by the Haynes company at Kokomo, Ind., according to company announcement.

Production of the new Handley-Knight car will begin early in September, it is announced by J. I. Handley, president of the new organization, which is fast completing its factory buildings at Kalamazoo, Mich.

An Analysis of the "Road Speed" of a
is a tribute to its special steels

Men driving larger cars have often wondered at the "road speed" of a Maxwell.

True, in an open straight stretch they have run away from a Maxwell.

But in any "piece of going" in which hills, turns, curves or rough roads enter into the general average, they do not outrun a Maxwell.

The reason for this is the special steels in a Maxwell. They are made to Maxwell's own formulae, and make possible construction combining great strength with light weight.

The lightness of the weight enables a Maxwell to take a turn with more ease and less slowing up, come down a hill under better control, ascend a hill as well, and make more time over a rough piece of roadway.

The strength of its steels enables a Maxwell to stand equally as well, or better, side strains, road unevenness, etc.

In other words, a Maxwell makes speed when a larger car cannot, and thus evens up to a high average its "road speed" without breaking the speed laws.

This ability in a Maxwell is one of many that is winning new friendships daily. Nearly 400,000 of them to date; in another year 500,000.

Chicago Meeting Called for Discussion of Truck Problems

DEVELOPMENT of local and inter-city transport has reached a stage in the United States where it has become necessary to secure national coöperation among cities in the commercial hauling field.

To this end a conference has been called in Chicago for June 26 and 27 by organizations representing cartage companies in practically every important American city. The purpose is to organize a national association for the clearing of all problems connected with motor truck transport and allied matters.

During the last two years the commercial hauling field has been called into action to a far greater extent than ever before to augment freight transportation facilities so constantly overtaxed. This created many problems, such as: The construction of highways powerful enough to stand up under heavy loads; study of automotive construction elements; research in operating costs and equalizations of loads; problems connected with the necessity for coöperation between commercial haulers in different cities, in order to keep hauling equipment supplied with return loads from long distances and many other matters vital to this industry.

Meetings will be held in the Hotel La Salle under the auspices of the Detroit Transportation association and delegates will attend representing commercial hauling associations from Iowa, Michigan, New York, California, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Massachusetts, Nevada, Texas, Colorado, Oregon, Illinois, Georgia, Louisiana, Nebraska, and other states. It is the ultimate hope of those directing this movement to place the cartage industry of America on a basis where it can relieve the pressure on other methods of moving commodities, where the older established arteries are now overtaxed.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

Can you give me directions to follow to get to Independence, Ia.? I would prefer to take the Lincoln highway and pass through Clinton.

J. A. B., Aurora, Ill.

Go north to Geneva, and there, getting on the Lincoln highway, follow it west through De Kalb, Rochelle, Dixon, Sterling, Fulton, Clinton, Ia., De Witt, Grandmound, Wheatland, Stanwood, Mechanicville, Mount Vernon, and Marion to Cedar Rapids. Leaving the Lincoln highway, go north through Center Point and Rowley to Independence.

My engine always is covered with oil and I can't find a leak anywhere. It is a Chevrolet 490 and the wires and valves and other parts are always wet with oil. Where does it come from? P. L. D.

The pistons or rings are probably badly worn, allowing oil to work up through the valves and on to the cylinder head. The fan draft spreads the oil over the other parts.

What is the best route to Danville, Ill.? B. B. H., Chicago.

The best route to Danville lies south through South Chicago, Hammond, Ind.; Dwyer, Brunswick, Lowell, Lake Village, Morocco, Ade, Kentland, Freeland Park, Ambia, and Pence to Danville.

SIGN POST ART—On King George's Norfolk estate each four corners offer interesting studies in old English sentiment. Here is a typical sign post.

Art and Utility Hand in Hand on King's Highway

BY JOHN S. STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON.—[Special correspondence.]—The high brow art world of London was shocked a few days ago by the suggestion made by Prince Albert, the king's second son, at the Royal academy banquet that artists should turn sign painters. The prince did not put it quite that way, but that is what it amounted to. He suggested that art was not sufficiently in touch with the life of the people and threw out the thought that artistic road sign posts and village inn signs would be more useful than some of the acres of canvas that are covered with indifferent paint.

The prince probably didn't know it, but he was only harking back to the time when artists were really bohemian. All over England there are inn signs which were painted for a bed and breakfast by young artists who afterwards became famous. Morland paid his bills at many inns in this way during his wanderings up and down the country in search of the picturesque. Many village inns, too, contain portraits unsigned, but attributed to men who afterwards were "hung" on the walls of the academy.

The artistic sign post idea was probably borrowed from the king's private estate at Sandringham, in Norfolk, where such a scheme as the prince suggested has been carried out. At the entrance of the various villages on the estate are signs giving the name of the village and a carved or painted group emblematic of the village or its history. The same idea carried out all through England would provide work for many artists for years to come.

Oil Test.

A recent test showed that to prevent excessive engine wearing crankcase oil should be changed at least every 1,500 miles, preferably every 1,000 miles.

A new engine that was run 6,000 miles with oil changed at proper intervals, upon being disassembled showed no signs of wear. The same engine, reassembled and run 6,000 miles with old oil plus new oil as needed, upon inspection, showed a wear of 0.015 inches.

Truck and passenger car manufacturers recommend, for better performances and longer life, that crankcases be drained every thousand miles, the engine flushed with kerosene, and new oil added.

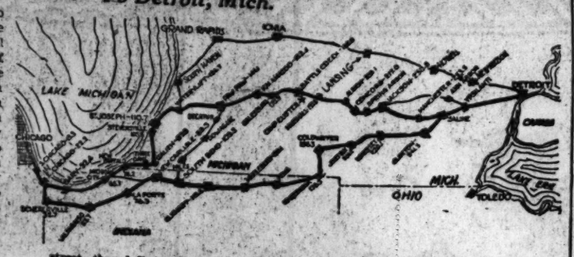
Tribune Tours

V. To Detroit, Mich.



UNLIMITED patience and no small degree of endurance are the requisites for the successful tour to Detroit in these days of record breaking highway traffic. The constant streams of drive aways, both truck and pleasure car, from Michigan factories and heavy trucking between terminals have cut up practically every section to the northwest. The two main traveled routes are here given in detail, and from all reports they will remain the best throughout the summer. The northern route is the favorite, although an equal amount of rough going between concrete and macadam stretches will be found either way, despite Michigan's constant road repair work.

For the leisurely tourist the trip to Holland, either by lake steamer or the Michigan pike will prove pleasurable. From Holland a good and little traveled road leads through Grand Rapids, Ionia and Lansing to Howell, Brighton, and New Hudson into Detroit. The following detailed directions from Watervliet and Shererville have been condensed from data in the 1926 Automobile Blue Book.

Keep Them Happy

Gears are just like folks. They can't work well when they're out of sorts.

Dixon's is a regular gear tonic. It keeps 'em fit. It's awfully greasy stuff, but once your gears sink their teeth into it, you'll notice a big improvement right away.

DIXON'S Gear LUBRICANT

Dixon's puts a smooth slippery film of lubricant between your gears that keeps out friction and noise. It's a lasting film too, because Dixon's doesn't "squeeze out" under a load. It can't crawl back in a corner and let your gears run free and dry. Nor is it affected by heat or cold like ordinary lubricants.

In short, Dixon's will do this for you. Give you more miles per gallon of gas—less expense.

Ask for Dixon's 677 for your transmission and differential.
Also Dixon's Cup Grease and other famous lubricants.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAM

Newcomb Carlton, President — George W. E. Atkins, Vice-President

RECEIVED AT

From San Francisco, Cal., 12:05 PM June 8-6 1926

6 We Dr. 109 cut 2 periods

To Edward S. Jordan,
Jordan Motor Car Company, Inc.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

Jordan wins most remarkable economy and reliability contest ever held under sanction of American Automobile Association on the Pacific Coast. Run made from Stockton to Yosemite Valley and return. Referee found awarded perfect score to Jordan whose record was twenty-eight point eighty-five ton miles per gallon gasoline and two seventy-four point fifty-six ton miles per pint of lubricating oil. Contest over mountain roads through snow and muck, considered locally the most gruelling contest ever given automobile.

(Signed) C. D. Rand & Company,
Jordan distributors.

HERE is a unique story of how a live wire out in San Francisco, named C. D. Rand, stole a march on the Jordan factory.

Had Mr. Rand not made good in such a remarkable way, he might be charged with having fired one of the big Jordan guns before the main barrage was ready.

Jordan knew that the big pendulum of American motor car opinion was about to swing from ideas of extravagance to needs of common sense and economy.

For months, the factory has been accumulating an astounding pile of evidence regarding Jordan economy and Jordan reliability.

All the precincts have not yet been heard from. We were not yet prepared for the big smash.

Ten thousand Jordan owners throughout the world had been sending in proofs and proofs and proofs of Jordan economy and reliability beyond the ordinary.

Jordan foresaw that the day of economy is dawning. The hour of the light-weight, high-quality, reliable motor car is here,

Without the knowledge of the factory, and with no previous notice, Mr. Rand entered a Jordan in the big reliability contest in California.

When it was all over, he sent the above telegram indicating that the Jordan had won.

We might as well tell it—the truth will soon be out. The Jordan—light in weight, of rare charm and dependability—is built to serve the owner over a period of years without deterioration.

In short—it is the highest new or used value in the market today.

Four years ago, Jordan built the lightest car on the road for its wheelbase.

Thousands of owners learned of the economy and reliability of this car.

A year ago, Jordan forsaw the passing of the big, bulky, ponderous motor car of old. He knew that the man who once found it necessary to choose a heavy car to attain reliability, was looking for a car in which reliability was combined with economy and distinction.

He knew that the man who once thought it wise to choose a cheaper car for reasons of price, now prefers a car of real economy, in which the original price is practically the last payment for service rendered.

The Jordan weighs 2800 pounds—1400 pounds forward and 1400 pounds astern.

Is it any wonder that this nimble, light-footed, good-looking, perfectly balanced car of personality and style should win the big economy run.

ASTRONOMY

OUR UNIVERSE.

THE studded sky above is all about us like a shell. In all directions there are stars. It is no freak of chance that they are all about us. The stars encompass us because we and our petty sun are near the middle of the swarm, between Orion and the stars of Cygnus, and a little north of the true center. Looking out upon all sides we see their far-flung lights forming a great half oblate central nucleus for the milky way to coil about. Up and down, from Virgo to the Bear, the cluster is comparatively thin, not over 3,000 light years thick, but toward the milky way the swarms are much extended and make a thin, fat sheet whose magnitude is all beyond comprehension. Light, our measure of distance from star to star, requires 300,000 years to cross the milky way from side to side.

A SPIRAL NEBULA
ONE OF THE NEAREST, IS AT LEAST 500 MILLION LIGHT-YEARS AWAY.
BY R. C. MAXWELL.

The arms of clustered stars are coiled about the stars we call our neighbors in two spiral arms. We see them slightly separated from Cygnus to below the Scorpion. Their light extends about the sky in a running belt of light. We are a spiral nebulae.

The stars which make the center of the swarm are on the average the older, the ones beyond are younger, and the average milky way star is of the Sirian type. The central cluster extends 7,500 light years on every side of us, and then, by stages, merges into the clusters of the milky way. Out there, matter is in its old, primeval form; some is dust and gas, some stones, some metal clouds; some nebulae of its shapes are bright and some are dark. We can but dimly see the farther edge.

Island universes are the rule. We need a more embracing name to call the system of universe on universe whose existence is now being shown to men. The framers of our language little realized that on the other side of the stars, beyond the utter nakedness of space, there are other universes, as nearly like our own as the planets are like each other. For, let us know, the same sodium which enters into our salt is found there, too. the same gravity, the same light, the same time; in fact, an identity of everything is there. In vastness as in littleness there is no distinction. We are dimly learning now the universality of law.

Do You Consider "Safety" When Buying a Car

PICK up any of our daily papers and figure the number of accidents due to careless or reckless driving.

Traffic reports available show 93% of all auto accidents are due to the "other fellow."

To be sure, you may not be able to teach the "other fellow" caution, but you can drive a car that will pull through a tight place, or meet any emergency.

It is a common sight in traffic to see a Twin Six beat other cars on the getaway. Quicker acceleration, more reserve power—climbing from 1½ to 30 miles an hour in less than half a block. This has kept many an owner out of a bad spill.

And Packard safety has many other features.

For instance, Packard wheels are made only of straight grain, second growth hickory—seasoned eighteen months—built to stand over twenty-eight tons strain—ample protection when skidding or scraping curb.

The "Fuel-izer"
EXCLUSIVELY PACKARD
Makes Any Grade Gasoline a Perfect Fuel
Ingenious device eliminates:
—Carbon formation.
—Spark plug fouling.
—Oil dilution on cylinder walls and crank case.
—Difficult starting in cold weather.
This remarkable invention is now standard equipment on all new Twin Six cars

Packard pays twelve cents per pound for steel rather than let an owner take chances on the ordinary six cent grade. It passes a breaking test of over one hundred and forty thousand pounds pressure per square inch.

PACKARD brakes, because of their extra large surfaces, can bring a Twin Six from 25 miles an hour to a dead stop in less than 35 feet.

To the motorist, who likes to know his wife or family is safe, we say, "Let us tell you more about Packard safety. How 90% of all Twin Six parts are heat treated steel forgings. How Packard is built, not assembled and why the assemblers, who rely on buying up all their parts on the outside market, cannot offer a car with a guaranteed safety factor."

FARM AND GARDEN

Closing the Gap Between Farmers and Consumers

By Frank Ridgway.

FARMERS' coöperative elevator representatives are at attention now, and are getting ready to advance a few more knots to close the wide gap between grain growers of Illinois and consumers. It has been a slow, tedious voyage but now land is in sight.

Approximately twenty years have passed since the first farmers' coöperative elevator was formed in this state. Today the whole grain belt is dotted with these elevators. There are now 400 companies, operating plants at 800 different stations, owning 700 elevators with a capacity of from 10,000 to 100,000 bushels. They handle far beyond half of the grain sold through elevators in the state.

They attracted little attention at first, but before long seventeen companies were organized. They joined together to form the Farmers' Grain Dealers' association. Then competition between the farmers' companies and the line elevators began in earnest. Through their closer coöperative work the farmers are now able to pass most of their grain from the farm through their own elevators into the cars. Up to the present time they have had no control over their grain beyond this point. The opinion was for many years that the farmers' business was to raise the grain and not have anything to do with marketing. The starting of the farmers' elevators was a protest against this belief and against the wide margin of prices between the local station and the terminal markets.

One of the 700 farmers' coöperative elevators in Illinois. The grain belt is dotted with this type of elevator, through which most of the grain in this state is loaded into cars. Many new ones of this type are being built. They will be used to handle the grain through the new marketing system. William G. Eckhardt, director of grain marketing department, Illinois Agriculture association, is now holding grain marketing hearings in congressional districts over state.

Costs Consumer No More.

By the efficient handling of the crop through these elevators it has made several million dollars for the farmers of Illinois without costing the ultimate consumer one cent.

"While we are working hard right now to produce crops for next winter we do not know or have anything to say about what we will get for our work," said William G. Eckhardt, director of the marketing department of the Illinois Agriculture association. "It is wrong for private individuals to manipulate fluctuating markets for their own benefit. The way to overcome this is for farmers themselves to market their grain."

The principal object of the farmers' coöperative elevators up to this time has been to take the grain that comes from the farms and load it into the cars, but now they will be used as the foundation in the proposed marketing plans. It has been a hard fight to establish these elevators, and the growers have, through their twenty years of hard work, accomplished one step in their marketing problems. They stop at the point where the grain is loaded into the cars and have no further control of it after it leaves the home station. Their next step is to establish machinery so they can follow their products through the various channels of marketing by organizing central brokerage agencies or clearing houses to sell the grain direct to the mills and manufacturers, where it is made into flour, breakfast foods, and other food products.

Build Own Machinery.

Mr. Eckhart says the farmers are putting themselves in a position to market their grain just the same as manufacturers, bankers, and other business men market their commodities. That is, they will build their own marketing machinery. He believes it is just as ridiculous to think of the farmer setting the price on the machinery he buys as it is for others to set the price on the farmers' products.

With the proposed plan they will regulate the flow of grain so the market will not be glutted, and at the same time be ready to take care of the demands. They will have their own brokerage office or clearing house, which will connect the producer and consumer by the line of least resistance to save freight and terminal charges. The grain will then be marketed throughout the year instead of choking the elevators and congesting transportation over a short period immediately after harvest.

A big movement is now under way to build up the growers' marketing machinery. Ten of the fifteen grain marketing hearings have been held in the last two weeks in different congressional districts of Illinois to unite the farm elevator men and bankers in this movement. From 100 to 300 have attended each one of these conferences, including men from both state and county bureaus, presidents, secretaries, and other representatives of the farm elevators. From six to twelve bankers from each one of these congressional districts have taken active part in the discussions at the various meetings. At each hearing plans were presented and discussed in detail.

Delegates All for It.

The coöperative marketing plans recommended at the different meetings by the state farm bureau organization have been enthusiastically supported, according to Mr. Eckhardt, who has had charge of all the hearings. "Not one of the delegates voted against the plan, and they represent 75 per cent of the Illinois farmers," he said.

"This means that the farmers are going to follow their grain from the field where it is grown to the consumers," added Mr. Eckhardt. "We want the same fair consideration in marketing farm products as any other business. We do not want to glut the markets so the price will go down below the cost of production one month and later go higher than is fair to the consumer. It is our aim to eliminate the things that are not in the interest of the entire public."

It is believed that fifteen farmers' brokerages could do the work of the 150 private brokerages now operating in the state. With the proposed plan every grain farmer, whether he is operating on a large or small scale, or is a stockholder in the coöperative elevator companies or not, will be able to market his grain through this channel.

More companies will be organized as soon as the hearings are completed and new elevators will be built. Mr. Eckhart already has calls from fifty communities who want elevators.

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS OF THE WORLD — TRUTH

Truth in Advertising

"The Credit for Building the First Car Belongs to Mr. Elwood Haynes"

(The above statement is from a letter to A. G. Seiberling, Vice President and General Manager of The Haynes Automobile Company, Kokomo, Indiana, by Richard H. Lee, Special Counsel of the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.)

EVERY advertising man attending this great convention will be proud over this tangible evidence of the constructive good being done for advertising by the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

"Truth in Advertising" is the motto, the slogan, and the code of the members of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

While The Haynes Automobile Company has never participated in the discussion over who made America's first car, further than to state that Elwood Haynes invented, designed and built it, and to rest its case with history, we admit a glow of satisfaction as we take occasion to express to the advertising men of the world our felicitations to their National Vigilance Committee upon the thoroughness of its research and its conscientious insistence upon the verities in public statements.

Although the original Haynes automobile, invented, designed and built by Elwood Haynes, is a United States Government exhibit in the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., bearing an official tablet giving its history, nevertheless the accuracy of this government statement has been directly and indirectly questioned.

We asked the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, through their National Vigilance Committee, to sift the entire matter, knowing it would be done utterly without bias, for this reason:

Advertising is a force upon which we, in common with every progressive concern in the world, depend. We know what advertising has done for us. We know how jealously the Associated Advertising Clubs guard the good name of advertising. We know the sacredness of their slogan "Truth in Advertising."

The National Vigilance Committee went at its work conscientiously and thoroughly; it spent much time upon its investigation, in order that its finding should be final and decisive. The result is embodied in the letter from Mr. Lee to Mr. Seiberling, and in the straightforward statement:

"The credit for building the first car belongs to Mr. Elwood Haynes."

This decision lends added emphasis to the principle of character which is associated in the public mind with the name of the Haynes.

No matter how good advertising may be, it can only be as good as the product it advertises. It can only succeed with the product. We are naturally gratified that the Haynes has made good on its advertising. We give advertising full credit for carrying to the people the message of the four essential factors of car-character—beauty, strength, power and comfort—which are established in the Haynes. Our advertising led the prospective car owner to expect beauty, strength, power and comfort in his Haynes. The car itself completely exemplified this character. The result is that to-day the demand for the new series Haynes is just as far ahead of our production as it was a year ago.

Every advertising man will be pleased to know this, because Haynes advertising is a faithful echo of the car itself. It reflects the policies and principles of The Haynes Automobile Company, and is just as much our product as is the Haynes car itself.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World have done great work, but never performed a greater act for the highest good of advertising itself, than when their National Vigilance Committee aligned the forces of good advertising with history, with recorded facts and with the U. S. Government's own official statement in the final, irrevocable decision that to Elwood Haynes belongs the credit for building America's first car.

STONE—THE MASTER CROOK

BY CAPT. KARL W. DETZER
(Chief of the D. C. I., American Embarkation Center.)

A Story of the "D. C. I.," the American Secret Police in France, After the Troops Started Home

ALL you who long for the mystery, the unreal, for the developing plot, and the climax in a story, pass this by. You who are interested in men for what they do, you may listen.

This is not a story for the ultra-godly. It would be wasted on him who sees no good in bad. But I am telling it—or, rather, quoting it—because I feel it gives an interesting sidelight on the criminal mind.

Harry Stone was a crook. Lieut. Barney Flood of the New York department has called him "the crown prince of crookdom." Harry liked the title. It tickled his twisted vanity.

It was in November, 1918, the army transport Baltic, White Star line, landed in Europe with the last batch of Americans to arrive before hostilities ceased. As it lay in harbor that night, word was flashed out that the war had ended.

On board was Private Harry Stone. Harry was a product of that portion of New York City which lies below Fourteenth street and east of Third avenue. He was a person of no small renown in his home sector. He was wanted often, tried often, and found not wanted. His finger prints adorned more slips of cardboard than any other man's in the lower east side. But, no matter how hard they tried, the police never found one to match them on a safe door.

Of course, Harry knew all about safes. He knew more about them than anyone else in New York. He admitted it. Yet he never had seen one by daylight.

"It's hard to prove certain things," he would say, "and it's funny how so many people get scared and tell all they now to the police. I don't tell nothing!"

He had fought many a battle with the forces of ordered existence; he had stepped backward in many a strategic retreat; but never before had he collapsed into the hands of the enemy. And the enemy was anything that happened to interfere with his plans and pleasures. The draft had caught him.

That is how he happened to be aboard the Baltic this night in the harbor of Brest roads. And as he lay on the deck in the dark he talked to several comrades.

"I hate the army," he said; "it don't give even your thoughts any privacy, and as for freedom of action—pff!"

So he decided to quit. He quit. In the morning at roll call he was listed among the missing. And for eleven months he was not known in the American army in France—that is, he was not known as Harry Stone.

Eleven and a half months later he was arrested in Paris, dressed as a colonel, with a fake captain acting as his adjutant and another deserter impersonating a second lieutenant as his aid. Still another wore sergeant stripes and drove his car—a car that once had been the property of a brigadier general.

But let Harry tell his story—he does it easily.

"I was so sick of the army I just couldn't stand it any more. If I only could be a lieutenant, I thought, it would not be so bad; but this being a private—pff! So I quit. I saw a barge alongside our boat, and I just slipped over the side and went ashore.

"You have no idea how inquisitive the military police are until you try to run around without identification. I thought that a lieutenant could get by better than a private, so early one morning I made a little money. Eh? It's nobody's business how I made it. As I was remarking, when that funny looking would-be detective interrupted, I made a little money and bought an officer's uniform. And right quick—like that—I was a second lieutenant.

"You wouldn't believe it, even if I told it, but second lieutenants were more plentiful in Brest than privates had been. And the military police seemed more interested in their welfare. I had to tie to half a dozen the first day. Then slowly and by degrees I was promoted. How? I promoted myself—it's too slow waiting for action by the war department.

"I was a captain for three weeks, and then I went to Paris—ah, beautiful Paris!—and on the train I became a major. Two days afterward in a shop window I saw the silver eagles of a colonel, so I wore them. But still sometimes the military police—very rude they are—wanted to see my papers.

"I hate to disappoint any one—even the military police, so one night when an officer left his coat next mine in a hotel, I felt in the pockets for my identification, and there it was—maybe it was the wrong pocket—for it had the other officer's picture on it. It made a good model, though, and I had one printed the next morning at a French print shop, and my photograph on it, too—that other officer was not a bit handsome.

"That's the time I bought the gray wig, and the same day I put the insignia of the inspector general's department on my collar. No one ever interferes with an inspector general. It's lovely, I don't know why I didn't think of it sooner.

"After that I met the other gentlemen, those who got away when you called at my room and were so rude to me. So we got a car—O, it's a fine car, I had Gen. Harts' mechanic fix it up. Where did we get it you ask? It's funny, so many of you birds have asked me that and expected me to tell the truth!

"Money? Sure I made money. I was a sales agent for the government. I sold anything a Frenchman took a fancy to. You remember that hospital at Angers? I sold it. Your lieutenant colonel in command took me through it with the two Frenchmen who bought it. They just paid 20,000 francs down on it, you know, to bind the bargain.

"It all was legitimate. I gave them

THE price of automobiles, like everything else, has gone up.

Some cars have doubled in price. Some have advanced a half, a third, or a quarter.

These advances are by no means an indication of undue profit taking. We believe all fine automobiles are today more closely priced than any other investment of like size.

Moon cars, too, have advanced.

But less than 15%.

Compare this, please, with the advances in price of other commodities.

Here, of all the fine motors in the world, your dollar buys most.

Less than 15% advance in price and no depreciation in quality.

Here is the same marvelous Red Seal Continental Motor, the same Fedders Radiator, Timken Axles and Bearings, Parrish and Bingham Frame, Delco Three-Unit Starting, Lighting and Ignition, Borg & Beck Clutch, Brown-Lipe Transmission, Spicer Universals—the same proven tested units which made Moon reputation for mechanical supremacy, reliability and economy of operation.

Here are the same BEAUTIFUL CUSTOM TYPE bodies, the same genuine Spanish Leather Upholstery, the same Deep Springs. Not a detail has been cheapened or sacrificed to price or material markets.

Less than 15% advance in price because foresight and daring buying have made price maintenance of this car possible.

This is a plain fact—there will not be, because there cannot be, any "cut" in the price of fine motor cars for years to come.

If you expect to purchase a new car, whether a Moon or some other, you will SAVE money by making your purchase NOW.

There has been no profiteering in fine motor cars. Fine cars are NOT "overpriced." The real question is whether the price of really fine cars, the Moon no less than others, can be kept at present low levels.

We will count it a pleasure to go over with you the dollar for dollar value represented in any Moon model at the present price.

receipt. Then I sold that trainload of beans to M. Guilchard at Tours. He was looking at it beside the road on my telling when I passed in my car, and asked whether it was for sale, and I said it. I told him I could ...ve the contract to him at his price. ...e made his price for the uniforms ...d I made mine for the deaf. I did ...ably well, my commission was 100,- ...0 francs. I bet he's still making uni- ...rms, too.

"That was when I bought my hotel—I ...ve dined there—yes, you—I re- ...mber you had a lady with a funny ...me, and you were very silly about ...er, but I didn't interfere. I was hav- ...g a good time thinking of what you ...dn't know. My girl is running that ...tel now, and when I get off govern- ...ent detail—I shall return to it.

"My greatest trouble was discontent ...n my staff. Fine boys they were, but ...lways wanting promotion. However, ...couldn't promote them any faster, ...ough I promised each a raise in ...ade when I became a general. See, ...u spoiled my plans. When I had ...llected a million francs I expected ...be a general. But the best laid plans ...f D. C. L's go awry.

"Do I know Willy Nolde? Sure, I know him. I don't like him. He isn't square. He uses a gun! And why use a gun to get money when you can use your tongue and get away with it and get more money without hurting anyone's feelings?"

The famous D. C. L. office at 10 Rue St. Anne was silent, and the little group of detectives marvelled at the nerve of the man. And not only did they marvel, but they rather liked his impudence. It was a relief, in the breezy swing of his story to find that the man they had hunted so long and had captured after such a struggle was different from the ordinary garden variety of criminal.

Stone had been captured in a hotel by Murphy, the little Irish operator who was the most hated man in the Paris underwold. Murphy had nabbed him in a hotel, after smashing a door, but not until the accomplices of the master crook had slipped down a water spout and left him alone, "to stall out" as they expressed it. It never had occurred to them that he would be retained in custody. They felt that his smooth tongue would open the prison gates.

"It hurts to have been taken in by an enlisted man," continued the little criminal, "after all I have done for them. I used to stop officers and make them button their pocket flaps and salute properly, but I never stopped a private—I was a private myself once!

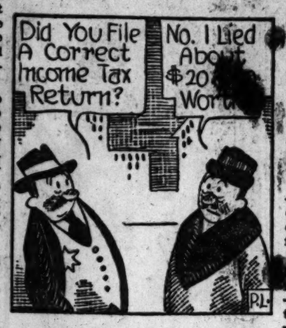
"I was always democratic with the privates—that's me—and chatted with them on their own level, and bought them drinks, and I never, how do you say it, appropriated anything belonging to anyone under the rank of a colonel.

"But to be apprehended by a private—oo, la, la—and he was uncivil. He did not respect my rank at all. I chided him for it. It was such bad form!

"You ask what I thought when I was picked up? Picked up? I was not picked up, I want it clearly understood—as clearly as you want-to-be-detectives can understand anything, I was not picked up, I was apprehended!"

(Another story by Capt. Detzer will appear in an early issue.)

If We Couldn't Tell a Lie



Loud and Continued Applause

By Guy F. Lee.

The Statesman saws and paws the air,
In fear declamatory
That his Constituents may share
Oppression's sorry story;
The Freeman's path is sore beset
With Peril's brambled thicket—
But he can duck it if he'll get Behind the Proper Ticket.
The Sovereign Voter turns away
From all the din and shouting,
And cries: "O, Genevieve, I say,
The radishes are sprouting."

The Sovereign Voter has a hunch
The Statesman's dope is buncombe;
In recent years he's had a bunch
Of quiet thoughts, and thunk 'em;
He's figured out the Public Boys
As large Limburger cheeses,
And when his ballot he employs
He does it as he pleases;
So while the Country-Saver books
A repertory dour,
He scans the sky and says: "It looks
As if we'll have a shower."

True—here is the only car you can buy whose gears are shifted electrically and whose motor is made of aluminum—two almost unanswerable reasons why your next car should be a Premier.

But the real reasons why you should buy a Premier are far more basic.

Buy a Premier, because it is the one car that has openly challenged Europe to make good her claim to supremacy in the fine car field—and by sheer mechanical superiority has made the challenge stick.

Buy a Premier, because there is no prouder name in motor car history, or any with a richer tradition for worthy conduct on the field of usage.

Buy a Premier, because of its silent appeal to the human passion for BEAUTY. The well-bred people of America saw this car at the New York and Chicago shows, and it spoke to them—in their own language. With the result that, at this moment, the great Premier factory, with its reinforcements of men, money and machinery, is hard pressed to meet even a fraction of the demand for Premier cars.

The mere fact that you are riding in a Premier, in preference to a European car, not only underwrites your Americanism, but proclaims you a person of discernment, of good taste, and appreciation of true engineering.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

MY FATHER-IN-LAW.

No longer I seem to the critical gaze
The victim of vicious suburbanite ways;
No longer you see on my countenance lurk
The shadow that's cast by the specter of Work;
No longer the doom of the Sowing of Seeds,
The Hanging of Screens and the Smiting of Weeds,
Oppresses my soul on its quivering raw,
For I've a most wonderful,
Marvelous, glorious,
Super-ingenious father-in-law.

He conquers with ease the most intricate thing;
His locks always lock and his doors always swing;
He knows how to paint and enamel and stain,
How to jolly the roof so 'twill keep out the rain,
How to put up a screen so it won't fall apart.
Ah, his is a genius that touches my heart!
A wizard with hammer and level and saw.
O, I've a most wonderful father-in-law,
A preciously practical,
Anti-didactical,
Matter-of-fact-ical father-in-law.

He accurately measures with aquiline eye;
He's hep to the lore of the earth and the sky.
He knows all the animals, fishes and birds;
When he speaks on a subject I hang on his words,
For he knows all the things that I never will know—
(All the things that I know I've discovered ain't so).
A pearl without price and a gem without flaw.
O, I've a most wonderful father-in-law,
A most energetical,
Seldomly-met-ical,
Super-go-get-ical father-in-law.

The Original Steam Carburetor Fits any Car

Used by thousands of motorists. It is a simple device for feeding live steam to the motor. It will take off all carbon and keep it off. Carbon reduces the power of the motor and causes an additional consumption of gasoline. The American Steam Carburetor keeps the motor and also the spark plugs clean.

The American Steam Carburetor is mechanically perfect. It is absolutely reliable. It does not replace your carburetor—it improves it by COMPLETELY VAPORIZING all the gasoline. Use it on your passenger car, truck or tractor.

Gas in 1914

The gas of six years ago vaporized easily. As a fine, highly volatile mist or fog it was quickly inflammable. It needed only the pin-point spark of ordinary plugs to explode it.

Gas in 1920

Today's gas is powerful enough, but it is lumpy, drizzly and hard to explode. It needs more than a pin-point spark to cause full combustion. The Arc-O Ribbon Fire is the first successful attempt to produce a spark that completely explodes it.

Poor Gas Fires Like The Finest

Yes, there's just as much POWER in gasoline today as there was six years ago—the trouble is that present-day gasoline enters the cylinders like drizzle and requires a big, hot spark to explode it completely. Otherwise a large proportion, sometimes 50% or more, passes out of the exhaust, or drops down in the crank case and adulterates the oil.

The Arc-O Ribbon Fire Spark Plug is the first successful change in plugs to meet the change in gas. It is four times more effective than the ordinary spark and fires 20 times longer.

Even in cylinders passing oil, where other plugs will foul in an hour or two, the Arc-O fires for months.

The Arc-O spark races up and down its parallel electrodes like a waving Ribbon of Fire. The open-mouth Pistol Barrel Core uses the force of each downward explosion to blow off the particles of oil and gas that collect, carbonize and foul the common spark plug.

Installation of Arc-O Plugs shows immediate and amazing results in (1) increased power, (2) reduced gas consumption, (3) freedom from fouling. Don't fail to avail yourself of this important advancement.

Used and approved by thousands of prominent car owners, automotive engineers and corporations, among them the Marmon Chicago Company, Packard Motor Car Co. of Chicago, Alexander H. Revell & Company, Timken Detroit Axle Company, Lieut. P. R. Blair, Aero Club of Illinois; Hillman & Company, Prof. Daniel Roesch, Armour Institute of Technology; C. P. Kimball, noted coach builder, and others.

CLEVELAND SIX

"Handsome is as Handsome Does"

An old adage as true today as in all the yesterdays.

No car offers cleaner lines, more truly dignified gracefulness or deeper lustre of finish than does the Cleveland Six. But these qualities would be but a surface, were it not for what is beneath them.

The exclusive Cleveland motor, most highly developed of the powerful over-head type, gives a character of performance in flexibility of power and speed, and in dependability and endurance, that surpasses other light cars.

The sturdiness of its chassis construction, the ease of its control, the soft cushioning of its low underslung spring construction, the certainty of its brakes, all these qualities add to the comfort and safety of its performance on any kind of roadway, on the steepest hills and in crowded traffic.

Take a Real Ride in the Cleveland, and You will know What a Good Car It Is.

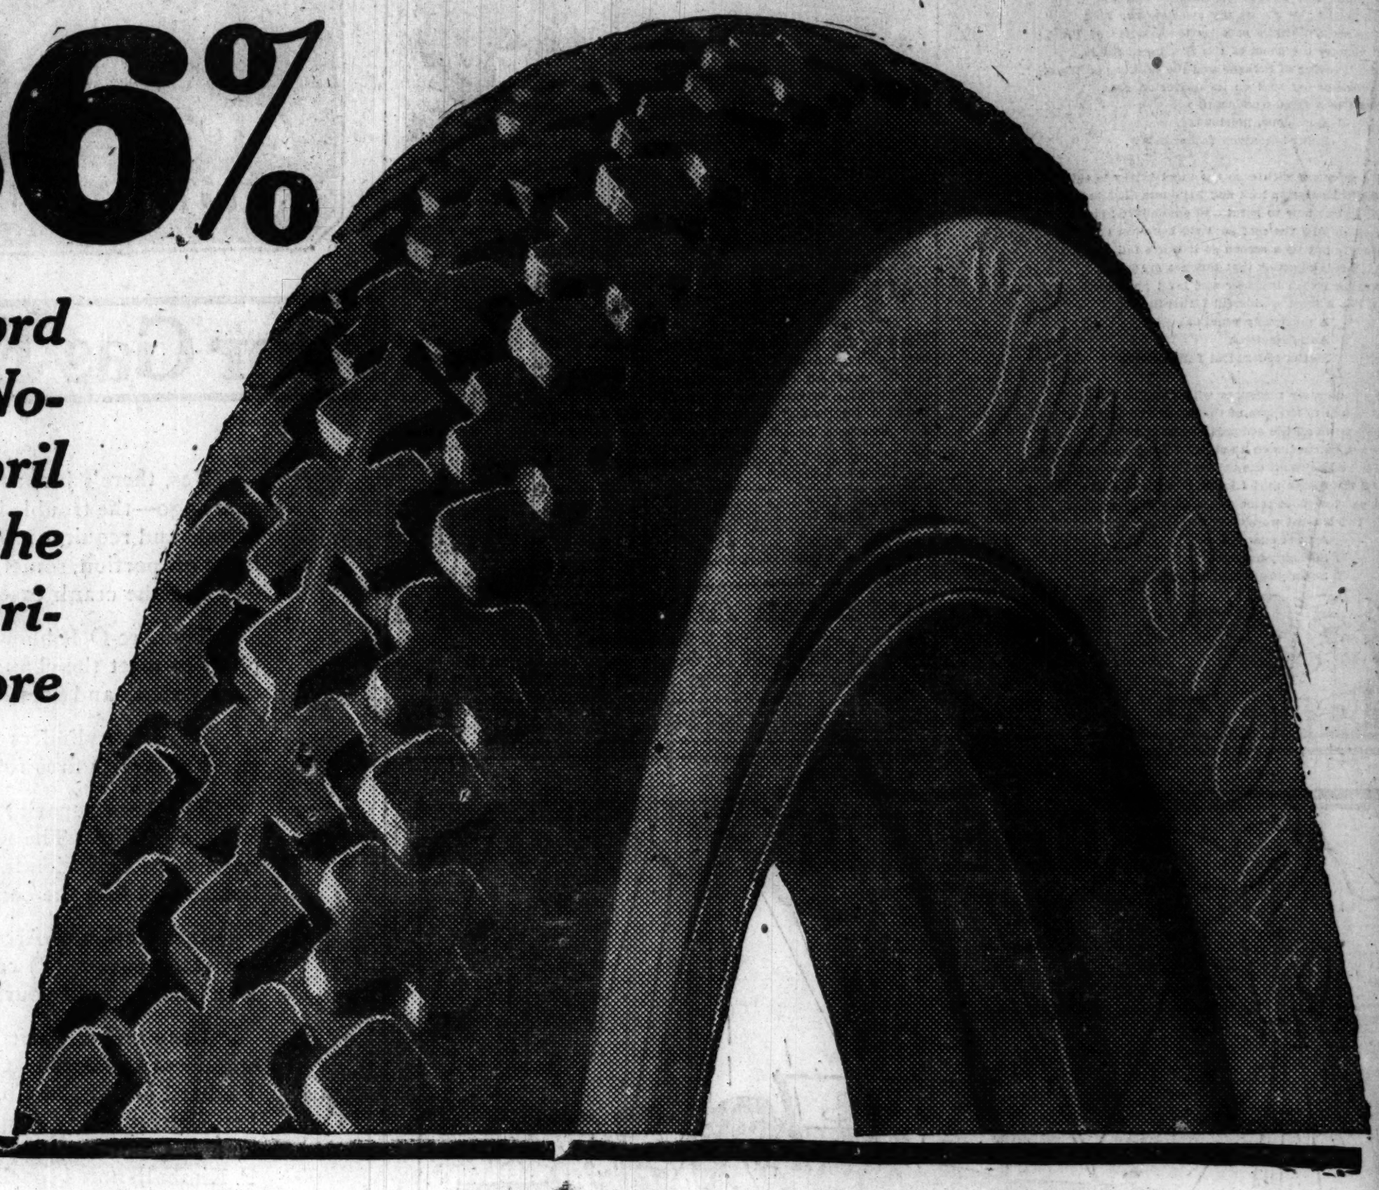
Why 436%

more Firestone Cord Tires sold from November 1st to April 30th than for the corresponding period last year—more than five to one.



Because five men are buying Firestone Cords for every one that bought last year—or because the men who tried a Firestone Cord last year are equipping all 'round, including spares, this year.

Because the Firestone Cord Tire, first of the new standard oversize, proved the extra value in more material, greater air capacity—more mileage for your money. Most miles per dollar.

Because, last year's pioneer is this year's leader!

"WHO HAVE THE MAKIN'S."
This ad interests salesmen who want to earn good money now, with the assurance of a permanent future and increased yearly earnings. Our 15 successful salesmen originally knew nothing of our line, but they had the makin's, were thoroughly trained and backed with a sound advertising and selling campaign. The product is high grade, sold through dealers only; is in great demand, and in its infancy of exploitation. The firm is old, located in Chicago, has a high commercial rating, and are "live wires." REAL ESTATE NEWS

FOREST PRESERVE BOARD TO DO ITS OWN FINANCING

Tosses Low Bids for Bonds Into Waste Basket.

BY AL CHASE.

La Salle street got somewhat of a shock when the forest preserve board nonchalantly tossed into the waste basket the three bids made by local institutions for $1,000,000 of forest preserve bonds and then calmly announced it would temporarily do its own financing.

Here is a public body which doesn't let precedent worry it at all. It has accomplished in its young life more with the money authorized than most others ten times older. It already has purchased 15,994 acres, according to figures just compiled by President Peter Reinberg. It has issued $7,000,000 worth of bonds and redeemed $360,000. It now has $2,000,000 authorized and Chicago banks were told they could underwrite $1,000,000 worth—if the rate were right.

All Right But the Rate.

"But the rate wasn't right at all," said President Reinberg. "The lowest bid we got was 85.95, from the Continental and Commercial. That means we would get $859,500 for $1,000,000. In other words, it would cost us almost 14 cents for every dollar. The other two bids were 84.92 and 83.97.

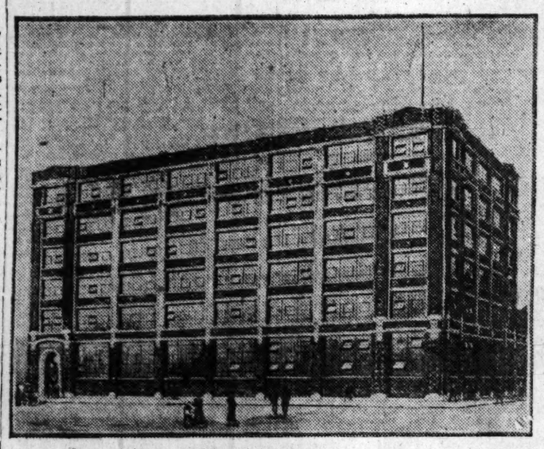
"So we decided to do our own financing and draw on our $500,000 surplus we now have on deposit in banks, on which we get 4 per cent interest. Later on we'll pay for property in bonds issued at par to the seller of land, wherever we can."

"This is indirectly taking a wallop at real estate profiteers," said Joseph Gill, controller of the district. "If we sold our bonds to banks at $85.95, it would be taken advantage of at once by people who own real estate wanted by the district. They'd jump to the conclusion we were in a bad way financially, and they'd raise their prices accordingly.

Will Use Own Funds.

"We've sold our bonds to banks as high as 94. In December of last year the Continental and Commercial took $287,000 at 93.55. Our 4 per cents have too high a standing to let them go at 85.95, so we'll go ahead and use our own money and our bonds in buying real estate through the rest of the year. We may possibly call for bids later in the year."

"We're going right ahead with our 1920 program," said County Commissioner Robert W. McKinlay, who is chairman of the real estate committee of the forest preserve board, "and acquire all the property we set out to do. Some of the most interesting and impressive deals the board has ever made are under way."



Above are two big concrete structures, both designed by Architect Alfred S. Alschuler, which are now actually under way. This is interesting, in view of the many projects which are being sidetracked because of labor and building material conditions.

The top picture shows two units of the Griswold & Walker building. The first section is now being completed, and has been leased to the Sibley Warehouse and Storage company. It is 100x250, seven stories, and extends from Sangamon to Morgan streets between the Northwestern and the B. & O. C. T. railways, near Sixteenth street.

Contracts have just been let for the second unit, to be similar in all respects to the first and to extend from Peoria to Sangamon streets. There are still two additional units for future development, the property for which already has been acquired.

Foundations are being installed for the $500,000 six story building for the Columbian Colortype company at the northwest corner of Twenty-first street and Calumet avenue. The main structure will be 180x120, with a one story extension 20x180. It will be completed about Dec. 1. It is shown in the lower picture.

N. W. U. Campus Deal One of North Side's Largest

Just as soon as the Schools of Law, Medicine, Dentistry and Commerce of Northwestern university, can decide definitely what their needs will be, plans will be drawn for the buildings to go up on the big nine acre city campus at the southwest corner of Lake Shore drive and Chicago avenue, which the university trustees have authorized to be purchased.

This was one of the largest real estate deals on the north side in several years. The university, represented by William A. Dyche, its business manager, authorized the purchase of the Farwell-Fairbank property at a price approximately $1,500,000. The sellers were represented by Frederick M. Bowes of the Bowes Realty Co. Arthur L. Farwell will receive $999,049, and Kellogg Fairbank and Benjamin Carpenter, trustees of the Fairbank estate, will receive $421,211, part cash to be paid and the balance in two years, during which time the campaign for funds to complete the payment for the property and to erect buildings on it will be pushed.

The holding contains thirteen corners, three of which face the outer Lake Shore drive.

Lafayette-Smith Motors Rents in Michigan Ave.

J. Henry Smith, president of the Lafayette-Smith Motors company, has leased from A. L. and A. Z. Halperin, through Cremin & O'Connor, the property at 2542 South Michigan avenue, 60x170, now being improved with a two story building by the owners, for a period of years, at a term rental of $125,000. The building will be used for a salesroom and service station about July 15.

Roseland State Bank Buys Michigan Avenue Building

The Roseland State bank has purchased the two story building at 11433-35 South Michigan avenue, 49x125, at the southeast corner of One Hundred and Fourteenth place, from Alexina Vincent for an indicated $70,000, subject to $20,000. The bank has spent about $105,000 in improvements and recently moved from 11500 South Michigan.

Will Remodel Florist's Shop Into Parish House

The Catholic bishop of Chicago has bought 100x165 feet in Woodlawn avenue, 250 feet south of Sixty-fourth street, west front, from James Bombenger, for an indicated $17,000. The two story frame florist's shop will be remodeled into a parish house for St. Clara's Catholic church, which now has a frontage of 350 feet on Woodlawn avenue.

Old Hi Cost Stops Plans for Palatial Armour Home

Even the millionaire is beginning to think twice about building these days—for instance, Philip D. Armour of Armour & Co., after having had plans drawn up for a palatial fireproof residence at Lake Bluff, has given up all thought of building for the present, according to his secretary.

FOREST AVENUE EVANSTON HOUSE SOLD FOR $45,000

Residence sales continue active in the suburbs. One of the good sized sales was the purchase of the house of William H. Colvin of William H. Colvin & Co., stock brokers, at the southwest corner of Forest avenue and Greenleaf street, Evanston, lot 100x204, by Francis Baldwin, attorney, for an indicated $45,000.

Another suburban deal was the frame residence at 515 Greenleaf avenue, Glencoe, lot 264x250, sold by Samuel Powell to Frederick Penfield for an indicated $29,000. In the same town the brick residence at 854 Bluff street, lot 132x210, was sold by M. E. Peters to John C. Hornung, construction engineer, for an indicated $28,000, subject to $10,000.

In Wilmette the residence of R. L. Morley at 1204 Ashland avenue, has been sold through Hill & Wheeler to A. E. Rich Jr., vice president of the American Foundry Equipment company, for a reported $22,000, with an incumbrance of $15,000. The same brokers have sold C. A. Wheeler's residence at 940 Sheridan road to E. A. Nolan for a reported $25,000, with an incumbrance of $9,000. Another sale by Hill & Wheeler was the residence of Florence Cordo at 72 Essex road, Winnetka, purchased by H. H. Kanouse of Detroit for a reported $25,000, with an incumbrance of $15,000.

St. Louisan Pays $300,000 for Chicago Flat Buildings

A reported $300,000 was paid by John and James Gaffney of St. Louis, Mo., through the George W. Stewart company, for the following Chicago apartment house properties: The nineteen flat building at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Wilton avenue, lot 50x150, purchased from Charles Gerhardt Miller, subject to $37,500; the twenty-one flat building at the southeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and University avenue, lot 100x125, subject to $37,500, bought from Anna Neff; the twenty-one apartment building, lot 125x150, at the southeast corner of Fifty-fifth street and Prairie avenue, from Joseph J. Miller, subject to $45,000. The buyer received three Arkansas rice plantations of 2,400 acres, together with $40,000 worth of personal property.

Electric Appliances Co. Plans Additions to Plant

Two big additions to the $1,500,000 plant of the Edison Electric Appliances Co. ase planned as the result of the purchase of 660x660 in Arthington street, 627 feet east of Menard avenue, north front, for an indicated $183,000, from Jessie S. and Hugh McK. Landon. Plans have been drawn by W. G. Uffendell for a $250,000 two story office building, 277x61, and a $40,000 power house.

The company has a plant which covers about two square blocks, bounded by Central, Taylor and Waller avenues and the B. & O. C. T. R. R. The concern is a combination of the Hot Point company and the Hughes Electric Heating Co. It makes various kinds of electric heating devices. E. H. Williams represented the buyer and H. E. Willard the seller.

Club Refuses $160,000 for Site Which Cost $97,000

Right on the heels of the announcement that the Chicago Women's League club had purchased the Hayes building at 105-9 North Dearborn for $550,000 for its home, comes the statement by the Illinois Women's Athletic club that it has withdrawn its offer of sale of its property in Pearson street, between Rush street and Tower court, and intends to hold it for the site of the club which they plan eventually to build. The site was purchased last year for a reported $97,000, and it is claimed an offer of $160,000 recently has been refused. A twelve story clubhouse is planned, with 300 sleeping rooms for women to be a feature.

Oak Park Residence in Fair Oaks Section Sold, $40,000

One of the most attractive residences in the Fair Oaks section of Oak Park, the twelve room fireproof house designed by George W. Maher for C. R. Erwin, advertising, in Euclid avenue, 200 feet north of Chicago avenue, has been sold by Nennette Curran to Alfred S. Adams, of Adams & Co., wholesale glass, for a reported $40,000. The lot is 200x172. O. C. Braese of Dunlop & Co. and George R. Hemingway were brokers.

MANDEL ESTATE PROPERTY SOLD.

Another piece of property belonging to the Mandel estate has been sold. Charles F. Grey purchased through Willis J. Bayburn & Co. the 100x123 at the southwest corner of Sixty-third street and University avenue, improved with a one-story building, for a reported $140,000 cash.

HANAN & SONS TO HAVE MICHIGAN BOULEVARD SHOP

Hanan & Sons will open their fourth Chicago shoe shop on July 1 at 334 South Michigan avenue, in the 20x95 space in the McCormick building, formerly occupied by the O'Brien art galleries, which have moved across the river to the link district. Lately the Lowden headquarters have been using the store.

An aggregate rental of $237,500 will be paid for the term. What the term is Hanan & Sons rfuse o disclose, so the figures don't have much significance. J. J. Harrington & Co. were brokers.

The lessees will use the basement space in addition to the first floor shop. They now have Chicago stores in the Columbus Memorial building, at 74 East Jackson boulevard and a third at 24 South Dearborn street.

Tuthill Spring Co. Plans $250,000 West Side Plant

A $250,000 one and two story plant, to be double the size of the present one, is planned by the Tuthill Spring company on the 264x599 square feet at the northwest corner of Kilbourn avenue and West Thirty-first street. It will be 400x200 and will not be erected until some time next year. Lowe & Bollenbacher are architects. The site was quitclaimed by Frank H. Tuthill to the company, subject to a $15,000 incumbrance. The concern makes auto springs and is now at 760 Polk street.

Plan 100 Acre Cemetery Just North of Chicago

Chicago is to have another cemetery. The Ridgewood Cemetery company has been formed and has purchased from George Brinkman 100 acres outside the city limits, at the southwest corner of Milwaukee and Central avenues, for an indicated $150,000, subject to $60,000.

DEPARTMENT STORE MAY TAKE PLACE OF LAKE VIEW LANDMARK

One of the landmarks of the Lake View district, the first big building of that section, the four story structure containing thirty flats and four stores, at the southwest corner of Belmont avenue and North Clark street, has been sold by John Borden to Nathan T. Brenner for an indicated $175,000, subject to $75,000. The property fronts 185 feet on Clark, 116 on Belmont, and is 158 and 200 feet on the other two sides. George J. Kappes and William C Regelin were brokers.

Mr. Brenner is planning to wreck the building and erect a large department store.

"It all depends on the tenant I get on how large I build the store," said Mr. Brenner. "I'll build it as high as any one wants. Of course it would cover the entire lot."

Edgewater Beach and Club Buy Land Jointly

In connection with the joint purchase by the Edgewater Beach Hotel company and the Saddle and Cycle club of the vacant land between the hotel and club grounds, fronting 316 feet on Sheridan road and extending back to the lake, the club has given a trust deed to the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings bank for $125,000, five years at 6 per cent, secured by 105 feet of west frontage on Sheridan road, 495 feet north of Foster avenue, extending back to the Lincoln park boundary line, and other property.

The joint hotel and club purchase was from the estate of John K. Stewart and was for a reported $115,000, or at the rate of $333 a front foot.

One of the first steps to be taken will be the extension of Berwyn avenue as a 66 foot thoroughfare through to the lake. This will leave the hotel 125 feet and the club the same amount.

5½% Loan Made on Down Town Corner Property

In these days of high rates for real estate loans, 6 per cent being considered the minimum, even for the choicest security, here's an interesting exception. Edgar M. Snow & Co. have made a loan of $150,000 for five years at 5½ per cent, secured upon the 100x70 feet at the northeast corner of Dearborn and Van Buren streets, extending to Plymouth place, improved with the eighteen story Fisher building.

$50,000 Paid for Madison and Western Ave. Corner

Fifty thousand dollars is the reported price paid for the three story building, lot 24x120, at the southwest corner of Madison and Western. George K. and William H. Ogden sold it through Marks & Co. to Jules J. Rubens.
